Martial law at Newton South? (Just kidding, folks)

Al Haig joins school paper?

NEWTON CENTRE - Martial law at Newton South?

Exploding library books? Alexander Haig as columnist for the school newspaper?

A new grading system with only D's and F's to make things fair?

The normally staid Newton South High newspaper staff, which publishes the paper Denebola, pulled its annual April Fool's Day joke last week when the tabloid Nebulus hit the stands.

As with recent parodies of The New York Times (called Not The New York Times) and a take-off on the Wall Street Journal, the South staff pooled its pundits and wit to poke fun at high school people and traditions.

The lead story, headlined "SRC imposes martial law" detailed the fictional take-over of the school, complete with teachers as hostages.

In the story, machinegun toting members of the Student Representative Council take hostages and storm the main office.

"Six hours later, at the end of the school day, they surrendered, but not before five students had been shot," the parody tabloid claims.

The paper said the takeover was intended "to instill some discipline in the school."

"We felt that if we took action we could rule the school under martial law and keep the halls quiet," the story quotes one SRC spokesman.

The account of the takeover included at least one complaint from a teacher who said, "I found the spattering of the machineguns during classes disturbing, but it stopped the kids from talking."

The fictional stories in the issue of Nebulus, which is done each year on April 1, also brought a little humor to recent incidents involving fights between black and white students, and the resulting comments by Principal Ernest Van Seasholes.

In the story on martial law a droll Seasholes is reported saying, "I realize that their intentions were good, but I feel that there are better ways to approach the situation."

Staffer Howard Morris, who normally writes a front-page column called "Howe's Corner" was replaced by Secretary of State Alexander Haig with "Haig's Corner" in the parody issue.

"Do Communists bother you?" Haig's Corner begins. "Do you find them to be downright annoying? Do you feel that Russia is just the pits? Do you think that Brezhnev has a weight problem?"

Next to "Haig's Corner" appeared a story about the Reverend Jerry Falwell, of Moral Majority fame, and his move to demolish the Washington Monument because of "an implied sexuality" of the structure.

The story claims "The Moral Majority has suggested replacing the 'blatantly sexual' monument with a more utilitarian memorial."

"A Washington National Parking Lot seems to make the most sense at the present time," Falwell is quoted as saying.

MSPCA eyes 2 science projects; teacher defends experimentation

Criminal charges possible

By Richard Lodge
Graphic Editor

NEWTON – A state law to prevent cruelty to animals may spell doom for science fair projects by two high school students and could result in criminal charges against school administrators. However, a Newton North High teacher vows to fight the issue.

North High School science department head Stuart Rist confirmed Monday the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was questioning the legality of science fair projects by Marc Weinfeld of North and Matt Cohen of Newton South High School.

But Rist, secretary of the state organization which oversees public school science teachers, says he wants to see the laws changed and is looking to challenge the MSPCA.

Weinfeld's project, which won first place in the Newton science fair on March 22, concerned whether high frequency sounds emitted by male mice were integral to the mammals' mating process.

"Marc did temporarily devocalize the mice," Rist said in a story in the Newton North High newspaper Newtonite. "But he did so with supervision of university personnel and under prescribed conditions.

"The operation did not require pain, and their vocal ability gradually returned," Rist said.

Cohen's project involved "studying pacemakers and how they affected the heartbeat of a toad," Rist told The Newton Graphic, but Cohen's toad hearts were obtained from a legally-licensed laboratory.

A spokeswoman for the MSPCA said Monday state law prohibits animal experiments in public schools which include "anesthetizing, electric shock or where normal health of (the) animal is interferred with."

The law also prohibits students from exhibiting animals which have undergone experiments, except in a classroom situation.

Walter Kilroy, vice-president of the MSPCA said Monday he was not familiar with Weinfeld's project but referring to Cohen's toad heart exhibit he said, "We have made school administrators aware of our belief that this violates the law." If criminal charges were to be pursued, he said, they would be against teachers and school administrators rather than the students who conducted the projects.

A spokeswoman for the MSPCA who asked that she not be named said Weinfeld's project "is clearly in defiance of the law" since it involved anesthetization of the mice so they could be "devocalized."

Rist adamantly defended both science fair projects, citing extensive supervision in both cases. He said he will present both projects at an April 14 conference in Framingham sponsored by the MSPCA and the Mass. Association of Science Teachers.

"At the conference, we're going to try to use Marc's case as an example of why the law either needs to be changed or rewritten with more exceptions," Rist said.

Rist said both students followed nationally-accepted guidelines set up by the National Biology Teachers' Association.

But the problem, he said, may be that the MSPCA "just doesn't like this idea of high school students being involved in experimentation with animals."

The investigation by the MSPCA threatens to jeopardize Weinfeld's chance of even entering the state science fair - which has a top prize of a $1000 scholarship - later this month at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Rist said.

"He (Weinfeld) may be thrown out," Rist said. "We're hoping they (MSPCA) press charges because I think we can move, I think we can get the supervisors of science teachers behind this" so exceptions to the law may be added.

Rist said he will join science teachers from Newton South in making a case for amending the rules governing animal experimentation by students.

"Marc is highly qualified and he knows what he is doing," Rist said. "It's wrong for the law to discriminate against kids like him."

Referring to Matt Cohen's project on pacemakers and toad hearts, Rist said Cohen's father works at a research lab, where the younger Cohen obtained the hearts. "He didn't dissct the toads," Rist said. "He just showed the effects or pacemakers on the hearts."

Claims reval pact altered

State may investigate

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Charging "deliberately misleading" action by the Mann administration in altering a city contract with the revaluation firm, Alderman Richard McGrath said Monday he will seek an investigation by the state's attorney general.

McGrath cited several alterations between the draft of the contract with Finnegan Associates and the executed copy signed by Mayor Theodore Mann, Harold Brady, former chairman of the Board of Assessors, Lawrence Marino, comptroller of accounts, Assistant City Solicitor Wayne Frigard, and Robert Finnegan, president of Finnegan Associates.

McGrath said he would sent a letter today (Wednesday, April 7) to State Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti requesting his office look into the matter and determine if an "unlawful act" has been made by the administration. McGrath contends the aldermen approved the $660,000 appropriation with the understanding the city would include the "protection" clauses insisted upon by the board.

The alleged alteration comes less than three weeks after city officials admitted that a section of the contract with Chaulk Ambulance mandating monthly financial reports was eliminated in response to an inquire by a reporter from The Newton Graphic.

Both McGrath and Alderman Paul Coletti, chairman of the revaluation sub-committee and co-chairman of the Finance Committee, were more concerned with what they viewed as the greater issue — the alteration by the Mann administration of contract drafts approved by the legislative body.

Board joins in parade fray

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen stepped into the Memorial Day Parade rift and requested that Mayor Theodore Mann meet with members of a Nonantum charitable organization to prevent the parade division.

The formal resolution, which was paired with a $2,000 appropriation request by Veterans' Services Director Carleton Merrill, was unanimously passed by the board Monday night. With the appropriation, the city has $4,000 committed to the parade, $6,000 less than was spent on the observation last year.

Chester Leary, spokesman for the Nonantum Christmas Party Association, said he "would doubt it very much," when asked if the group might alter its stance to hold its own parade.

"You can only cry wolf so many times," noted Leary. "We've done it for three years and each year there have been problems."

The Nonantum Christmas Party Association and the city have jointly held the parade for the past three years. A year ago, each party contributed $5,000 to the ceremonies. However, Mann zero-funded the parade account, and it was only after an intensive lobbying effort by aldermen and the association that the funds were appropriated for last year's ceremony.

This year, the association will hold its parade on May 30 and memorial services following at Newton Cemetery. The city plans to hold a parade on May 31 and follow with an anniversary observation at City Hall.

Alderman Bruce Carmichael, who introduced the resolution, noted there were a lot of innuendos being tossed around in the wake of the split, including " a personality conflict between the associations' chairman (Anthony 'Fat' Pellegrini) and the mayor."

"We've tried to do it," added Leary, who noted that the associations' three-year committment with the city had expired last year. "We're not trying to grandstand. We want it to be for the veteran."

Carmichael said he thought "there were some legitimate reasons

Superintendent hunt narrows

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee emerged from a closed-door session at midnight Monday and, after more than an hour of strained public debate, voted to narrow the field of three superintendent finalists to two.

The committee voted 6-2 in support of a motion eliminating Dr. Troy Earhart, the superintendent of the Foxboro schools, from consideration, leaving Dr. John Strand, superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y., schools, and Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., assistant superintendent of schools in Shaker Heights, Ohio, as the two contenders.

Katherine Jones and Chairperson Nancy Mann voted against the move with Mayor Theodore Mann, an ex-officio member of the committee, voting present.

Prior to going into executive session, there seemed to be no consensus for narrowing the field to two candidates. Under the Open Meeting Law, the School Committee can discuss character, reputation and mental health of candidates in closed session, but professional competence must be discussed in open session.

After some three hours of open session discussion of visits by committee members to the school districts of the three finalists, a motion to go into closed session was made by Susan Silbey around 11 p.m. and was questioned by Marcia Mitchell.

Questions raised about closed door discussion

NEWTON — A former School Committee member has charged that the School Committee took "some votes" to reach finalists for the superintendent's job in executive session last week which were illegal under the Open Meeting Law.

"I think the people in this community were fairly surprised (by the slate of three candidates tapped last Monday night in a 5-3 vote)," Sandra Fleishman, who was the Ward 7 representative to the committee until she declined to run for re-election in November, told the committee Monday night at a meeting at the Education Center.

Prior to the executive session last Monday, Fleishman said the committee had reached "no consensus" and that they had even set a meeting for the following Thursday to take a vote.

Under the Open Meeting Law, the committee voted unanimously to go into the closed session to discuss character, reputation and mental health of semi-finalist candidates. The Open Meeting Law outlaws any voting in executive session and also states that discussion of professional competence of candidates be only in public.

Oh! What snow!

NEWTON - The image of Newton was straight from '78 as a major spring storm dumped up to a foot of wind-blown snow in the area Tuesday.

Police Chief William Quinn declared a snow emergency Tuesday and public school students were let out at lunchtime.

Fire officials said they planned to begin digging out hydrants buried by drifting snow Tuesday afternoon.

A Public Works Department spokesman said early Tuesday crews were re-hooking snow plows which had been taken off city trucks with the advent of the recent spring-like weather.

Newton Police reported an accident on Route 9 which slowed traffic early Tuesday while State Police blocked off the Massachusetts Turnpike, westbound, rerouting autos off onto the West Newton ramp to avoid a pile-up at the Weston toll booths.

The MBTA reported problems at the Woodland Station, slowing commuters who experienced delays trying to get to work.

Officials react to aid distribution formula

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city's legislative delegation Monday was skeptical of the new state aid distribution formula unveiled by Gov. Edward J. King that would place an additional $2.077 million in city coffers in fiscal year 1983.

The King formula, which includes $106 million in new state aid over and above last year's $1.9 billion figure, is one of several plans the King administration and the Legislature are working on to correct inequities in the fiscal 1982 distribution of $265 million in additional state aid.

Under King's proposal, the city of Waltham would receive about $124,000 to soften the blow of Proposition 2½.

"Where they got it from and on what basis I don't know," said State Rep. Susan Schur Monday. "I would not count on having that money if I was the city of Newton."

Schur, as well as fellow Newton Representatives Joseph DeNucci and David Cohen, was not sure as to what the King package meant for Newton.

Under last year's local aid package, Newton received $12.6 million. The figures released Monday by the King administration did not tack on this year's proposed increase, but rather showed how each city and town would receive a piece of the additional state aid pie.

"We are trying to figure out what the whole thing means," said DeNucci. (Mayor Theodoere) Mann is saying we're getting $900,000 less than last year."

According to Budget Director David Wilkinson, the executive department is unclear on whether the $2 million figure is over and above the $2.9 million in additional state aid the city received last year.

Said Cohen: "King's summary sheet says that Newton would be getting $2 million more. However if you take the initial part of how they figured it out, it's difficult to see how they got it."

"I'd be surprised if the King formula works out that good for Newton," said Cohen.

Under King's proposal, no community could receive more than 100-percent of its losses during the first two years of Proposition 2½ or less than 30 percent of its losses. Schur and Cohen both expressed uncertainty as to whether the proposal included automobile excise tax losses.

"Unless you define the term loss, there is no telling how it will apply to Newton and other cities and towns," noted Schur. "I give no credence to these figures at this point."

"There are a lot of questions I have to ask," said DeNucci, who called the state aid figures for both Newton and Waltham "unacceptable."

"If Waltham's figure is legitimate, than Newton could not be getting $2 million," DeNucci said. He applauded King's attempt to help those cities and towns adversely affected by Proposition 2½ but noted that the King formula "punished those cities and towns that were fiscally responsible."

"If Waltham is only getting $124,000, than Newton would not get more than $500,000 in additional aid based on last year's figures," noted DeNucci. In fiscal year 1982, Waltham received $8.9 million in state aid.

Beth Avodah hosts Jewish 'soul' tunes

NEWTON — Soul music, Jewish style, is the program scheduled at Temple Beth Avodah, Newton, following Sabbath services on Friday evening, April 16 at 8:15 p.m. Four members of the Klezmer Conservatory band will perform "Yiddish music with a jazzy beat." Klezmer music is lively, swinging, Jewish soul music with rhythms and melodies from Eastern Europe decades ago.

While Klezmer music began in medieval Europe and became a well-developed musical form by the nineteenth century, it faded in this country with the immigrant Jews' desire to assimilate and appear "american." Today, klezmer revival is in full swing, fueled by a desire to return to one's roots and the inherent appeal of the music.

Hankus Netsky, founder of the band, uses old 78 recordings made by the famous New York and Philadelphia klezmer bands, (of which his grandfather and uncle were participants), and improvisation. What results is a joyful expression of Jewish culture and adds to the universal language of all people–music.

South's staff spoof

Yet another parody of current school topics in the issue of Nebulus notes the math department was instituting changes so only D's and F's would be given to students.

The fictional department head "Warren Peace" is quoted as saying the new grading system would not only eliminate unfairness but would also help in "alleviating the faculty workload at the end of the term."

In response to charges the system might appear discriminatory, "Warren Peace" responded: "On the contrary, with the institution of this policy, biasing factors such as superior ability will be removed from consideration."

In the satirical story on martial law at South High School a teacher complained of noise from machineguns but noted, 'It stopped the kids from talking.'

The issue of Nebulus also cites a move by the school library to cut down on book thefts by alterations of the electronic book detection system at the doorways.

"When someone attempts to smuggle a book out of the library," the story claims, "a 30 second timer will be activated. After the person is safely out of the library, the book will explode..."

Contacted for his reaction to the issue of Nebulus Principal Seasholes said he found it enjoyable.

"I think it's terrific," he told The Newton Graphic. "It's usually very difficult to do a satire. The lead article (about martial law) was good satire at me and I think (the staff) even did a little bit of satire on themselves."

Seasholes said he traditionally "refused" to screen articles prior to publication in the school paper but did note that last year's Nebulus was done in "incredibly bad taste" with several "cruel" articles.

Although the paper is usually sent home to parents to keep them abreast of school happenings, last year's Nebulus didn't make it.

Noting satire sometimes offends some people, Seasholes said this year's issue has been sent home and he would just have to "wait and see" reactions from parents.

Questions raised

Following discussion last Monday in open session of the public interviews with the seven semi-finalists for the position, there seemed to be no consensus leading to a vote for finalists. Mild expressions showing lack of support for one or two candidates were stated in open session by three committee members.

"Since there was no consensus in open session," Fleishman said in an interview, "I just don't believe they went by consensus from seven to three."

"I believe they had to take some votes (in executive session)," she charged.

The committee emerged from the closed session last week after 1 a.m. and a motion was made naming a slate of three finalists for the job. "How did they get there?" Fleishman questioned.

However, a member of the audience of over 40 people attending the meeting, said she was not "particularly surprised at the (three) candidates that emerged."

"I know that I personally do not think there was anything clandestine about the candidates you selected. I feel very confident at the way you arrived at your decision," she added.

School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann, responding to Fleishman's charges, said, "I do not believe that we acted in a secretive manner."

"We were dealing with seven and now with three candidates who are very competent and substantial individuals who have reputations to be considered. I don't believe it is appropriate to share our reasons for not voting for one person or another," Mann said.

"I am not willing to share my opinions. Other members of the School Committee may do as they wish," she said.

No other members of the committee responded to Fleishman's charges.

Following the latest vote tapping two finalists, there was reluctance expressed by committee member Susan Silbey to have reinterviews with candidates in public.

A second opportunity for School Committee members to meet with the finalists was strongly supported by Silbey, Ann Berwick, James Mnookin and Robert Ricles. Chairperson Nancy Mann, however, felt additional questions could be done by telephone by individual committee members.

Committee member Katherine Jones called any reinterviewing "repetitive" and said, "I think this committee has to bite the bullet and move on and do this."

Silbey's motion to bring back Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., and Dr. John Strand, thus eliminating Dr. Troy Earhart, included a second meeting with the School Committee.

When a reporter for The Newton Graphic raised the issue that the second meetings or interviews with the School Committee would have to be in public under the Open Meeting Law, Silbey said, "Then I'd rather not do it."

Silbey ultimately offered a new motion to bring back Clark and Strand next week for public interviews (with time after the interviews for questions from the audience). However, as with the semi-finalists, this process would allow for School Committee interaction with candidates outside of the public forum on tours of schools or when taking candidates out to dinner.

Search narrows to two

"I am not aware of the reason for the executive session," Mitchell said.

"There are things about these people that we are allowed to discuss in private," Silbey responded flatly.

The committee voted 8-1 to go into executive session with Robert Ricles voting in opposition. When asked the reason for his vote, Ricles said, "I see no reason for going into executive session."

The vote to narrow the competition for the spot being vacated by Superintendent Aaron Fink was tied in with support from committee members Ann Berwick, James Mnookin, Robert Ricles and Silbey to bring candidates back for some kind of reinterview. Berwick, Mnookin and Ricles were the three members of the committee who voted against the slate offering the three finalists last Monday night.

Berwick and Silbey both felt reducing the number to be reinterviewed to two would ease scheduling problems and not cause significant delay in reaching a final decision.

In open session at the meeting at the Education Center, the committee voted after heated debate on the number of votes required to ultimately appoint the new superintendent. A 7-2 vote was cast in favor of a vote requiring six votes in support of a candidate. Mayor Mann and Mitchell were opposed.

Mayor Mann insistence upon requiring only five votes to appoint a superintendent seemed to expose deep division among committee members on the finalists.

Fearful that three members of the committee could "deadlock" the vote, he urged the committee to use five votes as its measure. "You're down to three people right now and given what I've heard, you're not going to make a mistake here. These are well-qualified people."

Leonard Gentile pressed the mayor on whether he would vote to appoint the superintendent.

"If I don't feel comfortable, I would abstain," Mann said.

Mayor Mann did not vote on the three finalists and attended only one interview, although his budget director, David Wilkinson, attended all other semi-finalist interviews. Mann said he has contacted two candidates by telephone.

Mnookin said the "ideal" vote would be a consensus giving strong support to the new superintendent. Berwick sounded a warning that "we're kidding ourselves if we think that we can bring anybody here with a 5-4 vote."

"A really divided vote," Berwick said, "would be a huge mistake."

Nancy Mann said abstentions "at this point are not right," which Vice-chairman Ricles quickly ruled "out of order, Nancy."

"Each person has the right to abstain," he stressed.

"I still feel that a five-person vote is the one we should use. It gives you a better chance to appoint," Mayor Mann re-emphasized.

Later during the meeting, Mann appeared frustrated and pressed the committee to reach decisions that night. "You can knock this all over the world," he said.

The owner of Clark and White Motors, 773 Washington St., told police that Giampapa, who was driving a 1978 Chevrolet Corvette, also damaged five of his cars, police stated.

Newton man nabbed

NONANTUM — A Newton resident was arrested and charged Saturday night with drunk driving and leaving the scene of an accident after property damage.

Douglas Bartley, 18, of 33 Alden Place, was arrested after witnesses said he allegedly struck a parked 1976 Plymouth wagon at Adams and Watertown Streets. Bartley, who was driving a 1969 Chevrolet Coupe, was arrested by Newton Police at Pearl and Watertown Streets.

Driving charges leveled

LOWER FALLS — A Needham man was charged with drunk driving and several motor vehicle violations following an accident at the Route 128 onramp and Quinnobequinn Road.

According to police, Mark S. Gustowski, 29, of 126 Melrose Ave., was arrested at 12:54 a.m. Sunday after he turned left onto the ramp and was struck in the rear by a cruiser operated by Jerome Mullins, 34, of 1242 Great Plain Ave., Needham. Police reproted that Gustowski was trying to avoid the cruiser. Gustowski was also charged with driving to endanger and failure to stop for police officers.

Health club charge

Trial for Patricia A. Frost (right) of Chelmsford, charged with soliciting for prostitution at Newton Health Club last week, was postponed at Newton District Court Tuesday due to snow. With her is Police Matron Amelia Pignatelli. Frost was released on personal recognizance last week following the arrest and had been scheduled to appear with her lawyer in court Tuesday morning. Her case was continued until May 10. Case of Health Club owner Robert MacIntosh, charged with keeping a house of prostitution, was also continued until May 14.

Pair nabbed on break charges

NEWTON — Two Boston men faced arraignment Friday afternoon following their arrests inside a Commonwealth Avenue apartment they allegedly broke into, police said.

Gary Ryans, 22, of 329 Columbia Rd., Boston and James C. Greene of 7 Clarkwood St., Boston, were charged with breaking and entering in the day into the apartment about 2 p.m. Friday.

Police received a report that two men were seen breaking into the apartment and a nearby patrol car went to the scene.

A police officer confronted the two suspects on the stairway and arrested them on an upper floor after the suspects fled there. Police seized a knife found on one of the suspects during a body search.

The suspects told police they were there to meet a third man but when police checked the name the suspects had given them, they were told nobody by that name lived there.

Diamond ring worth $3,000 stolen from employee

NEWTON — Police received a report about 10 a.m. Saturday that a $3000 diamond ring had been stolen from an employee of St. John's Church and Gift Shop at 279 Lowell Ave.

The owner of the 1½-karat ring with three diamonds told police she had removed the ring before showing some merchandise to a customer last Tuesday and that when she returned to get it from the counter where she left it, the ring was gone.

The woman said she did not report the theft before Saturday because she hoped the ring would be returned.

Punishment to fit

Last week State Rep. David Cohen (D-Newton) spoke in support of a bill he filed which would make ethnically, religiously or racially motivated "intimidation or vandalism" a crime.

As Cohen said, the House of Representatives bill seeks to "combat the widespread racially and religiously-motivated crimes that have been increasing at an alarming rate."

Cohen cited several well-publicized incidents of late including the brutal beating and death of a black man in Savin Hill and the burning of Temple B'nai Jacob in Milton.

Such incidents are disgusting and certainly must be stopped. Racial or religious persecution was be erased and those who commit such acts should be punished.

Yet we question whether additional - and specific - legislation is necessary.

Cohen says the bill "provides stiff penalties for those who have been convicted of racially or religiously-motivated crimes".

Surely in this age judges, prosecutors and police can identify most crimes where racial or religious persecution is at the root. And in most cases they would apply the maximum penalties to fit the seriousness of the crimes.

Cohen's intentions are certainly honorable and indicate he is willing to act to stop such crimes.

But the question must be asked. Does our system of penalties for crimes not contain a wide range of punishments for a wide range of crimes?

Is it worth adding yet another law, making specific punishments for specific crimes, when laws already exist to deal with such situations?

Perhaps the solution is not adding another law. The solution may be in educating those who deal out justice to make sure they know when certain crimes warrant the most punishment the system can impose.

Kudos on a new name

There was never a real identity crisis for the good people at the Jackson Homestead but if the public had any doubts that should be cleared up now.

Last week Friends of the Jackson Homestead President Colin Diver announced that the state had approved a petition to change the Friends' name to "The Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead."

Although, as Diver noted, the Friends have always been the city's historical society, the approval by the state makes it official.

"It is the society's goal," said Diver, "to preserve our rich heritage in Newton and to nurture this desire in young and old alike."

A more honorable cause one cannot find.

Graphically speaking

On typos, diamonds and Corita

33 years, then marriage

Louis Pellegrini, 57, and Helen Chamian, 51, fell in love more than 33 years ago. Last Saturday, they were married.

It's not every day that the city's top official, Mayor Theodore Mann, and others such as Newton District Court Judge Monte Basbas and Representative Joseph DeNucci, along with almost 500 guests attend a wedding.

"This was unusual," says Chamian, now Mrs. Louis Pellegrini.

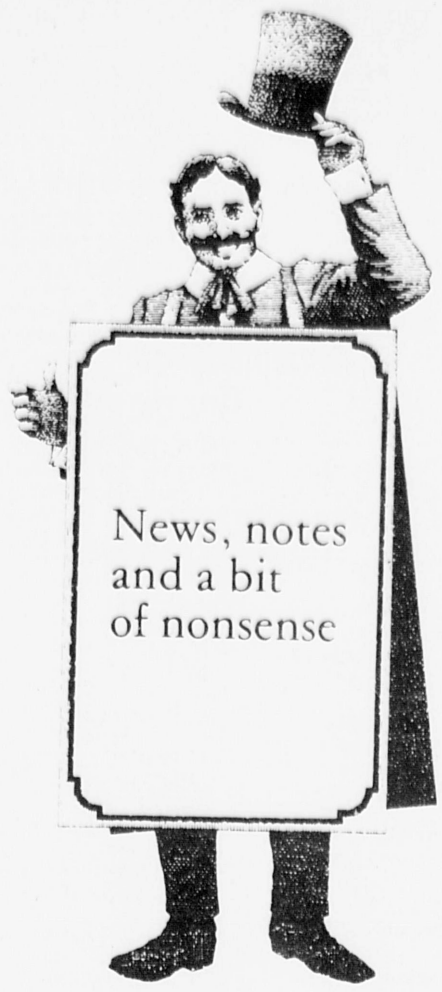
Helen is a Waltham resident and owner of "Bus Stop Coiffures," of Watertown. She and Louis fell in love when they met years ago at a Watertown Street diner. As the years rolled on, the pair separated and married others. This was a second marriage for both Helen and Louis, a Newton grates operator (that's the fellow who smooths out fresh sidewalk cement).

"We wanted to make it legal," said Helen. The couple were married at Newton City Hall. Following the ceremony, 250 feasted on a five-course, Italian-American meal at the American Legion Post 440 on California Street. About 200 other guests attending another wedding reception in the Post 440, were invited to the Pellegrini's celebration after the meal.

Dressed in a two-piece white suit, a silk rose blouse and white, wide-brim hat, the bride smiled for a numerous photographers as the newlyweds danced to their chosen wedding song, "Little Things Mean A Lot." Helen, who displayed a 3/4 karat diamond mounted on an ornate gold band, said the couple would take their "secret" honeymoon in two weeks.

The groom's brother, Anthony "Fats" Pelligrini" was in attendance, along with many Newton residents. The couple's best man and matron of honor were John and Patricia Forte of Newton, who the Pellegrinis stood up for 26 years ago at their wedding.

Helen said she invited Mayor Mann, "Because he's so good to the people of Newton." She added, "I'm just very happy."



Realty on the airwaves

The Century 21 Abramowitz and Jauregui Realty in Newton Highlands will be going over the airwaves this Friday at 5:30 p.m.

The folks at Century 21 will take part in a series on real estate on the local Cablevision channel 03.

Isn't that in Connecticut?

Speaking of the good Congressman Frank we note something of a typo in his letterhead sometimes used for press releases.

For his Mass. offices Cong. Frank lists Fitchburg, West Newton and FARMINGHAM. That's right. As in "down on the Farmingham..."

Barney had some troubles during the last election when a certain Framingham (or is that Farmingham) area newspaper editor took quite a few printed jabs at him, making no secret of that newspaper's support for Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark.

Barney won and for that we are thankful.

Perhaps the typo - for good old Farmingham - is a subliminal slip (slap).

Birthday kudos to Barney

Barney Frank celebrated his 42nd birthday Sunday at Sidney Hill Country Club with a variety of notables in attendance.

The event was something of a fund-raiser for the fourth district congressman who is pitted against Congresswoman Margaret Heckler following a recent redistricting move on Beacon Hill.

So, in honor of 42 years on the good earth, the tickets were $42 and $84 respectively.

That's either a dollar for each of Barney's years or, for sponsors, two bucks a year.

In light of the $1000 fundraising fetes we hear about down in the Capitol Barney's affair was a bargain.

But what happens when he turns 80?

Pssst. Want to buy an oil tank?

On Monday, April 12 Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor Lois Pines of Newton is hosting a fund-raiser at the Old Cambridge Company, about a block from Lechmere Sales.

The event will feature a Pines backer, artist Corita Kent, famous for her splashes of color draped over the gas tank on the Southeast Expressway. Kent has created a limited edition print to raise funds for Lois and that print will be on display at the get together.

If you want to attend (at $25 each) call 527-6450.

Running just runs in the family

Seems that Scott Harshbarger, candidate for Middlesex County district attorney, isn't the only one in his family who likes to run.

Scott's wife, Betsy, placed first in the women's division of the second annual "Rite of Spring" 10K road race sponsored recently by the Newton South High music department.

Betsy is a member of the Irish-American Running Club of Malden and was one of 170 runners entered in the race.

Now if her husband gets a good start...

Play it again, James Schwartz

A proud piano instructor Sylvia Chambless of West Newton told us last week about her student, James Schwartz of Waban and his recent honors in Boston.

James, son of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Schwartz, won a series of piano recitals this spring and then was honored by being asked to play at the First and Second Church on Marlborough Street in Boston.

Quite an honor.

Marking time

The envelope, please; award time

By Mark White

While watching the Oscars last week I was inspired. So this week I am proud to present the first (and probably the last) annual "Chutzpah" awards for the best performances of the year by the local politicians

(For those of you unfamiliar with the word "Chutzpah," "Chutzpah" is killing your parents and then pleading for mercy on the basis that you are an orphan).

So now we get on with the awards. This year for Best Theme Song - The nominees were: A. "Endless Love" - The poignant song about the warm relationship between Mayor Theodore Mann and Alderman Dick McGrath.

B. "Gonna Build a Mountain" - The story of the defeat of the Druker project.

C. "For your Eyes Only" - (Or in this case "Our Eyes Only") - The lyrical tale about the refusal to disclose the list of candidates for the job of school superintendent.

D. "Enough is Enough" - The story of the continuing lonely fight by Alderman Lisle Baker to wear down the entire Massachusetts Legislature into passing a Newton Home Rule Amendment to Proposition 2½.

E. "Touch Me in the Morning" - (Or whenever you have the cash) - The story of Alderman Bruce Carmichael's attempts to regulate massage parlors.

THE WINNER IS: "SEND IN THE CLOWNS" - The story of the Newton Revaluation Project.

And now The Chutzpah Award for the Most Chutzpah - Nominees this year are:

A. "Mayor Ted Mann" - for claiming during the election that only 33 percent of the property owners would get increased taxes (The actual figure is 75 percent!)

> Nominated for Best Theme Song - 'Touch Me in the Morning' (or whenever you have the cash): Alderman Bruce Carmichael's attempts to regulate massage parlors.

B. Alderman Joe DePasquale - - Prior to the vote on an ordinance banning the handing out of free samples of cigarettes, Alderman DePasquale handed out his own samples to each alderman. True Chutzpah!

C. Alderman Ethel Sheehan - When faced with 1500 angry, shouting taxpayers at the public hearing on revaluation Alderman Sheehan stated "I came here to listen to reasonable people. I'll hear those people tonight and the rest of you can leave."

THE WINNER IS: Alderman Robert Tennant - When confronted about the recent revaluation controversy Alderman Tennant stated: "All I hear about in the press are the bad things about revaluation. There are a lot of happy people out there." (Alderman, in the face of 75 percent tax increases you have shown great Chutzpah).

And now, awards for the BEST PERFORMANCE - The losing nominees were:

A. Bruce Marquis - for his role in "A Star is Born." Marquis came out of nowhere to come in second in the preliminary by defeating yours truly. Begrudingly, he deserves mention!

B. Former Alderman John Steward - for his role in "Johnny, We Hardly Knew Ye." The story of how the citizens of Newton voted Alderman Stewart, the best Alderman I ever served with out of office after only one term.

C. Mayor Ted Mann - for his role in "The Last Hurrah" (Or is it the "Next to the Last Hurrah"). The man's staying power boggles the mind!

THE WINNERS ARE: John Greenspan and Steve Burke (News-Tribune and Graphic Reporters) - for their role in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest." The story of a reporter's attempt to cover City Hall.

Now, awards for the BEST PERFORMANCE BY AN ACTOR IN A SUPPORTING ROLE: THE WINNER IS: Mark White for his support of the mayor in the last election (See, nobody is immune from this column!).

With the RISING STAR AWARD: THE WINNER IS: Alderman Verne Vance, fast becoming one of the most respected as well as one of the most entertaining members of the Board.

RUNNER UP: Josh Davis. At the age of 15 he has more political savvy than most politicians. At the age of 18 he will have the best political organization in the city.

And now, for the TAKE THIS JOB AND SHOVE IT AWARD - No contest. The assessors win hands down. Regardless of your feelings about revaluation, you have to admit that Bob Palmer, Liz Champagne and Hank Brady deserve some kind of medal for surviving the past few weeks.

Congratulations to all the winners and to those of you who failed to be mentioned...Consider yourself lucky.

(Mark White is a practicing attorney and a former member of the Newton Board of Aldermen)

In my opinion

Heritage 'guarantees' our freedom

By Jason H. Korell

Our Jewish friends will celebrate their Passover as Christians everywhere observe their Easter, once again during the same week in April this year.

This is another golden opportunity to express their oneness in the religious and ethical sense as both join in commemorating the exodus of the Hebrew slaves from the land of Egypt more than 5,000 years ago. It was the Passover Seder which Jesus celebrated as his Last Supper.

Both religious observances speak loudly of the freedom of mankind and the tremendous desire of the Judaeo-Christian ethic to achieve human rights for all and to establish the dignity of mankind everywhere.

Let us extend this season of good will to encompass a united front against racial violence as well. In fact, there should be a joint attack on all violence, so that during this Passover-Easter season we can make a beginning toward the freedom of every person to walk the streets of Boston and America without fear of being attacked, either by vandals or racial terrorists.

We cannot condone the apparent racial attack and murder of a black person in the Savin Hill MBTA station last week, but we can commend the more than 450 persons - - black and white - - who joined together in a march in the rain over the past weekend to condemn the incident. They later joined in common prayer that such violence should end.

While we hold with the Civil Liberties Union that First Amendment rights allow public gatherings, regardless of race, religion, national origin or political persuasion, we strongly urge some sort of interpretation which permit authorities to halt gatherings called solely for the purpose of enflaming racial, religious or ethnic violence, such as the recent series of Ku Klux Klan rallies in Meriden, Connecticut, and the threat by Neo-Nazis to parade in a heavily Jewish-populated suburb oChicago.

When a black American has to fear for his life whileing through Dorchester or South Boston, or a white person fears to travel through Mattapan or Roxbury, no one can truly be free.

It is 250 years since George Washington proclaimed the brotherhood of all Americans and made it clear that this new nation should be based on a comradeship between all Americans.

The celebration of Washington's birth has been an annual occasion for brotherhood meetings and ecumenical services, but it is a mockery of their meaning and of his purpose to mouth pious words and not accony them with meaningful deeds to accomplish true brotherhood.

The burning of a Jewish Temple in Milton, of scrawling a swastika on the house of a Jewish American, or the burning of a cross on the lawn of a black American is no less a violation of the true brotherhood all real Americans seek, than the wanton attack on a black American in Dorchester or a white American in Roxbury.

With freedom goes responsibility - - hand in hand. This refers to the wanton destruction of someone else's property as well as attacks on their person. It was Moses who lef the Children of Israel out of the desert of Sinai and sent scouts into the land of Israel and coined the phrase, "Go thou forth and proclaim liberty throughout the land, to all the inhabitants thereof," and Jesus who said "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

What better time is there than the Passover-Easter season to renew these pledges made by the great prophets of Judaism and Christianity and echoed by Martin Luther King and Mahatma Ghandi?

Reps appeal for help for neglected children

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to the residents of Newton)

There are teenaged children in our community who need your help. These are young people, who, for reasons of abuse, neglect, family emergencies or difficult adjustment, are temporarily unable to reamin in their own homes.

Too often these adolescents are placed in group homes or foster homes in distant parts of the commonwealth. Not only does this deny them access to their school, friends and community, but it makes the goal of reuniting the young person with his or her virtually impossible.

A new program - OPTIONS - is being developed by the Department of Social Services serving our area.

The program has as its goal the placement of these teenagers close to home, while providing them with services necessary to reunite them with their families. Keeping appropriate families intact is a central part of the madate of DSS. It is therefore essential to set up a system for adolescents which complements this effort.

OPTIONS is seeking to recruit families, single adults, working people, people at home, gradaute students or senior citizens. If you are a caring person who can relate to young people and are willing to share your home with an adolescenet in need, please consider participation in this program. The Department of Social Services will provide training, supervision and a monthly financial stipend.

If you are interested in knowing more about the program and how you can help, please call Options' Resource Coordinator Joan Kunitz at 277-1040.

'Political move' in reval seen by this taxpayer

To the editor;

Many questions about Newton's revaluation program are answered only in double talk. A trip to City Hall verified this first hand when an appointment was followed through recently. What was told about the old house in question was an unbelievable approach to the fair market value of Newton homes. It is obvious that the practical side has been wavered for a political move to outwit Proposition 2½. Now the citizens must protect their property from unreasonable valuations.

For years cities and towns have protected thousands of tenants from high rents but now this is the landlord's position. If the city planners get their way rents will increase considerable per month. What makes this more devastating to the tenant is the city's policy to use the new evaluation tax figures retroactive to July 1, 1981. This means the tenants could very well suffer a larger than normal rent increase to make up their share of taxes the landlord will pay retroactive.

A letter from the Board of Assessors stated that the equalization program would go into effect the fiscal year ending June 30, 1983 but later was changed to a retroactive status giving the landlord little chance to adjust. Other fees the city is planning (such as a sewerage charge) will also contribute to the major increase in rents.

The tenants will serve a cause for their own good to join in the effort against the unfair and careless evaluation of Newton homes.

Confidence and trust in the Finnegan Associates have been lost so it would seem there is no recourse now but to hire a new firm with no political aims or commitments to anyone.

'Quacks' in the Big House

To the editor;

Since Finnegan Associates began their revaluation process in the City Hall it has been reliably reported that the flocks of ducks in the lagoon who keep a constant vigil on the tax fortress have been doing an extraordinary amount of quacking all day long.

A prominent Newton ornithologist is firmly convinced that these feathrered vigilantes are suspcious of these new strange ducks now in the Big House and are upset by the quacks they hear through the open windows now that spring is here.

Senior swim praise

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to recreation Commissioner Russell Halloran)

If an award were given this year for public service I would vote for the establihsment of the Senior Swim Program at Newon Newton High under the creative direction of Judy Dore and the support of a dedicated, loving staff.

I think if there had been any question whether there is a need for such a proqram, 30 to 35 seniors arriving over icy streets in bitter weather in this winter of 1981-82 is as positive a statement as anyone can make. I remember reading a few years ago about a similar program in California and feeling "deprived." When your program was announced I was delighted and proud. I hopefully predict it will be extended to at least twice a week.

Library, volunteers gear up for big week ahead

Library Week April 18-24

NEWTON CORNER - When the Newton Free Library opened more than 100 years ago the shelves included the latest histories of the Civil War and copies of "Leslie's Illustrated News."

As National Library Week from April 18-24 approaches the library's 11 branches boast more than 350,000 volumes on the shelves, 100-plus volunteers, and a time-saving computer system to locate and catalog books.

Library Week, which is coupled with National Volunteer Week, will include a book sale, poetry festival and a wide variety of entertainment to show, as library staffers say, that the library is a lot more than just books.

Nancy Shumway, who has worked in the public relations department of the main library for the past two years, said she decided to get involved as a library volunteer because of her long-standing love of the local library.

"I'm crazy about libraries," she said last week. "I'm crazy about books. Wherever I go I gravitate toward libraries."

Elinor Persky, head of public relations for the library, said that besides encouraging residents to become involved in the library and its programs, the library staff tries to tailor programs, films, and in the case of Italian-language films and lectures at the Nonantum branch - even the language to meet the needs of Garden City residents.

And, like Shumway, she says the library tries to "raise" children with a familiarity of the library's offerings.

"The library was one of the first places I was allowed to walk when I was little," she recalled. "I could go there just like a grown up."

With poetry readings and book reviews on the monthly calendar of library events, Persky said the different branches try to keep current with cultural offerings.

The different branches offer exhibits of photographs, paintings and sculpture by area artists, which prompted one occasional visitor to make it a regular stop.

One MBTA bus driver used to have a five or ten minute layover outside the Newton Corner branch, Persky said, and he made a habit of coming in to view the art exhibits and listen to records.

"Boy I never saw this kind of art in a library," Persky recalled him saying at one point.

Although the cultural offerings and variety of publications - upwards of 500 different magazines stocked on the shelves - keep the libraries interesting, most staffers attribute much of the day-to-day workings to the 100 or more volunteers.

Volunteers work in all branches, stocking shelves, mending books, reading onto tapes for the blind and even punching information into the library's new computer.

"Volunteers are used in all the branches," Elinor Persky said last week. "They've really helped keep some of the branch libraries open, when there have been budget cuts.

"I think we would have had to close some branches for more hours without the volunteers."

Keeping the branches open as much as possible is obviously, a constant concern for staff and volunteers.

"We have to connect with people of all ages," Persky said. "We want to let them know this is a service that belongs to them.

And with a laugh she adds, "We never stop telling people what's here at the library."

The computer system in the main branch building is expected to help tell people even more in the future about the library's offerings.

Hard at work

Nancy Shumway, a library volunteer, and Elinor Persky, head of public relations for the Newton Free Library, ready a mailing of a calendar of events for library week.

Computing

Andrea Shirley, supervisor of technical services at the library, and Circulation Supervisor Catherine Garoian work on a computer terminal in the main branch.

At present it is used to keep track of which books are on the shelves and which are checked out, when books are due to be returned, how many copies exist in the Newton system and which branches contain them.

For those who tend to forget that their books are overdue, the computer has even been integrated into a system which automatically sends out reminders for overdue books.

In spite of the incorporation of the basement computer system, Persky said staffers vow to keep the ever-present personal touch in local libraries.

"People are so concerned that with the rise in technology there will be a loss of service and a loss of the personal aspect," she said. "We're going to make sure that doesn't happen."

Split brings two parades on city's Memorial Day schedule

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A Memorial Day Parade Committee meeting which brought city officials and members of a Nonantum charitable organization together Thursday failed to reconcile the differences between the two parties.

The Nonantum Christmas Party Asociation, which has jointly held the parade with the city for four years, will hold a separate parade on May 30 and memorial services at Newton Cemetery. The city will hold its parade on May 31.

Chester Leary, a spokesman for the association, said the decision to have their own parade was made after last year's observance when he charged that the mayor "grandstanded" the ceremony.

"As soon as the parade was over last year, we said that was it," said Leary. He said the association had an agreement with city officials a year ago that there be only one stop along the parade route. Instead, "about every band and group went around the rotary (at City Hall) and saluted the mayor," said Leary.

The association was also annoyed with the city's decision to alter the parade route so that it started at the corner of Crafts and Washington Streets in Newtonville. Last year, the parade began at Kings Department Store in Nonantum and ended at City Hall.

"We don't need your help that given day because we're going to do the right thing," said Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini, chairman of the Nonantum Christmas Association. "I'm not going to be part of a fiasco."

Last year, the association and the city shared the $10,000 cost of the ceremony. Without the association's contribution, the city will try to conduct the Memorial Day observance on $4,000 with $2,000 going toward flags for the graves of the deceased war veterans.

Carleton Merrill, director of veteran's services for the city, said he hoped to solicit an additional $1,000 to $1,500 for the parade. A year ago, the city collected $1,600 through contributions.

"Our desire is to work with all groups," emphasized Merrill. "Whatever the reasons are that the Nonantum Christmas Association does not want to participate, I hope the other organizations would help us organize something."

According to the 1980 city census, there are 12,000 veterans in Newton.

Merrill acknowledged that there have been problems with delays on the parade route in the past. "I don't like it. It's not my choice," said Merrill of the association's decision. "It is obvious to me that some people here don't like the mayor."

"We're going to have a parade," said Pellegrini. "You people drove us out — the political aspect of it."

"There is no feud," Pellegrini said. "We just don't want to be any part of it. The mayor is too politcal."

Merrill said at least three marching bands have committed themselves to the city-run parade and he expects to have a total of five bands.

Rep. David Cohen supporting automobile insurance reform

NEWTON — State Representative David B. Cohen (D-Newton) testified last week in support of a measure he sponsored to reform the Massachusetts automobile insurance regulatory system.

"This legislation is designed to correct the flaws in the current insurance system while ensuring that consumer's rights will be protected," Rep. Cohen stated before the Legislature's Joint Committee on Insurance.

Cohen continued, "This bill will do away with the single greatest abuse of the present system: good drivers are unfairly forced to subsidize bad ones. The Insurance Commissioner will be required, under my bill, to set a good-driver rate for the vast majority of motorists who are not repeatedly involved in auto accidents and who do not commit moving violations, and a second rate for drivers with 'dirty' records. This is as it should be – drivers should pay for the losses they generate."

"This bill also modifies the so-called mandatory offer by refusing optional coverages to those who attempt to defraud the insurance system. This will protect honest consumers from paying for those who cheat on insurance claims," Cohen stated.

The bill attempts to solve the very problems so often cited by the insurance industry, Cohen concluded. "But we should do so with the honest insurance consumer foremost in our minds. This bill I think represents a giant step forward in this regard."

Library, volunteers gear up for big week ahead

Library Week April 18-24

NEWTON CORNER - When the Newton Free Library opened more than 100 years ago the shelves included the latest histories of the Civil War and copies of "Leslie's Illustrated News."

As National Library Week from April 18-24 approaches the library's 11 branches boast more than 350,000 volumes on the shelves, 100-plus volunteers, and a time-saving computer system to locate and catalog books.

Library Week, which is coupled with National Volunteer Week, will include a book sale, poetry festival and a wide variety of entertainment to show, as library staffers say, that the library is a lot more than just books.

Nancy Shumway, who has worked in the public relations department of the main library for the past two years, said she decided to get involved as a library volunteer because of her long-standing love of the local library.

"I'm crazy about libraries," she said last week. "I'm crazy about books. Wherever I go I gravitate toward libraries."

Elinor Persky, head of public relations for the library, said that besides encouraging residents to become involved in the library and its programs, the library staff tries to tailor programs, films, and in the case of Italian-language films and lectures at the Nonantum branch - even the language to meet the needs of Garden City residents.

And, like Shumway, she says the library tries to "raise" children with a familiarity of the library's offerings.

"The library was one of the first places I was allowed to walk when I was little," she recalled. "I could go there just like a grown up."

With poetry readings and book reviews on the monthly calendar of library events, Persky said the different branches try to keep current with cultural offerings.

The different branches offer exhibits of photographs, paintings and sculpture by area artists, which prompted one occasional visitor to make it a regular stop.

One MBTA bus driver used to have a five or ten minute layover outside the Newton Corner branch, Persky said, and he made a habit of coming in to view the art exhibits and listen to records.

"Boy I never saw this kind of art in a library," Persky recalled him saying at one point.

Although the cultural offerings and variety of publications - upwards of 500 different magazines stocked on the shelves - keep the libraries interesting, most staffers attribute much of the day-to-day workings to the 100 or more volunteers.

Volunteers work in all branches, stocking shelves, mending books, reading onto tapes for the blind and even punching information into the library's new computer.

Hard at work

Nancy Shumway, a library volunteer, and Elinor Persky, head of public relations for the Newton Free Library, ready a mailing of a calendar of events for library week.

Computing

Andrea Shirley, supervisor of technical services at the library, and Circulation Supervisor Catherine Garoian work on a computer terminal in the main branch.

"Volunteers are used in all the branches," Elinor Persky said last week. "They've really helped keep some of the branch libraries open, when there have been budget cuts.

"I think we would have had to close some branches for more hours without the volunteers."

Keeping the branches open as much as possible is obviously, a constant concern for staff and volunteers.

"We have to connect with people of all ages," Persky said. "We want to let them know this is a service that belongs to them.

And with a laugh she adds, "We never stop telling people what's here at the library."

The computer system in the main branch building is expected to help tell people even more in the future about the library's offerings.

At present it is used to keep track of which books are on the shelves and which are checked out, when books are due to be returned, how many copies exist in the Newton system and which branches contain them.

For those who tend to forget that their books are overdue, the computer has even been integrated into a system which automatically sends out reminders for overdue books.

In spite of the incorporation of the basement computer system, Persky said staffers vow to keep the ever-present personal touch in local libraries.

"People are so concerned that with the rise in technology there will be a loss of service and a loss of the personal aspect," she said. "We're going to make sure that doesn't happen."

Split brings two parades on city's Memorial Day schedule

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A Memorial Day Parade Committee meeting which brought city officials and members of a Nonantum charitable organization together Thursday failed to reconcile the differences between the two parties.

The Nonantum Christmas Party Asociation, which has jointly held the parade with the city for four years, will hold a separate parade on May 30 and memorial services at Newton Cemetery. The city will hold its parade on May 31.

Chester Leary, a spokesman for the association, said the decision to have their own parade was made after last year's observance when he charged that the mayor "grandstanded" the ceremony.

"As soon as the parade was over last year, we said that was it," said Leary. He said the association had an agreement with city officials a year ago that there be only one stop along the parade route. Instead, "about every band and group went around the rotary (at City Hall) and saluted the mayor," said Leary.

The association was also annoyed with the city's decision to alter the parade route so that it started at the corner of Crafts and Washington Streets in Newtonville. Last year, the parade began at Kings Department Store in Nonantum and ended at City Hall.

"We don't need your help that given day because we're going to do the right thing," said Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini, chairman of the Nonantum Christmas Association. "I'm not going to be part of a fiasco."

Last year, the association and the city shared the $10,000 cost of the ceremony. Without the association's contribution, the city will try to conduct the Memorial Day observance on $4,000 with $2,000 going toward flags for the graves of the deceased war veterans.

Carleton Merrill, director of veteran's services for the city, said he hoped to solicit an additional $1,000 to $1,500 for the parade. A year ago, the city collected $1,600 through contributions.

"Our desire is to work with all groups," emphasized Merrill. "Whatever the reasons are that the Nonantum Christmas Association does not want to participate, I hope the other organizations would help us organize something."

According to the 1980 city census, there are 12,000 veterans in Newton.

Merrill acknowledged that there have been problems with delays on the parade route in the past. "I don't like it. It's not my choice," said Merrill of the association's decision. "It is obvious to me that some people here don't like the mayor."

"We're going to have a parade," said Pellegrini. "You people drove us out — the political aspect of it."

"There is no feud," Pellegrini said. "We just don't want to be any part of it. The mayor is too politcal."

Merrill said at least three marching bands have committed themselves to the city-run parade and he expects to have a total of five bands.

Rep. David Cohen supporting automobile insurance reform

NEWTON — State Representative David B. Cohen (D-Newton) testified last week in support of a measure he sponsored to reform the Massachusetts automobile insurance regulatory system.

"This legislation is designed to correct the flaws in the current insurance system while ensuring that consumer's rights will be protected," Rep. Cohen stated before the Legislature's Joint Committee on Insurance.

Cohen continued, "This bill will do away with the single greatest abuse of the present system: good drivers are unfairly forced to subsidize bad ones. The Insurance Commissioner will be required, under my bill, to set a good-driver rate for the vast majority of motorists who are not repeatedly involved in auto accidents and who do not commit moving violations, and a second rate for drivers with 'dirty' records. This is as it should be – drivers should pay for the losses they generate."

"This bill also modifies the so-called mandatory offer by refusing optional coverages to those who attempt to defraud the insurance system. This will protect honest consumers from paying for those who cheat on insurance claims," Cohen stated.

The bill attempts to solve the very problems so often cited by the insurance industry, Cohen concluded. "But we should do so with the honest insurance consumer foremost in our minds. This bill I think represents a giant step forward in this regard."

Groups spearhead move against teenage drinking

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Several Newton organizations are spearheading an effort to bring the problem of teenage drinkinq to the community's attention.

According to William Sidman, chairman of the Newton Youth Commission, "We're having a difficult time trying to impress this problem on the parents. We have to get the parents a little excited about this."

"It's their kids; it's our kids," Sidman emphasizes.

In some cases, Sidman says kids "come to the schools and it's obvious they've been drinking." Sidman says the students are frequently sent to the principal's office and their parents are contacted.

Sometimes, Sidman says incredulously, "Parents are mad at the schools for even calling them about it."

Recently, the members of the Youth Commission and the Human Rights Commission met with Superintendent of Schools, Aaron Fink, to discuss the issue of teenage drinking. The next meeting of the Youth Commission on April 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Human Services office of City Hall will also focus on the issue.

"We can hopefully wake up the community to this problem," Sidman stresses.

Fink agrees that alcohol usage among teenag.ers is "a real problem" which in some ways is "even more insidious" than other drugs.

"So many parents say, 'Well, thank God it's not drugs,'" Fink says of the response to teenage drinking..

"It (alcohol use) is of great concern to us," Fink says.

The School Department has included information on alcohol in many areas of its curriculum, both at the senior high and junior high g.rades. At Newton North High, for instance, Frank Spitzer, a biology teacher and health coordinator, says students learn of the dangers of drinking and driving in driver education courses. Alcohol issues are also raised in psychology, health and biology classes.

Spitzer says North's Open Campus program will hold a week-long program in late April on alcohol issues for all juniors and seniors in physical education courses. The timing of the series, he says, is consciously prior to prom night for seniors.

While the problem of alcohol abuse among teenagers is not widespread, the incidences of students coming. to school intoxicated or being expelled from social events because of drinking often gets little concern from parents.

"Alcohol is acceptable," Sidman says. "The parents drink, everybody drinks, so some parents don't see anything wrong with their kids drinking."

"We want to say, 'your kids are drinking and they start at 13 years old,'" he stresses.

As Spitzer explains it, stirring concern over alcohol use is partly the problem of a double-standard. People tend to focus on marijuana or chemical substances as "harmful drugs," he says, but, "alcohol is a drug."

"Certainly more people are involved in driving deaths under the influence of alcohol than (marijuana)," he says.

Both Fink and Sidman stress that it is important for the community to be involved in alcohol education.

"We're saying we both have to handle it," Fink says. "We certainly don't educate kids to drink, but obviously we don't have control over them either."

"We want to do what we can to reduce the use of alcohol that we see and the use of drugs," he adds.

At Bigelow Junior High, principal Betty Quinn says the school is in its first year of offering a "School Life Skills" program for 7th graders. The fourth quarter of the program will include information on alcohol. The program, according to Quinn, has gotten a "tremendous amount of support" from the school's PTA (Parent Teacher Organization).

Bigelow science teacher Milt Rosenthal feels this new program is "exciting" and will be a kind of "briefing" before summer vacation.

Rosenthal, who has taught 7th grade science and is teaching science to 9th graders this year, feels the more information about alcohol and drugs students have, the more responsible they will be in decision-making.

According to Rosenthal, the science curriculum for both 7th and 9th graders teaches the physiological effects of drinking along with health problems, the alcohol industry and the role of drinking in our society. Alcohol and driving is also taught.

Kids get "a lot of peer pressure" to drink alcohol, Rosenthal says, and adds, "They see adults do it, too, you know."

Jazz planned at Mall

CHESTNUT HILL — On April 9 the Mall at Chestnut Hill (Route 9 at Hammond Pond Parkway) will present Al Vega in the second in a series of informal musical programs featuring outstanding jazz pianists from this area. Launched on April 2, "Jazz At The Mall" will continue on consecutive Friday evenings through May 21, from 7 to 8 p.m.

Dave McKenna launched the jazz series at The Mall on April 2. Following Vega, James Williams will appear on April 16. Other artists include: Lynn Carroll Stuart on April 23; Bill Davies on April 30; Paul Schmeling on May 7; Maggie Scott on May 14 and Bob Winters on May 21.

Open to the public, this series is part of The Mall at Chestnut Hill's ongoing plan to provide a showcase for the best of the area's performing arts. Additional events range from performances by the Newton Symphony Orchestra, the Boston Ballet and the Opera Company of Boston.

Contract alterations called 'misleading'

"It's the alteration of the document that was presented to the Board of Aldermen," said McGrath. "I'm wondering if it's legal."

Before the contract appropriation by the aldermen, the Finance Committee placed several clauses into the Finnegan contract that served to "protect the interests of the city." Several of these clauses, which included the furnishing of a performance bond by Finnegan for the total amount of the contract, have been altered, McGrath has charged.

"We're appropriating money for a specific item and they initiated an essential change that dramatically changed the item that we voted on," McGrath added.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk said he understood how "some aldermen could feel scorned if they (executive department) ignored a directive." Funk, however, noted that the executive department, not aldermen, enters into a contract.

"Legally," Funk said, "the mayor may enter into the contract any way he wants to within the bounds of the law." Said Funk: "As to why he didn't get some clauses in, I'm sure there were good reasons for it."

McGrath said he would ask Marino for an audit of the contract to see if Finnegan and the city had lived up to the agreement. Another section of the contract states that the agreement "may be modified or changed only by a written amendement executed in the same manner as this agreement." Neither alteration was approved by the Board of Aldermen.

Coletti named three instances within the past two years when the board-approved version of a contract was altered by the executive department. "The first time it happened (a contract for the purchase for Honeywell computers and software), we closed our eyes to it; Chaulk we closed our eyes to it and the third time is here," said Coletti.

The financial statements which were to be provided by Chaulk — like the performance bond and the penalty clause in the Finnegan contract — were inserted by aldermen following a hotly contested debate surrounding the switch to a privately-run city ambulance service.

"They (the Mann administration) have displayed the same arrogance that they displayed with the Chaulk contract," said McGrath. "The difference is, is that this is a more serious contract."

The draft of the contract viewed by the Finance Committee read that the contractor "shall be required" to post a performance bond for the total amount of the contract whereas the executed copy requires that Finnegan "shall apply for and use its best efforts to obtain" a performance bond equal to 100 percent of the contract. Finnegan has furnished a bond for $200,000.

The draft required Finnegan to pay the city $5,000 for each day's delay in completion of the contract whereas the executed copy reduces the sum to $500 per day. The draft that was before the board also read that the project would be completed no later than Jan. 31, 1982 whereas the copy signed by the executive department read Feb. 28, 1982. Each copy of the contract included a clause that would allow Finnegan to request a delay in the completion date.

"This is typical of what's going on with the administration and the law department," said Alderman Bruce Carmichael. "They change the contracts after we've had an opportunity to see them. The performance bond was a very important part of the package."

Parade fray continues

why the association had withdrawn their support" and felt the organization had not been "given the credit they deserve" for their participation.

"I'm only hoping that the mayor's office will make a sincere effort to cooperate with the Nonantum Christmas Association," Carmichael added.

Alderman Robert Tennant said "it was very unfortunate that the parade had been dragged into the political arena." He felt the split between the two parties was "strictly a political difference."

Merrill emphasised that the resolution was along the same lines "with what many of us have attempted to do over the past few months." He added, "There aren't any problems that can't be resolved," and that he would continue to invite members of the association to the Memorial Day parade planning process.

Merrill hopes to solicit between $1,000 and $1,500 for the observance. Last year, the city collected $1,600 through contributions.

Board backs Emerson School condos

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — The Emerson School on Pettee Street may be converted into 32 condominium units if Mayor Theodore Mann okays the plan passed by aldermen Monday night.

Aldermen unanimously approved a zone change and special permit to allow a Newton developer, Dooling and Siegel, to convert the school into 20 two-bedroom units and 12 one-bedroom units.

The board order approved requires as a condition of the purchase and sale agreement being negotiated by Mann that the developers comply with a city ordinance by selling three of the units to the city for subsidized low-income housing.

When a developer obtains a special permit to increase density, 10 percent of the housing constructed must be subsidised low- or moderate-income housing.

Richard Siegel, one of the two partners, said that the company hopes to begin construction on the $2.5 million project in 60 days. The units will sell from $75,000 to $420,000, accoring to Siegel.

The project, financed by the Mutual Bank for Savings in Newton, could be completed in a year.

Mann said Monday afternoon that he was waiting for a final board order before indicating if he will attempt to alter the conditions imposed by aldermen on the sale.

Mann has raised the minimimum purchase price of $180,000 set by aldermen to $210,000 and requested the placement of an additional $100,000 into a fund to maintain a community center at the building.

Mann apparently intended to use the monies from the sale of the building for capital improvements rather than purchasing the three units. The mayor had apparently intended to comply with the 10-percent ordinance by allowing the developer to lease the units to the city.

Land Use Committee Chairman Terry Morris said he believes that if Mann does not purchase the three units for the city, the purchase and sale agreement will be "null and void."

Morris has argued that aldermen and city officials could be criticized for "merely paying lip service" to a policy for additional low- and moderate-income housing if the three subsidized units are not sold to the city.

Morris stressed that for the last two years, the Land Use Committee has advocated purchase of units rather than leasing to comply with the 10-percent ordinance.

Mann has also pushed to recoup $50,000 the city has spent to maintain and improve the community center portion of the school. An amendment initiated by the City's Law Department that would have returned $50,000 of the $100,000 sum put into a fund for the community center was unanimously rejected.

The school, which was closed in July 1979, was previously slated for conversion into 20 housing units, but the plans collapsed when a local developer could not obtain the necessary financing for the project.

Manet Road station funds are asked

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen Monday night approved a resolution requesting that Mayor Theodore Mann restore budget funding necessary to keep the Manet Road fire station open.

Mann proposed the closing, which will result in the elimination of 12 firefighters at a savings of $293,000, in his FY 1983 budget presented to aldermen last week.

The Board approved the resolution designed to pressure Mann to increase Fire Department funding by a 15 to 3 vote. Aldermen also approved a resolution requesting that Mann initiate funding for an in-depth consultant's study on the Fire Department.

Administration officials and Fire Chief Edward Reilly have maintained that the closing will have a "minimal" impact on public safety in the Chestnut Hill area.

Aldermen, however, have criticized the recommendation as arbitrary. The lawmakers have particularly attacked the administration for not conducting a detailed analysis on the public-safety effect of the station closing.

Mann is expected to ignore the resolution. In his budget message, the mayor, citing "severe fiscal limitations," requested that any resolution from the 24-member legislative body be accompanied by "either an acceptable new financial source or a corresponding reduction in another budget appropriation recommendation."

Mann had requested $10,000 for a study of the Fire Department in response to criticism from aldermen. The Aldermanic Public Safety Committee, however, recommended denial of the $10,000 study in an attempt to force additional funding for an in-depth study.

A resolution by Alderman Verne Vance requesting $5,000 for a study on the impact of the station closing was narrowly defeated 11 to 10. Many aldermen scoffed at the appropriation as inadequate. Others argued that a study would be a "whitewash" to support the administration's position.

Vance touted the study as a possible "weapon" and contended that without it aldermen would have "nothing (on which) to base a very important public safety decision." Alderman Lisle Baker said an "objective" study may force Mann to reconsider his position.

Vance said the mayor's office has failed to make a "case" for the closing. "In the end, they (administration officials) know damn well they don't have to prove anything to us because if they keep the cut in there, we can't put it back," he said.

Most lawmakers see little hope of the administration making an about face on closing recommendation, despite strong legislative opposition.

"No matter what a consultant says, it seems to me this board is in favor of keeping Manet Road open," asserted Alderman Wendell Bauckman. "We don't need a study."

Bauckman, however, opposed the resolution requesting the funding without an alternative cut or funding source.

Aldermen voting against the resolution to restore funding: Bauckman, Terry Morris, and Robert Tennant.

Aldermen for the resolution: Baker, Richard Bullwinkle, Bruce Carmichael, Coletti, Paul Daley, Joseph DePasquale, Elaine Gentile, Michael Malec, Richard McGrath, Ed Richmond, Marcy Richmond, Lane Sofman, Dominic Taglienti, Vance, and Matthew Jefferson.

Absent: Harold Levinsky, Ethel Sheehan, Rodney Barker, Cynthia Creem, Harold Levinsky, Carol Ann Shea, Sondra Shick.

WE JUST DEVELOPED A FASTER, MORE SOPHISTICATED SYSTEM FOR MAKING LONG DISTANCE CALLS. HERE'S HOW YOU'LL RECOGNIZE IT:

beep.

It's just a little sound. But when you're away from home, it can make long distance calling so easy, it's like magic.

And right now, New England Telephone is adding that new beep to all the Touch-Tone™ phones in Newton.

Here's what'll happen. Whenever you dial "O" plus a long distance number at any Touch-Tone phone, you'll immediately hear the beep. Then, if you're at a pay phone or a coinless Charge-A-Call phone, you'll hear a recorded message that tells you exactly what to do next.

If you have a Calling Card (that's our new name for your Bell System credit card), just punch in your card number after the beep. Your call will go through like magic. It's easy—so easy you don't even need the operator. And that saves you time.

And another nice thing. Even if you want to make a series of long distance calls, now you only have to punch in your card number once (our new system has a very good memory). After you finish each call, instead of hanging up, just press the "#" button and dial your next call. Simple.

If you don't have a Calling Card, don't hang up. Just dial "O" again and the operator will handle your call as usual.

So remember, if you're looking for a fast easy way to make long distance calls, just listen. And we'll beep.

Adaptive reuse
Former United Methodist Church on Walnut Street, Newtonville, will undergo interior reconstruction this year, turning it into a restaurant and office space.

Church reuse planned by area developer

NEWTONVILLE — One more piece of the Newtonville revitalization program will soon be falling into place when construction crews break ground for The Abbey project, an adaptive reuse of the United Methodist Church on Walnut Street.

The developer, A.H.W. Properties, plans no changes to the shell of the structure except for some clean up and the installation of more energy efficient windows. The interior, however, will change dramatically.

Allan H. Wimer, principal of the project said last week the interior will accommodate two distinct uses: A street floor restaurant and 20,000 square feet of office space.

"The Abbey will be a different kind of restaurant for Newtonville," said Wimer. "The Abbey will, of course, offer good food. More important, it will feature an ambiance that will make it a fun, interesting place to eat."

Wimer also noted that the office portion of the project will "infuse the area's office space market with valuable new office space well suited for professional service firms such as architects, attorneys and engineers."

According to architect Patrick Ahearn, a principal of Ahearn-Schopfer and Associates, architects for The Abbey, the building plan capitalizes on the unique design of the church.

"Rather than fight the idiosyncracies of the layout, our plan complements the existing structure."

For example, the restaurant will incorporate the church's elegant arched entranceway and wooden trusses with a new multi-level floor plan, a contemporary lighting scheme and lively foliage. The three floors of office space are similarly planned to take advantage of the existing space, lending a custom-designed look to the offices.

Mayor Theodore Mann, Barry Canner, Newton's director of Planning and Development, and others in city government are enthusiastic about The Abbey.

"Over the past five years, the city has secured federal funds to improve Newtonville's streets, to design better traffic patterns and to add landscaping," said Canner. "We've also made a conscious effort to encourage private developers to initiate projects. The Abbey is an exciting project because it brings a different kind of restaurant to the neighborhood and makes good use of an attractive structure that's long been a part of the community. Most important," Canner added, "it puts the building back on the tax rolls."

Building plans for The Abbey are complete. A.H.W. Properties and city officials are now working out the final details on additional parking facilities.

Wimer said that The Codman Company, Inc., the exclusive agent for The Abbey, has already begun marketing the space and that he anticipates breaking ground this spring.

The Hebrew Rehabilitation Center for Aged, now on the threshold of its eightieth anniversary, is regarded as one of the nation's foremost geriatric long term care institutions. With almost 800 employees, the center provides care and treatment for 725 elderly residents in its Roslindale complex and for an additional 440 aged tenants in its Rever House apartment building.

Key elements of the expansion program are the construction of several hundred additional community housing apartments; the restructuring of the center's principal residential building to accomodate more physically handicapped old people; the creation of an outreach program to help upgrade programming in nursing homes; a hospice program for counselling families of the terminally ill; a medical research program to investigate causes and possible cures of senile dementia and the endorsement of a chair in geriatric medicine at a Boston medical school.

Group effort

A petition by the Friends of the Jackson Homestead, including (from left) First Vice-president Louise Makrauer, President Colin Diver and Second Vice-president Evelyn Umlas, was approved by the state to rename the group The Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead.

Historical society given nod to change of name

NEWTON — Inviting Newton residents to "Open the Door to Your Past", the Newton Historical Society opened its door last week. At a March 31 meeting of the Friends of the Jackson Homestead, President Colin Diver announced that the Massachusetts State Secretary had officially approved the Friends' petition to change its name to "The Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead".

"The idea behind the name change is quite simple," said Diver, who will be the new Society's first president. "The Friends already are Newton's historical society, but most people don't know it. Many people identify us exclusively with the Jackson Homestead, and fail to realize that we are interested in the history of the entire city."

The Society's headquarters will continue to be the Jackson Homestead, the City's historical museum on Washington Street.

The Society sponsors lectures, workshops, and tours. The theme of its Spring 1982 program is "House Keeping", which focuses on restoration and preservation of Newton's many fine old residences. The Spring Program will culminate with "The Old House Fair", on May 2, at City Hall's War Memorial Auditorium. The Fair will enable old-house enthusiasts to meet a wide range of exhibitors specializing in restoration services and materials.

"It is the Society's goal," says Diver, "to preserve our rich heritage in Newton, and to nurture this desire in young and old alike. We want to make Newton's history a significant part of its present life, and we welcome those who share those goals."

'Lake' lends its best to Newton Police

NONANTUM— Nonantum, popularly known as the "Lake" has contributed many fine police officers over the years to the Newton Police Department.

The Lake lends longevity to its people and four of the senior officers of the Newton Police Department, all dynasty officers, total 143 years of service.

In order of rank they are: Captain Walter Drew, Lieut. Charles E. Feeley, Sgt. John J. Kennedy and Detective William P. Mahoney, with a total of 143 years. Each of the men has been or is pension eligible, yet each continues to serve the department.

Captain Walter Drew is the senior captain and commander of the Newton Detective Bureau. Drew is the nephew of John Drew who, for a time, served with the Natick Police and whose son, Lieut. Robert Drew, is of the same department. In addition, Captain Drew is the father of Waltham's newest sergeant, Edward Drew. Drew is also a cousin of Capt. John McMullen who served 39 years in the Newton Police Department.

Walter Drew is a graduate of Our Lady's High School and following his graduation he joined the U.S. Marine Corps. He was active in athletics at both school and in the Marine Corps. His interest in athletics and his leadership ability were instrumental in the formation of the Newton Police Athletic League for young athletes and various baseball and basketball teams composed of police officers and coached by Drew.

He was one of the youngest men appointed as sergeant in the history of the department and for the last 11 years he has been commander of the Detective Bureau.

His most famous case was the solution of the double murder of Mr. and Mrs. William Herbits, among many others.

Lieut. Feeley is in his 41 year of service on the police department and has a prior six years intermittent but continual service with the recreation department. At present he is the senior municipal police officer in Massachusetts–not the oldest, but senior.

Lieut. Feeley is the son of the late Charles E. Feeley, the nephew of Francis G. Feeley, both inspectors (detectives), and cousin of five officers in other departments, and he has a sister, Mary Grenier, a traffic supervisor. Feeley's prior service to the city began as a lifeguard at Allison Beach on the Charles River and also as a recreation director at various Newton playgrounds, starting in 1936. He entered police service in 1942.

His service was interrupted by three years in the U.S. Air Force. Following his return to civilian life he was instrumental in the reorganization of the Nonantum Boy's Club and the present Newton Boy's Club. For the past 31 years he has been Safety and Juvenile Officer and, more recently, Chief Quinn created the Office of Community Service to include public information, public relations, crime prevention, human relations and other related interests, with Feeley as bureau commander.

Sgt. John J. Kennedy senior sergeant, attended Our Lady's Help of Christian School, and then Newton High School. He later served in the Air Force in World War II and the Korean War. Upon discharge he entered police service as a patrol officer and was then promoted to sergeant.

He became an emergency medical technician and when the Newton Police Department had an ambulance service, Kennedy was the triage officer at a number of disaster drills. His expertise in the field led Chief Quinn to appoint him "Police Rescue Coordinator" when the ambulance service went private.

Kennedy is the brother of the late Newton officer, Michael Kennedy, and of retired Newton Police Sgt. Charles Kennedy. He is the father of traffic supervisor, Gail Gautreau, the father-in-law of Claire Kennedy, also a Newton traffic supervisor. He has, as he puts it "a fist full of cousins" on the Boston Police Department in addition to a number of firefighters.

William P. Mahoney Jr. is the son of the late Captain (acting Chief) William P. Mahoney (37 years) and brother of Captain Robert Mahoney (32 years) and is senior patrolman. As such he is the holder of Badge No. 1 with 37 years of service to his credit.

Mahoney's prior service was as a businessman owning his own business as a teenager. He was the first member of his school class to pay an income tax in the thirties.

Bill Mahoney started his business career as an apprentice locksmith and bicycle repair mechanic at Hinckley's Bicycle and Lock Shop in Watertown. When Mr. Ora Hinckley died in 1937 the business was sold to the teenage Mahoney, who ran the business until World War II came along. In the meantime, Mahoney had become a master locksmith and also had an interest in an automobile agency–an interest that he controlled even when in the service, buying and selling good used cars to service men and women. During the war years he took the police examination and became a member of the Newton Department. His experience with locks kept him busy on lock-outs, and his familiarity with locks eventually tagged him for the Detective Bureau where he became the resident locksmith and advisor on locks.

In addition to the four seniors, other Lake men who have served are:

Eugene Paoletti, 32 years; Patrol Officer Mario Marino, 35 years; Capt. John J. Bartinelli, 30 years; Patrol Officer Anthony Grella, 30 years; Patrol Officer Frederick Fraini, 35 years; Patrol Officer James J. Kiley, 30 years; Patrol Officer Aubrey Hill; 30 years; Patrol Officer Rocco Marzilli, 30 years; Capt. Albert Yanco, 35 years;

Recently retired officers also had fine lengths of Service:

Capt. John McMullen, 34 years; Patrol Officer Joseph Greeley, 40 years; Patrol Officer Gil Champagne, 30 years + 15 with the Recreation Dept.; Patrol Officer James Coletti, 30 years; Patrol Officer George Longbottom, 30 years;

In all, the boys from the Lake served long and with honor, but none can come close to the "Lake Ladies", Peg McMullen, 44 years, and Anne Antonellis Muse with 48 years.

Ms. McMullen was assistant city clerk and Mrs. Muse served in the Health Dept. and left only to allow the younger crowd some upward mobility.

Longtermers

Tallying 143 years of service to the Newton Police Department are (standing) Sgt. John J. Kennedy and (seated, from left) Detective William Mahoney, Lt. Charles Feeley and Captain Walter Drew.

THE WORLD of Travel

JET LAG
"Circadian Biorythmicity" is the scientific name given to the lethargy which many travelers call jet lag. A closer look at these symptoms reveals that much of this feeling may be due to too much food and the wrong kind of drink. Here are some tips to minimize the problem. Do not feel compelled to eat every morsel of food set before you. If the captain warns of turbulence ahead, eat even less. Eating less will help you dose more easily. Above 35,000 feet, digestive processes are somewhat in a state of disarray. Forgo rich foods as well. Decreased air pressure at this altitude expands the gas in soft drinks by 20%, and liquor is almost twice as potent.
Our travel agents at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham can do much more for you than just offer expert advice on how best to deal with jet lag. We can issue a ticket for the most direct flight at the best possible price, arrange hotel and resort accommodations, meals, sightseeing and entertainment. In short, we do everything except help you pack, there is never any additional charge to you for our service. Call us today at 899-5658. Open: Mon.-Sat. 9-5:30, Fri. 'til 8.

North's chamber group is off to Europe

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A group of Newton North High singers and musicians are fast becoming renowned in the grand halls of Europe.

Two years ago the Family Singers and the Chamber Orchestra performed in Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris, France. Next week they will sojourn to northern Spain to perform in one of the most beautiful and and spectacular cathedrals in Europe — the Santiago Cathedral in Santiago de Compostela, Spain.

On Monday, the group of 44 seniors and juniors will leave for their 10-day visit to the Spanish province of Galicia and two of its cities — La Coruna and Santiago de Compostela. The performance in the Santiago Cathedral will be the highlight of a seven concert tour in the area.

Accompanying the students on the trip will be foreign languages teacher, David Phelan, who will serve as translator and guide, the high school's Music Department chairman and director of the Family Singers, Raymond Smith, and Eric Benjamin, director of the Chamber Orchestra.

The students will be staying in La Coruna at the invitation of North High's "sister" school there and have all been placed with families of students who attend the "sister" school, El Colegio Videlba, a private school.

According to Smith, the whole trip has become "a big deal" and on the group's itinerary is a presentation to the mayor of La Coruna of a key to Newton and a proclamation from Mayor Theodore Mann. Last week, the students and their parents met with the Spanish Consul General, Fernando Perpina Robert, for an introduction to Spanish culture, art and history.

For both Smith and Phelan, the trip to Paris and now the trip to Spain are the result of much planning and effort and some dreaming a few years ago. Each has initiated several exchange programs in their own departments, but had never combined forces.

Phelan has created an impressive exchange program of "sister" schools in France and Spain for students taking foreign languages. This year, for the first time, a group of North students will be going to Florence, Italy, as part of an exchange with a school there.

Smith has also developed exchange programs with other music departments in this country and recently hosted concerts by a Bethesda, Md., high school group.

As Phelan simply recalls it, "Ray Smith said to me one day, 'Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could this to Europe one day?' and I said, 'Why not?'"

According to Phelan, the two European concert tours also have historical significance for the students since the cathedral in Santiago is a pilgrimmage church. Phelan explained that medieval Christians used to begin their pilgrimmage from the tower of St. Jacques, not far from Notre Dame, and reach the end of their journey at Santiago Cathedral.

In rehearsals with the Family Singers last week and preparation for the concerts in Spain, Smith conveyed the finer points of performing in the huge Santiago Cathedral. Singing in the cathedral, he said, will be like singing to an audience in Fenway Park.

"That cathedral is awful big," he goodnaturedly warned the singers. "You've got to reach!"

The repertoire which will be performed by the Family Singers includes songs in Spanish, French, Latin and English. Smith says all of the songs are being translated into Spanish and will be given to their "sister" students beforehand. A brochure giving some information about Newton North High along with the musical program was written in Spanish by Phelan.

To help pay for the trip, students have held fundraisers during the year and on Saturday walked 21 miles in a walk-a-thon to raise money to pay for two students whose families, Smith said, have experienced sudden financial problems.

Lisa Baumberg earns honors

NEWTON— Lisa Baumberg, Newton South senior and daughter of Mr. Robert Baumberg and the late Mrs. Robert Baumberg was honored as a "Good Citizen" by Lydia Partridge Whiting Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution at a meeting March 8.

Lisa was introduced by Vice-Regent Miss Marie F. Desmond, with Nancy Zaremba of Chelsea High School and Marybeth Mangan of Somerville High School, who were also selected by classmates and school faculty for the award.

Each "Good Citizen" spoke briefly about personal interests and goals in life. Robert Baumberg was among the parents that presented the "Good Citizen" pin to their daughters. A Book was awarded by the Vice-Regent. The students are selected for qualities of leadership, dependability, service and patriotism.

Mrs. William A. Hurley - Regent Pro-Tem, presided at the meeting, in the parlor of the Newton Highlands Congregational Church.

A memorial service for the late Regent, Mrs. Lincoln Alvord of Waban was conducted by the Chapter Chaplain, Rev. Bonnie Scott Allen. In addition, the chaplain gave an inspiring talk to the "Good Citizens".

A chorus from the Hillside School for Boys directed by Richard Velante presented a delightful musical program. The Hillside School is one of the DAR supported schools. It provides an excellent education and practical training for the boys that attend. The parents of the "Good Citizens" were special guests at the meeting. Others were Mrs. Harry E. Brown, Mrs. Charles Casey, President of the Newton Highlands Women's Club, Mrs. Joseph B. Moulton, Miss Catherine I. Rhodes retired Superintendent of the Mt. Hundreds join Barney' party

NEWTON — Some 400 of Barney Frank's friends turned out for his 42nd birthday party at the Sidney Hill Country Club Sunday night — friends like U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Jr., Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, and Ohio Sen. Howard Metzenbaum.

The $42 a plate fundraising party will support Frank's re-election bid for the Fourth District Congressional seat. Under the State Legislature's recent redistricting plan, Frank must battle Republican Margaret Heckler in what is expected to be a heated contest.

According to Frank's finance chairman, Dick Morningstar, "This may well be a $1 million campaign." (Frank's previous campaign cost approximately $350,000.)

Sen. Kennedy said Frank is "right on the issues of our time," calling equity, decency, fairness, and the elimination of discrimination and the nuclear overkill issue the two problems democrats and Barney Frank are out to battle.

He noted that Frank was chosen the "Outstanding Freshman in Congress" by U.S. News and World Report, then presented Frank a "Sophomore of the Year" T-shirt as a birthday present.

That Blessings May Shine on You...Come to Church

They came from all over to honor Guy Tedesco

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

They came from as far away as Michigan. They came from all parts of New England. They came for just one reason...to honor a friend.

More than 1,000 people from all walks of life squeezed into the spacious Venetian Room of the Chateau de Ville in Randolph Monday night to pay tribute to Guy Tedesco.

The 60-year old Newton native was honored in a number of ways with a variety of gifts and awards from the various associations and people he is involved with. Tedesco is still active in promoting golf in Massachusetts.

Todesco has been the Golf Director at the New Seabury Country Club for the past 18 years and in that time he has become a national figure. Through Superintendent conventions and golf tournaments, Guy became well known and respected.

A top notch amatuer golfer in the 50's and 60's, Guy has been the Superintendent for Wayland Country Club, Charles River Country Club and Wachusett Country Club before going to New Seabury. His work at New Seabury has made its championship course consistently rated in the top 100 of the country in the golf digest.

Brought up on Craft Street in Newton's Nonantum section, Guy became interested in golf as a caddy at the Brae Burn Country Club. One of eight children, Guy went into the Navy in World War II. He was in a number of battles including the Anzio Invasion and D Day.

After the war, Guy returned home and started on his way. He and his wife Josie had two children. Jeff Tedesco is 32 and is living in New Jersey. Guy's daughter Joanne is 19 and a sophomore at the University of Massachusetts. The two were born in Wayland, but spent a major portion of their childhood on the Cape in Popponesett.

The Master of Ceremonies for the evening was Andy Bertoni, who came from Michigan to honor Guy. Bertoni has been a greenskeeper for 30 years and he met Guy at a convention. "Guy is a terrific person," said Bertoni, "I also hop he gives me a couple of his awards so I can bring them back to my wife and proove to her that I was here."

Bishop Maguire of Springfield presented Guy with a clock and called him a "Gentleman in every sense of the word." Mosgr. McCarthy of St. Elizabeth's Hosptital was also seated at the head table.

Ted Carangelo, president of the Massachussetts Golf Association, presented Guy with a plaque for his continuing efforts of "promoting interest in golf." Carangelo said, "that the MGA was created in 1903 to promote intrerest in golf in Massachusetts and Guy has done more than his share."

Guy was a member of the MGA's Executive Committee. Blind golfer Joe Lazaro of Waltham is a close friend of Guy's and informed the audience of many interesting experiences the two have had.

"Guy and I were conducting a clinc for blind children," said Lazaro, "and he told me not to worry because once they heard the club hit the ball, they would clap even if I shanked it."

Boston sports personalities that came to thank Guy for his friendship and golf guidance included: Boston Bruins' General Manager Harry Sinden and Eddie Johnston, coach of the Pittsburgh Penguins and former goaltender for the Bruins. Former Celtic great Bob Cousy was also on hand. Bruins head coach Gerry Cheevers and present day players Brad Park and Wayne Cashman were on hand.

The Town of Mashpee honored Guy by designating the first Saturday in April as Guy Tedesco Day. The New Seabury Country Club also created the Guy Tedesco Golf Tournament and a Guy Tedesco Scholarship Fund to benefit high school seniors on Cape Cod. The Fund has already raised $7,000. The golf tournament will be held to support the scholarship fund.

State Representative Joe De Nucci, who is also a product of Newton's Nonantum section, presented Guy with a citation from the floor of the State House of Representatives recocognizing his contribution to golf and his ability to get along with others. "Guy is a great man," said De Nucci, "and the number of people here tonight prooves it."

The State Senate also sent Guy a resolution.

He was awarded the keys to New Seabury for his 18 years of service. Chris Burton of New Seabury awarded the keys to Guy and was thankful he chose to stay at New Seabury after a one month consultation period. We are all glad that Guy decided to stay," said Burton. "Guy is a dedicated man and it shows in his work."

Brian Cowan, president of the Golf Course Superintendent Association, presented Guy with a plaque for his numerous contributions to that organization. "Guy is a great asset to our organization," said Cowan. "He likes to call us the the grass cutters."

Barnstable City Treasurer Mary LeClair made an honorary deputy sheriff of Barnstable County. Paul Luizzo, who was the chairman of the committee that organized the dinner, thanked the committee for its hard work and presented Guy with a videotape of the evening and a video tape machine to play it on. He also presented Guy with a 25" inch color television set to play the videotape machine on.

Other members of the Committee included, Bobby Orr, who sent a mailgram congratulating Guy, Frank Luca, Dick Crosby, Mike Frucci, Earl Wallace, Mickey Cusano, Jophn Tedesco, Jim Tedesco, Bill Cledenin, John Bornas and Moe McPhail.

After all the praise and gifts, Guy Tedesco would only say, "that in addition to all the good things that were said about him, he was also a good speaker and this is the greatest evening of my life."

Lech hopes to maintain North win tradition

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

You wonder if Mark Lech feels any pressure. It's never easy inheriting a winning program, but when you take the reigns of a track team that hasn't lost a duel meet in more than two years, the feeling that you must continue the tradition has to weigh heavy.

If it does, though, Lech hasn't let it show so far. This is his first crack at heading the outdoor team at Newton North, but he carried on the tradition established by Fred Yaitanes very nicely, thankyou, during the indoor campaign. The Tigers finished 7-1 and shared the Suburban League title with Brockton and Weymouth South, and although Lech told a gathering at the school's All-Sports Winter Banquet that he would have been "much happier winning the whole pie," you knew that deep down he was quite pleased with his initial foray into the coaching profession.

Lech, of course, has known success on an individual level for a long time. A superstar at Northeastern University, he is now running middle distances for Athletics West and is considered one of the finest 800 meters men in the country. But transfering that success to a team of young, unpredictable high schoolers is often another story. After all, how many great athletes have never known the secret of coaching?

For his part, Lech is taking walking a cautious road this spring. The Tigers have won 17 straight duel meets and are an incredible 48-2 in the last six years, but Lech says the numbers are down this season and he's not sure Newton can be the dominate force of the past. "It hurts that we don't have a coach who teaches in the system," says Lech. "Newton North is a big school, and if you don't have someone there to encourage the kids to come out for track, you often lose them."

The boom of the Yaitanes years seems to have bottomed out at North and Lech worries about the depth his club will possess. "I don't know what kind of numbers Brockton and Weymouth South will have," he says, "but we'll be weak in some areas."

North's most apparent weakness is in the sprint events (100 and 220), where after two weeks of practice Lech could only find two possible answers to the dilemma. He named Ralph Davis and Dave Barndt as possibilities and then added with a sigh, "And that's it for now. We don't have anyone else I can think of."

But don't cry for the Tigers just yet. As always, they'll have their share of talented athletes. Billy Drew, continuing a family tradition, is expected to become the leader. Drew will compete in the 440, high jump, long jump and relay. "He's definitely the type who can win two events and a relay for us," Lech says. "Sort of like his brother, Steve, did last year."

North's strength should be at middle distances, where veterans Cam Laing and Pail Passavant participate in the 880 and others such as George Fulk, Tom Carleo, Paul Partridge and Jerry McHugh handle both the mile and two-mile.

Expected to run the hurdles are Tim Feeney and Sophomore Dino May (lows) and John Drew, Paul Wessell and Lew Hunter (highs).

Lech must replace three-year veteran Mike Schichilone in the pole vault. For the moment, he has a talented, but inexperienced foursome from which to draw. Junior Peter Michelson is the old man of the group with Sophomores Bill Norwood, Will Caldicott and John Harrison also fighting for positions.

Hunter, Billy Drew and newcomer Finn Yonkers will handle the high and long jumps with Yonkers also providing depth in the 440. Two juniors, Wessell and Feeney, will participate in the triple jump.

Lech looks to Kevin Troy (shot put), Kevin Connell and Bruce McDonald (discus) and Doug Little (javelin) to provide points in the field events. The javelin is thin at the moment and Little is by no means a shoo-in for the top spot.

"I don't see us being overconfident by any means this season," says Lech. "There are too many questions to be answered."

The Tigers may find out just what they're made of opening day (April 13) when they host perennial rival Brockton — the last school to beat them way back in 1979. It's difficult to tell who has the advantage of such an early meeting between the two superpowers, but Lech likes to think it will benefit his Tigers. "Maybe we can catch them before they're quite ready," he said.

Don't be too surprised if the Tigers "catch" a lot of teams this season — on their way to another successful year.

Lions should contend again

Newton South achieved its greatest success ever on the baseball diamond in 1981, reaching the Division I State semi-finals en route to a 17-5 record.

Graduation took its toll from the star-studded lineup, but Coach Neil McPhee doesn't see any reason why the Lions can't come right back to be a contender again in the Dual County League.

Four solid returnees, third baseman Steve Mosca, leftfielder Mark Nicoletti, centerfielder Joe Spagnoulo and pitcher Bill Bracken, plus transfer student Mark Paglia, provide seasoning. A promising group of jayvee graduates is expected to blend in to plug most of the gaps.

At the writing, Bachner is ineligible because of marks and isn't taking part in the pre-season workouts. He will turn eligible Friday, however.

"Toughest players to replace will be catcher Brian Strier, shortstop Mike Kasten and second baseman Russ Nicoletti. That's was our strength up the middle," acknowledges McPhee.

Paglia, a transfer from Newton Catholic where he played varsity ball as a sophomore last year, has looked very good at the catching position in practice. He has a strong arm. Adam Rosman, Jayvee backstopper last year, is only a step behind and is mechanically sound, blocking the ball, etc.

Both shortstop and second base are wide open right now. Brian Lewis is one of the better looking prospects coming up from the Jayvees. He has good size and a good whip and looks like he might be able to step right in. Paglia, if he doesn't wind up as the catcher, is a possibility.

Ed Murray could be a reasl sleeper. the junior infielder is hitting the ball with a great deal of authority, and if he keeps it up he has a chance to play some place.

Rich Wenning, the hockey goaltender, is in the running along with Jerry Marcus, John Stephans and Mike Davidson.

The other two infield stations are pretty well settled with Evan Kushner at first base and Mosca at third. Kushner makes a big target at the initial hassock at 6-2 and 190 and is hitting the ball well, too.

Mosca, whom McPhee regards as a tremendous athlete, is a captain in football, hockey and baseball. "Mike's biggest asset is his competitive nature and his confidence in himself," says Neil. "He's the guy I want up there in the clutch. He got the big hit in the tourney game with Melrose, bringing us from behind with a three-run homer."

Two of the outfield berths will be occupied by veterans. Nicoletti will be stationed in left. He has been really pounding the ball in practice. Spagnoulo, one of the most natural athletes on the team, has a good arm, excellent speed and great range. "He can really go after the ball and can make that one play that will win the game for you in spectacular fashion just as he did in football," says McPhee.

The other outfield spot is still being contested. Ben Adler, a junior up from the Jayvees, is capable on defense. Several of the pitchers could be alternated in right field, too.

Just how quickly Bachner gets into shape when he becomes eligible will determine how effective he will be for Newton South. He was the best pitcher in the league as a sophomore and posted two victories over Acton-Boxboro. An excellent competitor, the hard-throwing righty has more of a slider than a curve and has excellent control.

Mike Pappas, one of the tri-captains, and Paglia may have to take up the slack in the early stages of the season. Pappas, up from the Jayvees, has looked very impressive in early drills. Paglia, with his strong arm, could help out on the mound.

Infielder Jerry Marcus can pitch as well as Lewis. In fact, McPhee comments: "The trademark of this team is the number of different positions two or three players can be used at."

Newton South was to have engaged Newton North in a practice game today and tackles Belmont Wednesday. The Lions pry the lid off the regular season on Monday, April 12, against Weston at home.

Feldstein earns NCAA All-American honors at Tufts Univ.

Mike Feldstein of Newton was among six Tufts University swimmers that earned All-American honors with their performances in the NCAA Division III Swimming and Diving Championships at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., last Friday and Saturday.

Feldstein, a junior, finished seventh in the finals of the 200-yard breaststroke to set a school record of 2:11.5. He shed 20 pounds during the winter season to compete in the national meet at 182 pounds.

"Mike is one of the hardest working swimmers on our team and all that work certainly paid off this year. He topped off a great season with a great performance at the national meet," said Coach Don Megerle.

A former all-scholastic swimmer at Newton North, Mike has earned All-America recognition in each of his three years at Tufts.

Two Tufts swimmers, Jim Lilley and Keith Miller, became national champions at the NCAA meet. Lilley, a senior from Bogota, Colombia, set a meet record while winning the 100-yard butterfly in 50.67 seconds. Miller, a senior from Washington, Ct., moved up three positions in three dives to capture the three-meter diving title, 510.95. The performance of Lilley and Miller paced Tufts to a sixth place finish in the team standings with 95 poits. Kenyon carried off the team title with 299 points.

Other Tufts swimmers who earned All-America honors were: John Montes (Hollis, N.H.), who finished fourth in the 100-yard backstroke; Dave Ackerman (Danvers) who finished 12th in the 500-yard freestyle and Ken Gallica (Longmeadow) who, along with Feldstein, Montesi and Lilley, finished eighth in the 400-yard medley relay.

Mann posts 2 bests in swim meet

Lynne Mann, co-captain elect of the 1982-83 Newton North girls' swim team, and a member of the Newton Barracudas and the Newton Recreation Swim Team, achieved two more best times in the 10th annual New Bedford Invitational Age Group Meet last weekend.

She swam a 1:14.9 in the 100-yard backstroke and a 2:20.8 in the 200-yard freestyle.

She began swimming competitively a year and a half ago as a sophomore for Newton North.

Lacrosse roundup

North sharp in opening victory

Powerful Newton North began its lacrosse season in an impressive manner Wednesday with a 6-4 victory over Framingham South at Framingham.

The Tigers moved out to a 4-0 lead early in the third period before Framingham even got on the board. Only three final period goals by Steve Gannon made the game appear closer than it really was.

"We have some things to work on," said North coach Rick Clark, "but overall I was pleased wwith our effort. Our biggest problem today was overpassing. Not only were we making that second and third pass to get a guy open, but we went for the fourth one as well. But that's a good problem to have."

Ken Healey powered the attack with three goals while Sean Underhill, Mark Sampson and Harry Martens scored the others.

Gannon scored all four Framingham markers.

Clark credited defensemen Joe Santangelo, Alec Murphy and Paul Boudreau for outstanding efforts and also made special note of Goalie Ed Cohen's play.

The Newton South lacrosse team opened its season in what Coach Paul Murphy labeled "extremely disappointing" fashion Wednesday with a 4-3, double-overtime loss to St. John's (Danvers) at Danvers.

"We played poorly, that's all there was to it," said Murphy. "We had problems clearing the ball and made too many turnovers in our offensive end."

Scoring for the Lions were Ken Kolhberg, Dennis Murphy and John Rosenson. Harry Britz got the game-winner for St.John's at 3:09 of the second overtime.

Solid core of vets returning for Tigers

They won't possess the awesome collection of power-hitters from a year ago, when their lineup was the Suburban League's answer to the 1927 Yankees, but coach Carolyn Harrington believes there's no reason why her Newton North Tigers can't contend again for the 1982 softball title.

"We're optimistic. We realize we won't have the long-ball hitters of the past, but we'll give everyone a battle," says Harrington. "Newton North has always had good, coachable athletes who are well-skilled. This year is no different."

Gone from the Tigers' 1981 Suburban champs are Sandy Smith, Donna Yaffe, Debbie Quinn, Patty Antonellis, Patty Ackerley and, at least temporarily, Lori Goldenberg. All except Quinn and Goldenberg have graduated. Quinn, a tremendous all-around athlete, opted for tennis this spring while Goldenberg is lost until mid-season as a result of a knee injury suffered during basketball. Both were All-Stars in '81.

"We'll miss both of them a great deal," said Harrington. "Quinn making the tennis team just shows what a great athlete she is. We're sorry she's gone, but we wish her all the luck in the world. We're staying optimistic about Lori. She had a pretty serious knee injury so there's no telling when she'll be back, but the doctors tell us mid-season."

A solid nucleus does return, however. The backbone of this year's squad will be Pitcher Tina Gentile, Catcher Carole Summers and Outfielder Patti McGrath.

Gentile returns as the No.1 starter after an impressive junior season where, as Harrington put it, she "grew up as a pitcher." As her confidence increased, Gentile became one of the finer pitchers in the league, and if her new windmill delivery works out this season, she could become the very best. "It'll give her a pitch with more speed and velocity. It can be very effective," said Harrington.

Gentile began experimenting with the windmill style while attending the Joan Joyce Softball Clinic the past two summers. Joyce is one of softball's all-time great hurlers, so if Gentile picked up anything from her, watch out Suburban League.

Her missiles will be caught by Summers, who missed almost her entire junior year with an ankle injury. Summers excels offensively and defensively so Harrington should have few worries in this area.

McGrath, who became the catcher in Summers' absence, shifts back to her normal leftfield spot.

The remainder of the Tiger squad will consist of girls who started on the Jayvees last year. "You can never tell how a girl will react to varsity level," Harrington says. "There's a big difference between that and Jayvees."

Moving up to play defense will be Junior Joanne Martin, a steady, unspectacular players who just gets the job done. Second is currently a battle between Senior Mona Calderone, Junior Darlene Link and Sophomore Carolyn Corbato while third will be handled by Beth Kelley with Sophomore Debbie Cheota in reserve.

The biggest question mark in the infield is at shortstop, which Quinn patrolled so well last season. Junior Denise Richards seems to have the inside track at the moment. "Denise has a strong arm, decent range and is a heady ballplayer," said Harrington.

Sophomore Sue Gerson, described by Harrington as a "real leader" has won the centerfield position with Goldenberg injured while Senior Jackie Dillon or Link will be playing right. Also expected to see action in the outfield is Junior Tricia Natale.

Harrington knows, of course, that everyone in the Suburban League will be gunning for North.

Newton North opens the season April 12 at Brookline.

Culture sharing program special

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

AUBURNDALE — If in an airport, you notice a fashionably dressed traveler, strolling confidently through the terminal and acting as if he owns the world, chances are good that he's a Philippine native.

"He may be shaking in his shoes," says Rosalina Goulet, a teacher at Newton's Philippine School. "But in no way will he let you know what's going on."

Goulet wrote "Making It In The U.S.," a handbook for Filippino immigrants. She was one of several natives of the Philippine Islands who spoke Saturday at the home of Janet Chiong, during "Philippine Culture Sharing," a program sponsored by Newton Community Schools.

Goulet explained that Filippinos, are, or at least like to think they are, cosmopolitan people. "He wouldn't want you to think he's from the boondocks," explains Goulet. The word "boondocks," incidentally, is a Philippine word meaning mountains.

The Filippinos sense of worldliness is the result of several hundred years under various rulers, including Japan, Spain and the United States. Years of exposure to various cultures have made Filippinos "adjustable" people, said Goulet. They are multilingual and highly educated professionals, who have an easier time than other ethnic groups blending into the "melting pot" according to Goulet.

The Philippine Islands became known to Europe by Ferdinand Magellan's voyage there in 1521. Situated throughout the Pacific Ocean and the South China Sea, the 7100 Philippine Islands were named for Phillip 11, King of Spain. For nearly 400 years, the Spaniards ruled what is now the Republic of the Philippines.

The American, Chinese and Japanese influence is also strong in the Philippines, noted Janet Chiong, a Community Schools instructor and creator of the "Culture Sharing" programs. Because of its multi-cultural heritage, The Philippines are the best example of what culture sharing is all about, Chiong explained,

"We have to stop thinking in terms of your culture, their culture. It's our culture," explained Chiong. For Chiong, that concept is especially true in terms of Filippino heritage and her family. "I'm lucky enough to be married to a very fiesty Filippino. So the Filippino culture holds a special significance for me."

Janet Chiong, an anthropologist of Irish extraction, is married to Winston Chiong, a Filipino and economics professor at Boston State College. Winston also teaches Oriental cooking in Newton's community schools. They have two young daughters.

As part of Philippino Culture Sharing, the Chiongs decorated their home with photographs of Filippino natives and original island craftsmanship, including wooden musical instruments, pottery, woven baskets and handpainted tobacco jars. The native Fillippino's colorful costumes, an intricately embroidered silk terno among others, were also displayed. The Sarimanok, the Philippines legendary love bird, were depicted as wood figurines.

Patti Yusah, former member of the Bayanihan Dance Group of the Philippines, presented a slide show and lectured on Filippino lifestyles. Yusah is now teaching at the Philippino School.

The Chiong's special guest was Filippino tenor Noel Velasco, who is currently performing with the Opera Company of Boston. Velasco, a Newton resident, sang several Filippino folk and love songs accompanied by guitarist Louis Ocahpo. "I believe in the effort to show what riches the Filippino culture has," said Velasco, winner of the Pavarotti Competition in Philidelphia.

Following a presentation of the native Tinikling Dance by the Castro Family Folk Dancers, guests were treated to a "marianda" or snack. The "Philippine Barbecue" prepared by Winston and Janet included "pansit" (Philippine noodles), shrimp rolls, barbecues pork on 12 inch-long sticks and Milan's imported San Miguel beer.

"A home is the heart of a culture. So culture sharing takes place in Newton homes with strong ethnic identities," said Chiong.

Highlands CDC seeks officers

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — The Newton Highlands Community Development Corporation (NHCDC) is seeking candidates for election to its 15 member Board of Directors. Six seats will be up for election. Voting will take place on May 7 and 8.

Candidates for board positions must submit a brief statement of candidacy along with their address and a brief biography by May 6. NHCDC will sponsor a community meeting on April 29 to give candidages an opportunity to presdnt their qualifications to the community and to discuss current NHCDC activities with present Board members.

The NHCDC is a community-based development organization formed for the purpose of utilizing housing and community development efforts to improve the quality of life for Newton Highlands residents, particularly those of low and moderae income. Present NHCDC projects include a home repair program for senior citizens, a community news service for Newton's cable system, a wood purchasing cooperative and the development of a shared living house for the elderly.

The incoming board members will take office as of NHCDC's June meeting and will, along with the nine incombents, elect a president, vice-president and treasurer for the coming year.

Newton's 'booting' option

NEWTON — With approximately 40,000 parking tickets issued since Jan. 1, parking scofflaws had better beware of this city's equivalent to the denver boot.

The Board of Aldermen Monday night unanimously approved a tough new policy that will allow the Police Department to tow and hold the vehicles of drivers with five or more unpaid parking tickets.

Parking scofflaws would not only be forced to pay the tickets, but also a towing and storage charge to receive their vehicle. In order for the city to tow the car, it must be on city property.

"It might be the only way to enforce this," said Parking Clerk Richard Walsh of the new policy. "There are a lot of people who just won't pay."

If collected, the tickets would provide the city with approximately $140,000 in additional revenue. Under the fiscal year 1983 budget, the Mann administration expects the revenue source to bring in $400,000 in new revenues. In fiscal year 1982, parking tickets brought in $75,000. Walsh is heading up the new city system of processing tickets which began in January. Several outside sections of the state budget transfered the responsibility for parking violations from the state to cities and towns.

"We are innundated," said Walsh of the backlog of parking violations. "It's more involved than I felt originally."

Public Safety and Transportation Committee Chairman Joseph DePasquale said that the policy will affect few drivers. "This isn't something that is widespread," he said. "As long as people pay their parking tickets, there is no problem."

DePasquale, who termed the policy "reasonable," added: "This is the only way vehicle the city has to be able to enforce parket ticket collections."

Alderman Dominic Taglienti, however, criticized excessive city ticketing "double taxation."

(Steven Burke, staff writer)

Dog tag fee bid passed

NEWTON — The Board of Aldermen Monday night approved a home rule petition to raise dog license fees.

The legislation, which must be approved by state lawmakers, would allow the city to keep the entire proceeds of license fees and remove the county from the collection process.

Under the petition, the $4-to-$7 cost of a license would go to $12. Under the current licensing system, the city recovers $1.75 for each tag with the remainder going to the county. The current structure is $4 for male dogs and spayed females and a $7 charge for non-spayed females.

With enabling legislation, the city would be able pocket the entire dog-tag charge.

Aldermen also approved a resolution requesting Mann make good on a promise to residents abutting the Newton South High School track.

In other action, Aldermen approved:

- betterment assessments on Ashmont Ave.,Dickerman Road, Grove Hill Ave., Howard St., Kensington St., Pratt Drive, Prospect Pk., Ridge Rd., Trinity Terrace, and Rachael Rd. (Aldermen denied a betterment assessment for Lorna Rd.)
- approximately $15,000 in personnel expenses including a pension and special leave.
- $350 for the City Comptroller to attend a conference in Albany, NY.
- $350 to replace a chair in the mayor's office.

Immunization clinic planned for April 28

NEWTON — The Newton Health Department is offering a free immunization clinic for pre-school age children. The clinic will be held on Wednesday, April 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Newton City Hall (Room 202). This the first time a program like this has been available to parents/guardians in Newton and is designed to assist parents/guardians in assuring that their children are protected against diseases such as polio, measles, diphtheria and tetanus.

Any child who will be starting school in September or who will be attending a nursery school or day-care program is required by state law to have the following immunizations: DPT (diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus), primary series (3 injections) booster at age 18 months; Polio, three doses - last dose must be received after two years of age; MMR (measles, mumps, rubella), one dose given after 12 months of age

Parents/guardians are advised to review their child's immunization record now, rather than waiting until September when their child may have to be excluded from school. Parents/guardians wishing to take advantage of this free service should call the Newton Health Department at 552-7058 for an appointment.

Rep. Cohen testifies for House bill placing penalty on discrimination

NEWTON — State Representative David B. Cohen (D-Newton) testified last week in support of a measure he sponsored which would make ethnically-motivated intimidation or vandalism a crime. His comments came in a testimony before the Legislature's Joint Committee on Criminal Justice. Other groups testifying in favor of Cohen's proposal included the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith (ADL), the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the Catholic Archdiocese and the Masschusetts Council of Churches.

"House Bill 5757, the "Anti-Discrimination" bill seeks to combat the wide-spread racially and religiously-motivated crimes that have been increasing at alarming rate," Cohen said. "Such crimes are far too frequent to dismiss as isolated incidents; they display a pattern of prejudice and hatred that it is dismaying to find in these 'enlightened' times."

Cohen cited several recent incidents of racial violence that would be covered under the bill such as "the brutal beating at the Savin Hill "T" stop" and the "racial incidents at Charlestown High School and Newton South High School which impede the education of students in both city and suburban schools alike."

Cohen also mentioned the astronomical rise in the number of anti-Semetic incidents ranging from the "defacing of the home of Holocaust surviver with a crude swastika to the burning of Temple B'nai Jacob in Milton in which five sacred and irreplaceable Torah scrolls were destroyed." According to an ADL report, Massachusetts ranks fourth in the number of anti-Semetic incidents.

"The bill provides stiff penalties for those who have been convicted of racially or religiously-motivated intimidation or violence. It also allows the victims of these acts to sue for damages caused by these acts of prejudice," Cohn concluded, "In a society as diverse as ours, the religious and cultural values of our citizens must be respected. When that respect is allowed to break down, society will begin to crumble. This measure provides a defense against this demise."

Doctors think well of The Gables

Are you sick of your present home? The prescribed way to cure your housing ills is to join the many professional people moving to The Gables in Newton.

Almost all the first 35 two and three bedroom attached single family homes have already been sold, and a healthy number of the next group of 16 have been reserved. When homes like these in the $265,000 to $400,000 range go so quickly there must be good reasons.

And there are many: rooms are huge and offer unusual detailing; decks or courtyard areas are large and private; each home has a full basement and an attached two-car garage. There are tennis courts, a clubhouse and swimming pool. Security includes combined gatehouse/electronic surveillance.

Examine the furnished models any day from 9 to 5 to see why so many doctors have got their check up. Newton's best new address is at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, directly adjacent to the Charles River Country Club. Call (617) 969-0200 for a private appointment.

Landmark Smoker Study:

Merit Earns Taste Trophy.

Rigorous smoker tests confirm MERIT as proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking.

Just released—the results of extensive new research conducted by MERIT.

The conclusion: In tests comparing taste and tar combined, MERIT is the clear choice over leading higher tar brands.

MERIT Remains Unbeaten.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Taste Turning Smokers To MERIT.

In a separate part of this study, smokers report that MERIT taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers say MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Newton Police, City Hall launching anti-crime program

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City workers and citizens are helping the police fight crime.

Cab drivers, plumbers, oil men and hundreds of city workers who use two-way radios car radios will be an additional crime fighting unit under the police Crime Prevention Program kicked off Wednesday at City Hall.

During an annual meeting with Police Chief William F. Quinn and several department heads, Mayor Theodore Mann said Newton's 326 radio-controlled vehicles will report suspicious persons and activities. Non-city employees who use two-way radios are also being encouraged to call police and report crimes.

It is advantageous for police to utilize these people for crime prevention because they are familiar with the city and its neighborhoods, Mann said.

Quinn stated that people need to be on the look-out for crime now. He said the winter weather deterred thieves and vandals but crime would rise in the spring, particularly because people keep their windows open.

"Our goal is to keep crime at a minimum. If more people are observant, the safer our community will be," Quinn said.

Included among the dozens of city departments participating in the program are building, engineering, fire and health departments. Human services, licensing, planning, recreaction and schools have also been alerted. Public Works, with 125 radio-equiped vehicles, will have the greatest number of people watching for crime.

The crime watchers, whose vehicles are marked with blue and white crime watch stickers, are trained to observe and alert police dispatchers if they see someting suspicious.

"If you call us, we'll check it out," said Police Lt. Charles Feeley. "And we won't say you're stupid if we check it out and the person turns out to be legitimate," Feeley said. Participants are trained through community services on who or what to look for during crime prevention.

Neighborhood Crime Watch has existed since 1978 though this is the first year police have used people with two-way radios.

"Everywhere that we've had neighborhood watch, we've been able to deter crimes, whether it was a mail carrier, homemaker or city worker who called," stated Feeley.

Feeley said further that crime watch is not only effective for fighting crime, but also inexpensive since most participants already own radio systems for their private use.

Further information on the program can be obtained through community services, 552-7252.

Public Works union files suit on proposed trash crew cuts

By Donna Lombardi
and Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writers

NEWTON — Public Works Department Union leaders Thursday filed suit against the city charging unfair labor practices following a budget recommendation to eliminate 15 positions on trash pick-up teams.

About 250 members of AFSCME Local 800 Thursday morning held what was termed a "work stoppage" to discuss the recommended cuts in the FY83 budget. Mayor Theodore Mann presented the budget package to aldermen last night for a 45-day review.

Union officials, who met for 45-minutes in front of the Crafts Street DPW building, claimed the city acted "illegally" by recommending the cuts prior to negotiations with the union.

Mann, however, said the union leaders were aware of the proposal that calls for the reduction in manpower on the rubbish pick-up teams from two-man to one-man crews. "It's been floating around for months," said Mann.

"It's a violation of Chapter 158 of the collective bargainning laws," said State Spokesman John Harvey. "The issue has not been negotiated."

Harvey said Local Union President Daniel MacLaren and Vice President Robert Hand called the stoppage as "the union's good faith measure to inform the mebership" that the administration's recommendation had not been negotiated with the union.

Mann, who said in his budget message to aldermen that the jobs would be absorbed through attrition, called the work stoppage "inappropriate."

MacLaren and Hand were both in Boston Thursday afternoon to discuss the action with state union leaders, where they decided to file suit with the Massachusetts Labor Relations Board.

"For safety reasons, you need two men to a truck," said Robert Hamilton, a 25-year veteran of public works and dispatcher for the Craft Street building. "It's a job that's almost impossible to do with one person."

Thomas, however, maintains that the "shu-pack" trucks which the city uses for trash pick-up can be operated by one man. He has noted that one-man crews have worked successfully in several mid-western cities including Pontiac, Michigan. Pontiac is about the size of Newton.

Several aldermen disagreed with Mann's recommendation calling the idea "insane." Some board members felt a reduction in manpower on the trash crews would also lead to a greater number of compensation cases.

"I find it highly unrealistic to expect one man to drive the truck, to throw the barrel and for that type of ordeal not to kill himself in three months," said Alderman Joseph DePasquale. "That proposal is just short of insanity."

The city uses 17 trash trucks, 16 operated by two-man crews and one operated by a three-man team. According to Thomas, 15 of the vehicles would be reduced to one worker under the budget proposal.

Said Mann: "I'm looking for viable options to benefit city taxpayers, run city departments as economically as possible and not do injury to city workers." The department's workforce will be cut from 249 hourly personnel to 221, a loss of 28 positions at a savings of more than $600,000.

Several city workers thought the proposal was an attempt by the mayor to start the wheels in motion for private trash collection in Newton. In 1976, Mann attempted to send the city's rubbish collection out to private bid, but altered his stance after aldermen refused to fund the contractual service.

If the service were to go out to a private contractor, the city would save the cost of paying workmen's compensation, vacation pay and sick leave.

Mann declined to comment on whether or not he is moving toward private trash collection except to say, "Everything is an option."

Aldermanic Public Facilities Committee Chairman Richard McGrath was upset with the administration's proposal. He noted that the Board of Aldermen had appropriated $40,000 for a city trash study last year, the results of which have yet to be released.

"It's very bothersome to me that the city has seemingly implemented a policy decision unilaterally without input from the Public Facilities Committee," said McGrath. "They're going to have to convince me that they can operate safely with one man."

Housing for the elderly

Hard work, tenacity and hope pay off

By Kevin C. Kennedy
Correspondent

NEWTON — After four and a half years of hard work, hope and hanging on, Cooperative Living of Newton, Inc., finally has something to show for its efforts to close the housing gap for older people in Newton.

What it has to show is a very nice Victorian home on Newtonville Ave., which represents the group's "dogged tenacity" in the past and a promise for the realization of similar projects in the future.

Cooperative living is a relatively new concept for communal housing which, according to project director Virginia Robinson," is really based on the interdependence of us all.

"It's more like a family than anything else," said Robinson in a recent interview. "It's a place for people who no longer can or no longer want to live alone for a variety of reasons." Among those reasons are lack of finances, health problems, lonliness, isolation and lack of security.

> 'You could tell that you could bring someone thinking of the project to the house and they would say 'Indeed, that is a home in which I would like to live' because it has that feeling to it.'

It is Robinson's hope that, by summer, the house on Newtonville Ave. will have ten carefully selected occupants, "primarily over 55, who have a genuine interest in shared living and the ability to make it work."

According to Maeve Ward, a social worker who has been involved with the project for years, "the type of clients we want to live in the house have to be able to perform activities of daily living. Cooperative living is designed to accomodate those who are still mentally and physically fit. This is not a nursing home. It is not an apartment building. It is not a boarding house. It is its own thing.

"People can have all sorts of physical problems and still be able to live in this house," Ward added. "A person could be blind and perfectly able to take care of himself."

Robinson said of the prospective residents of the house on Newtonville Ave., "I hope they will be people who have the energy for this experimental kind of thing. The people who live in the house are going to make the decisions on how the house is to be run. That takes a person with a spirit of adventure."

According to Robinson, the cooperative living project began more than four years ago when "Some of the ministers in Newton noticed in their congregations that there were older people who did not really have a good place to live."

The first step was an assessment of the housing needs of older people in Newton, where the vacancy rate has hovered around one percent for years. "We wanted to get a representative sampling of older people and find out if thery were interested. We did not think it appropriate to busy ourselves developing something unless people said, 'We want it. We need it. Yes, we like the idea,'" Robinson explained.

The original interviews produced "about 17 people who said, 'Yes, I really want to live in this kind of arrangement. It would be really good for me,'" according to Robinson. But she hastened to add that finding the right people was only one of the three pieces essential to the puzzle. The other two, finding the right place and the money to buy it, were considerably more difficult to get a handle on.

"For money," Robinson said, "we first went to the churches. We got some money from them, and then we had to try to get some public money. We explored state and federal money, and we were unable to get either. Public money is really drying up. There are not that many sources for this kind of thing anyway."

Finally, Robinson and the others involved in the project had to borrow money from a local bank. "That was about two years ago and, about that time, the mortgage interest rates just went wild. So we really had to drop the idea for the time being," Robinson said.

Beverly Smith, another "prime mover" in the cooperative housing project, interjected that the idea was never really dropped, regardlesss of the apparently adverse financial climate.

Smith said, "It has never been dormant. People have been working for four solid years. And these people, through all that time, have continued in spite of the dificulties and the frustrations of the vicious circle: 'You can't get the money until you have a house and you can't get a house until you have the money.'"

Smith feels the final acquisition of the house on Newtonville Ave. means the project has gone beyond the problems that plagued it in its beginning stages. "As in anything you try to do, the first time is always the most difficult to get off the ground. There is a reserve, a skepticism. There is a feeling of, 'Prove it to me.' But once you've got one going, it's always a lot easier," she said.

In the end, and in spite of governmental claims of substantial concern for the problems of older people, the money for the first house came from the private sector. "Right now, we're putting together a package that is all private money. There's some foundation money. There are some gifts from churches and some low-interest loans from churches," Robinson said.

With the need for cooperative housing assessed and a large part of the needed money available, the only missing piece was a suitable house. "It had to be some place that had real easy access to stores and transportation, and that restricted us a bit," said Beverly Smith. "Another consideration was the condition of the house and how much it was going to cost to fix it up and make it suitable for anywhere from 10 to 14 people.

"How this present house came about is very fortuitous, or providential," Smith said. Apparently, two of her sons were painting the house at 390 Newtonville Ave. in the course of a summer job. Her older son told her how nice the house was. "I went down and looked at the house and fell in love with it," she said, and described it as being Victorian in design, about 100 years old, with 13 rooms.

"It has a couple of very large rooms downstairs, panelled in mahogany, and a great big tiled fireplace," she said, and added that the house also has a large porch and yard.

Smith said about the house, "You could tell that you could bring someone thinking of this project to the house and they would say, 'Indeed, that is a home in which I would like to live,' because it has that feeling to it."

Decisions concerning how the home is run will be made by those living in it, but, if advice is needed, a newly formed advisory committee of local community leaders could be of invaluable assistance. The committee includes Mayor Theodore Mann, State Rep. David B. Cohen, Newton Alderperson Ethel Sheehan, Rev. David Allen of the Congregational Church of Newton Highlands, Rabbi Murray I. Rothman of Temple Shalom of Newton, Rev. Ned Martin of the Second Church of Newton, Executive Director of Cooperative Metropolitan Ministries Marvera Murphy, and former alderman David W. Jackson.

Those wanting more information on cooperative living in Newton should call Eve Rooke at the Central Congregational Church, 527-8803.

Spring Footwear

Nautical Fashions — Full Steam Ahead

The nautical look is making waves in teen sportswear for spring, and summer will see lots of "sailors" sporting middy blouses and sailor pants in crisp fabrics and clean lines.

A big reason for the look's popularity, say footwear fashion experts at Scholl, is that nautical styles are easy to wear and ready for action anytime, anywhere. That's important to today's fitness-minded teens, because the jaunty, sensible spring fashions look great at school, at the beach, and on the way to sports events.

Exercise Sandals are the perfect mate to these summertime looks. As feet flex and bend with each step in the sandals, muscles in the legs reap toning and shaping benefits. In fact, just walking in the sandals is a terrific way to exercise.

Classic Colors

And this year, ship-shape classic colors of red, white and blue make the fashion footwear scene, to coordinate with bright sailor looks.

From top to toe, the coast is clearly nautical in the sportswear fashion forecast for Summer '82.

Keep the Lush Liveliness Of Your Spring Leathers

It looks like leather will be lingering into spring.

Lightened and brightened, spring fashions are bringing soft and supple suedes and leathers in fruitbasket colors—melon, peach, plum, and berry.

Gone with the winter winds are the stiff, bulky, warming skins. Welcome lightweight, silky-soft and easy-care leathers.

You'll find the spring leathers looking and acting like the delicate fabrics of spring: draped, tucked, painted, embossed and corded.

Really spring are leather laces, with their perforated designs that lighten the look even more.

An Investment

Available in all price ranges, leather is still a long-term investment. The casual, yet luxurious look of leather will remain for years with proper care, according to the International Fabricare Institute (IFI), the association of drycleaning professionals who keep the life in leather.

Don't let the comfort and casualness of leather lull you into abusing the fabric. It deserves the special consideration you give the other investments in your life.

But, if an accidental spill occurs, know what to do first and know a trusted drycleaner who can finish repairing the damage.

Act Quickly

Accidental spills of foodstuff, milk and blood must be removed immediately, before they dry, advises IFI. A soft cloth dampened in cool water will remove a great many of these water-soluble stains.

Use the cloth gently with soft leather. Do not rub, IFI warns.

IFI suggests a patting procedure, feathering out and blotting the soiled area with a clean turkish towel.

Allow the garment to dry at room temperature as you flex the area.

After the blotted area has dried, brush with a dry, soft-bristled brush or suede sponge.

Oily, greasy stains will penetrate soft skins quickly and leave a permanent stain if you don't remove them at once. Pat the area with a soft, absorbent cloth to pick up all surplus grease, and bring the garment to your drycleaner as soon as possible.

Alcohol Stains

Sugar and alcohol can also be disastrous to leathers. If you don't remove spilled fruit juices, coffee, tea, colas, perfume and alcoholic beverages at once, the stains will set with time and heat and may be impossible to remove, even by professionals.

Immediately attend to sugar and alcohol spills the same as food spills and bring the garment in to your drycleaner as soon as possible.

Don't even attempt to remove lipstick, ballpoint or other inks. A leather-cleaning specialist is your only hope for the removal of dye stains.

Some other keep-clean advice from IFI includes:

• Avoid using cleaning fluids, saddle soap, wire brushes, steel wool or other abrasives on fine leathers.

Give Your Growing Plants A Good Head Start

Growing plants in flats indoors can be fun and will insure that your floral or food crops will mature far more swiftly than any in the neighborhood which have been conventionally grown.

A plant growth fluorescent lamp will give your plants all the radiant energy they need to grow swiftly and well indoors before the frost season ends. Once frost danger has passed; the plants can be placed outdoors for an increasing amount of time daily to harden them, and placed in the garden in about five days.

To raise plants indoors, the soil should be insect-free. If insect-free soil cannot be purchased, garden soil can be sterilized by baking it for about 1½ hours in a 400° oven. When ready to use, the organic material burned out of it can be replaced by tossing a couple of handfuls of peat moss into it.

Once the plants are growing, you must remember that they will require the same amount of food to reach a particular size as they would over a longer period of time, if raised by conventional methods. A plant maturing in six weeks in the sun, for instance, might mature in four weeks under the lamp and in those four weeks use the same food and water the others did in six weeks.

Pamper Yourself...

Plunge into Popular Pearls

When it's spring again, you know it is time to change your fashion look, and the best way to do this is to treat yourself to pearls. These gems have a fresh, new, and original look this season. Cultured pearls are blended with diamonds, gold, and other gemstones and are often enhanced by captivating stones in clasps or stations, reports the Jewelry Industry Council. Detachable clasps make convenient pendants or pins, too.

PEARLS ARE PERENNIAL FAVORITES, either in multi-strand necklaces of small pearls, or pearls mixed with colored stones or chains. Here, a multi-strand necklace and bracelet are set off with a colorful gold flower with a pearl center. Look for odd-shaped, large Mabe pearls in rings and pins in the season ahead.

Pearls flatter your complexion and complement the fashion colors that are a major story this spring; as turquoise and dramatic black and white with a touch of red take the lead. A variety of small seed pearls, and slightly larger Keshi pearls are on the scene, too, in multi-strand necklaces. Splendid and large, abstract-shaped pearls come into their own in outstanding pendants, pins, and rings. There are also rich, lustrous shades of color blossoming in pearls. Mother nature provides many to choose from such as rose, apricot, lavender, mauve, pink, and gold. Designers have also dreamed up beautiful hues in greens and browns, as well as creating black and grey pearls.

These versatile gems can be worn to dress up or dress down any wardrobe to suit your mood. Pearls can transform you—that is the message for spring. Style-conscious women are able to achieve exciting, new looks by mixing pearls, chains and beads. And the latest jewelled headband worn across the forehead, originally inspired by the joggers and tennis players has eye-catching appeal. Pearl pins, stick pins, or stud earrings on contrasting colored headbands can be a fashion setter. Pearls are a valued treasure that will last for years to come, declares the Jewelry Industry Council. And they are a great addition to your jewelry collection. So, be ready for spring with pearls.

Legend of Spring

The Greeks explain spring as the gesture of a grateful mother.

Demeter, goddess of the harvest, was heartbroken when the King of Hades kidnapped her daughter Persephone. The goddess kept the earth frozen and barren until Pluto agreed to return Persephone, with the understanding that the young maiden would spend four months of the year in Hades. Demeter, in gratitude, made the world fertile again.

Chaperone

In the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries, women frequently wore small hoods called chaperones. In time the older woman who accompanied a young woman in society came to be known as a chaperone since, metaphorically, the experienced married woman sheltered the youthful debutante as a hood sheltered the face.

• It was a custom among the Hindus to present garlands of blossoms as a gesture of friendliness to respected strangers.

BUTTERFLIES ARE FREE and so are these two young friends dressed in the latest springtime fashion by Health-tex. Delicate, sweet pink and white stripes on seersucker captures the spring spirit of youthful femininity. The lace-trimmed jumpers feature piqué bibs accented with bows or butterflies, while the blouse collar trim repeats the same theme.

Flowering Folklore

Throughout the world, our ancestors had great faith in the power of flowers. Specific beliefs varied in different parts of the world, but basic mystical convictions abounded:

• Mistletoe was depended upon to produce fertility. In the Torres Strait, twins could be expected by any woman who clutched mistletoe. Our own custom of kissing under the mistletoe is referred to back in 1792. As suggested by the publication entitled "The Country Magazine," kissing under mistletoe was "no doubt the surest way to prove prolific."

• In Derbyshire, it was a common belief that the gender of the next master of the house depended upon the prickliness or smoothness of the holly brought into the house during Christmas. Smooth holly meant the wife would rule, while prickly holly meant the husband would have control.

• Rosy cheeks were assured in various sections of Italy, France and Germany if you buried a drop of your blood beneath a rose tree.

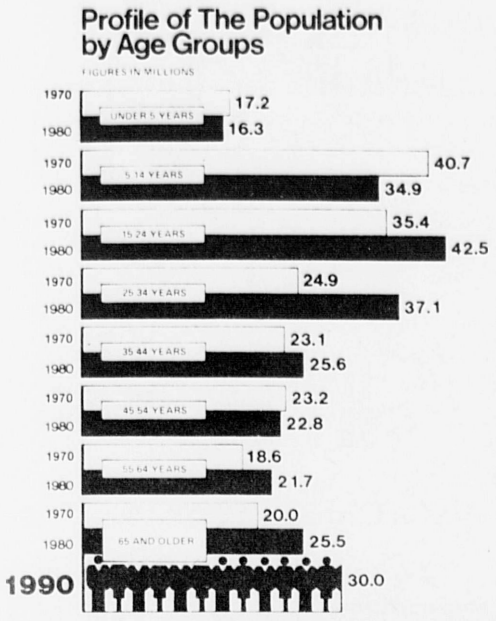
Health and Nutrition Education For Our Many Older Americans



THE IMPORTANCE OF THE HEALTH OF OLDER AMERICANS gains recognition as they begin to represent an ever-increasing portion of the population. ITT Continental Baking Co. recently co-sponsored a study to improve nutrition education for the elderly.

In 20 years there will be 30 million people in this country over the age of 65. This is a vast group of citizens whose vigor and well-being—or lack of it—will markedly affect political, social and financial affairs.

Nutrition education is crucial to the health of older Americans, yet the elderly lack an accurate knowledge of how to eat well. During a recent Convocation of Nutrition Education for Older Americans, co-sponsored by ITT Continental Baking Company and the American Dietetic Association, it was noted that older Americans do make an effort to eat properly but they don't consume the proper amounts from each food group.

Many of the elderly are aware of the importance of vitamins, but not what each contributes to daily health. They mistakenly believe that natural vitamins are superior to synthetic vitamins, and that a vitamin pill can magically repair a poorly balanced diet.

According to Dr. Myron Winick of the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons, we are just now learning that an older person is not simply a young person who has lived many more years. Research aimed at determining nutrition requirements specifically for the elderly has just begun, he notes.

Nevertheless, it is known that many older Americans exist on diets deficient in protein, calcium, iron and vitamins. They need information on how to shop for and prepare proper foods. Some have bad teeth so they can't chew, some are quite poor, some are depressed and disinterested in food and others are misled by diet fads and so-called "cure-alls."

Because we all will be older Americans one day, research in nutrition for seniors is everyone's concern.

A series of leaflets on nutrition for the elderly, developed and distributed by ITT Continental Baking Company as part of its $750,000 program in this area, contains such tips as:

• Dried fruits, cheese, nuts and puddings are nourishing snack choices.

A packet of free leaflets on nutrition for the elderly can be obtained by writing to Nutrition Program, Continental Baking Co., P.O. Box 731, Rye, New York 10580.

Watches For Good Times

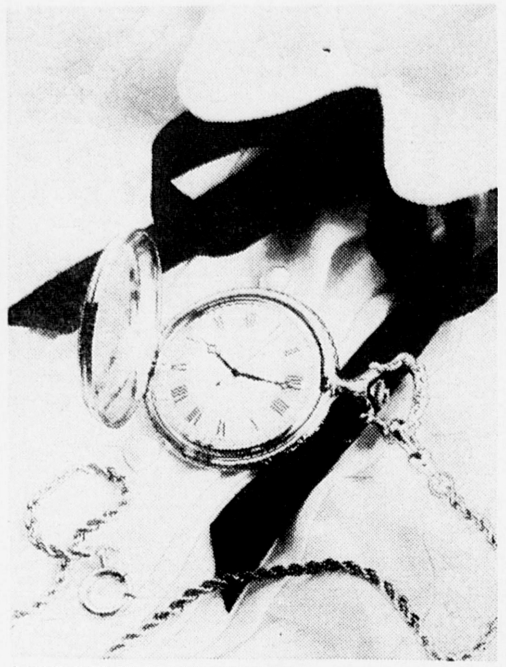
What's in store for fashion this spring? Skirts will be softer and shorter, blouses worn bigger and shirtier, and dresses cut narrow without being snug. Men's styles will be classy and elegant—jackets, shirts and trousers designed with a tailored, clean look.

Clothes will be colorful, well-cut and, most importantly, properly accented. Clutter is out and accessories should be limited to only those that really count. A watch, for instance, being practical and stylish, makes a strong fashion statement.

The wide selection by Timex offers a variety of timepieces to complement—and compliment—this season's ready-to-wear. Some feature sporty leather straps while others wrap the wrist with expansion bands or integrated bracelets. Dials display Roman or Arabic numerals, simple stick markers or digital readouts. Other added attractions are day/date and calendar windows and sweep-second hands.

Mechanisms range from the manual wind-up to the no-wind automatic and battery-powered quartz. Whichever fits your fancy, you can be sure it will wear very well.

Also on hand are distinctive pocket watches that come with open or shut cases. Worn around the neck on a chain or ribbon, they add an inexpensive touch of class to many a spring outfit.



A FINELY EMBOSSED POCKET WATCH by Timex opens up to a classic dial. Worn in the pocket or around the neck, it's a perfect foil for his and her spring wardrobe

DIG INTO SPRING—plant a garden. It's the season to enjoy the out doors!

THE WORLD of Travel

by Hank Fleming

JET LAG

"Circadian Biorythmicity" is the scientific name given to the lethargy which many travelers call jet lag. A closer look at these symptoms reveals that much of this feeling may be due to too much food and the wrong kind of drink. Here are some tips to minimize the problem. Do not feel compelled to eat every morsel of food set before you. If the captain warns of turbulence ahead, eat even less. Eating less will help you dose more easily. Above 35,000 feet, digestive processes are somewhat in a state of disarray. Forgo rich foods as well. Decreased air pressure at this altitude expands the gas in soft drinks by 20%, and liquor is almost twice as potent.

Our travel agents at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham can do much more for you than just offer expert advice on how best to deal with jet lag. We can issue a ticket for the most direct flight at the best possible price, arrange hotel and resort accommodations, meals, sightseeing and entertainment. In short, we do everything except help you pack. there is never any additional charge to you for our service. Call us today at 899-5658. Open: Mon.-Sat. 9-5:30, Fri. 'til 8.

Fashion News For the Men In Your Life

Subtle, easy-going elegance with softer colors and designs leads the way in spring fashions for men.

The sweater looks to be this season's more casual alternative to the popular vest, either worn alone or under a sport coat. The accent is on gentler pastel shades and the patterning is becoming more subdued. Breezy knits and cool cottons are seen in such colors as coral, mauve, peach, lavender, yellow and grey.

In active sportswear, the nautical look has set sail, firmly anchored to the traditional striped boat neck tops and white pants. The emphasis is on casual comfort with seaworthy style.

The blouson jacket is a must this spring and it pairs up perfectly with white sport casual pants. A variation on this theme is the blouson top with compatible side or front-pleated pants, following the current trend toward sweatpants fullness and slightly pegged bottoms.

• A festival called the "Feast of Roses" was celebrated each year by the Persians. This celebration lasted the entire time the roses were in bloom.

Knock Around in Knickers

THIS SEASON'S SASSIEST STYLE offers casual comfort with a touch of class.

New For Spring '82

Fresh and fabulous is the trend for Spring '82. Fabrics abound with an assortment of cottons, lightweight terrycloth, polyester-blend broadcloths and khakis predominating.

Blouses are coming back, with bibs being the focal point. Pleating, ribbing and tucking reflect the befitting younger-than-springtime spirit.

Seagoing stripes are very big with reds, whites and blues emphasizing the many nautical themes.

Bronze, copper and gold metallics continue to glow, but more subtly this year, adding spark to leather and leather looks.

The Santa Fe feeling with rich canyon colors, Navajo prints, and fringed tunics and shawls reflect our historic southwestern heritage.

Proportion is essential this season with loose blouson tops and jackets contrasted with flirty snug-to-the-hip minis or ankle hugging pants.

Pedal Your Way to Beauty!

Radiant good health, which contributes so much to beauty, is always in fashion. There are few things that contribute so much, so pleasantly to this goal as cycling in the great outdoors.

Cycling is perfect for helping achieve and keep the trim waistline, firm thighs and calves and slender ankles that make a girl look so right in this spring's short shorts.

Rollin' on at 75

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — Elizabeth Plimpton's family has been rolling along for more than 100 years.

So at the age of 75, Plimpton, is keeping the family tradition alive. Each Tuesday morning the former high school physical education teacher heads for the Wallex Roller Skating Rink in Waltham. Wearing her best pair of freshly polished white skates, Plimpton spends the next two carefree hours rolling around the rink.

"I'm probably a little old for this," she says with a chuckle. According to regular skaters at the rink, Plimpton is probably the oldest skater at the Wallex.

Plimpton's grandfather was James Leonard Plimpton, who in 1860 invented the first "modern" roller skate. A Belgium man is credited with attaching wheels to ice skates several years earlier. However Plimpton, who was a New York businessman, created the classic lightweight metal skate with leather staps. Both James Plimpton and his son modified the original design, eventually adding ball bearings and "stoppers" at the toe. Roller skating shot to the top of the charts as the nation's favorite pasttime.

"One of my friends claims that my grandfather liberated women," says Plimpton. "When roller skating came along, it was the thing to do."

As a little girl, Plimpton loved to roller skate too. She remembers skating "everywhere" in Newton. "St. Paul Street was a great street to whiz down - me and my pig tails flying behind me!"

Charge search rules changed

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — School Committee member Katherine Jones charged Monday that some members of the committee were "changing the rules at the end of the game" in their reasons for favoring superintendent finalist Dr. John Strand over Dr. Percy Clark, Jr.

No vote will be taken until Thursday, but, after hearing members Ann Berwick and Marcia Mitchell cite Strand's current experience as a superintendent of the Pelham (N.Y.) schools as reasons for their support, Jones said she was "very alarmed" if that was a criteria for selection.

Clark, who is black, is currently assistant superintendent of instruction for the Shaker Heights, Ohio, schools.

"That was never, never mentionned in all the times that we discussed (criteria for) this position," Jones said harshly. "It was not men-

Quinn silent on some cutbacks

NEWTON — Police Chief William Quinn has been forced to make certain budget cuts which he is keeping a secret in an attempt to prevent a criminal groundswell.

"We have some very serious things that we don't do now that's not for public consumption," Quinn told the aldermanic Public Safety Committee Monday night. "I don't think if certain things are done away with the criminal element should know what they are."

> 'I don't think if certain things are done away with the criminal element should know what they are.'

Quinn agreed to tell aldermen privately of the cuts, but refused to disclose the cutbacks to the press, fearing an increase in criminal activity.

Quinn admitted the cuts were forced by fiscal pressures imposed by Proposition 2½. He refused to confirm or deny that the cuts included burglary patrols.

When asked how the proposed cuts in the FY 1983 budget, including the elimination of one position, would affect public safety, Quinn said he could "live with" the reductions.

Quinn said the department has not yet finished compiling statistics on city crime for the first six months of the 1982.

He noted that if the force were operating on a five-day work week rather than the four-day, two-day-off week won by the police union in 'Getting even' in Middlesex Co.

Election year stumping

By Richard Lodge
Graphic Editor

NEWTON–Jeanne Kangas not only wants to change Middlesex County - she wants to "get even" in the process.

Kangas, a Boxborough selectman, is president of the group "Change Middlesex County" and has been stumping throughout the area trying to raise interest in the bi-partisan group.

With the legislature giving cities and towns control over county budgets this year, Kangas wants to raise awareness of what county officials do and what the county can and can't do for taxpayers.

Gaining this new budget control is "half the battle," she says.

"The other half is electing another county commissioner who can administer and is committed to change the incumbent mess called Middlesex County," she said in a recent interview.

"It's time to take back the county," Kangas asserted. "It's time we wised up to the fact that we are victims of self-serving county politicians."

Kangas does not mince words. Although she heads a bi-partisan group, she does not hide her likes and dislikes.

And high on her list of dislikes is current County Commissioner John Danehy.

"Under the chairmanship of Danehy county jobs were allotted according to who you knew, and not what you were qualified to do," Kangas contends. "Contracts, secretly approved, jeopardize the financial stability of the county health insurance program and limit county access to the historic Bulfinch Courthouse in Cambridge."

During Danehy's chairmanship, Kangas claims, a federal funds coodinator was appointed for the county "when there were no federal funds to coordinate" and a supervisor of plumbers for the county was "assigned to the budget office for the commissioners" without, she contends, any budget experience.

To commissioners like Danehy, Kangas says, "a county job is a means of giving some of the taxpayers' dollars to one of their (commissioners') cronies."

Kangas is stumping against "the ones who run for office not to serve but to make a buck."

Through Change Middlesex County, she says, she wants people to "questions authority and take control. People have to try to make government do whatever it is they want it to do."

Although in this election year it may be too early to tell what impact the group will have, the recent Middlesex Citizens' County Caucus in Lexington, did reveal endorsements of which Kangas heartily approves.

Candidate William Schmidt

Among those who won approval from the 300 people attending the caucs were political newcomer William Schmidt of Newton, endorsed for county commissioner; Register of Deeds candidate John Zamparelli, representing the southern portion of Middlesex; and Paul Cavanaugh, candidate for Middlesex County district attorney.

Schmidt was given a strong endorsement by the caucus and was nominated from the floor by former county Sheriff John Buckley.

The Newton resident received almost three times the number of votes tallied by incumbent Commissioner Danehy, who did not attend.

District attorney candidate Cavanaugh won 187 votes while

Marathon man recalls running's early days

By Donna Lombardi

NEWTON — When 60-year-old Joshua Hurwitz runs in the Boston Marathon Monday, he won't plan on winning.

"Winning isn't everything - just finishing is," says Hurwitz, of Chestnut Hill. "I just enjoy it."

A physician at the Waltham Hospital Medical Building,

Runner Joshua Hurwitz

Hurwitz ran the marathon in 1945, when he placed 18th out of 250 runners. The marathon and running have changed a lot since then.

More than 8000 will officially run in the event this year. "It used to be that there could be two or three minutes between runners. Now there's somebody within 15 or 20 feet of you until the end," says Hurwitz. Public spirit towards the event is much more uplifting for today's runners, according to Hurwitz.

In 1945, people made fun of runners. "People laughed at you," remembers Hurwitz, a life-long resident of Newton and Newton High School graduate.

Running, whether in the world famous marathon or down Washington Street, wasn't nearly as popular as it is today. "People would say, 'Who's this crazy guy in his underwear,'" says Hurwitz. Running shoes weren't

Scale down of office plan requested by board

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Aldermanic Land Use Commitee Monday asked developer Robert Danziger to scale down his proposal for a three-story, 28,385 square foot office building on Washington Street and Neshobe Road in Auburndale.

The committee failed to move a request from Danziger, a Newton resident, for a zone change on the 97,441 square foot parcel. As presented, the office building would be 36 feet high on the Washington Street side and 24 feet in height on the parking lot side.

After listening to protests from area residents, the committee voted to hold the item upon review of an impact analysis of possible alternative zone changes by the city Planning Department.

Danziger said he will pay developer Martin Roach between $400,000 and $450,000 for the parcel. Danziger's company, Northland of Newton Inc., developed the Marshall Shopping Center on Needham Street in 1979.

Past proposals for the site, including one in October 1980 by Blue Cross/ Blue Shield, have been denied by the Board of Aldermen.

"We're trying to be as responsive to the concerns of the neighborhood as possible," noted Danziger. "I am willing to consider some possible reductions."

Loretta Kowal, a neighborhood representative, said she was against the "massive density of the building" and a "change in zone."

The petitioner has requested a change of zone from Residence B District to Business AA District. Both the city Planning Department and the city Planning and Development Board have recommended approval of the project.

Due to city budget deliberations, the Land Use Committee will not take up the item again until May 24. Four aldermen — Ethel Sheehan, Matthew Jefferson, Dominic Taglieri and Cynthia Creem said they would vote in favor of a zone change to Business AA if the building was scaled down.

Chairman Terry Morris was of the opinion that a decision on the project should not be made in a "vacuum." He felt that other options, in-

What a storm it was!

Last week's storm didn't seem to stop people in Newton from getting around. Roger Colson (above, left) bought his groceries and waited for a bus in Newton Corner; Grove Calkins had his goods and managed a smile in the storm; and a couple hopped across snow mounds after crossing Washington Street in Newtonville during the blizzard.

Driver hurt in accident plans $3-5 million suit

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The attorney for a Newton man who lost a foot three weeks ago following an accident with a school bus is filing a $3 to $5 million law suit against the bus company and one of its drivers.

According to Attorney Jack I. Zalkind, Vernon Porter Jr., 18, of Langley Rd., Newton Centre, is seeking damages from the Bob Charles Transportation Company of Boston and its employee, Paul Snow, 67, of Quincy, the driver involved in the March 25 accident.

Porter's left foot was amputated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital after a collison with the bus that morning on Route 9 and Parker Street. Porter became pinned in his 1972 GMC pickup after the bus filled with METCO school children allegedly struck him.

Robert Charles, owner of the bus company, refused to comment on the accident or the suit. He told The News Tribune to "Look at the accident report" for any information. Charles would not say if Snow was still employed by the company.

Rescuers spent more than 1½ hours trying to remove Porter from the crushed vehicle. Officials on the scene explained that Porter's left leg was caught between the truck's floor board and the front bumper of the bus.

A 17-year-old female passenger in Porter's truck was not trapped. She was immediately taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital, treated for facial injuries and released that night. Some 13 of 30 children on the bus, METCO pupils from Wellesley schools, were treated and released for minor injuries. At the time of the accident, 12:25 p.m., the children being driven back to their Boston homes. The bus driver was reported "shaken up" by the incident though he was not injured.

Zalkind disclaimed the bus driver's statement made to police following the accident. According to a Newton Police accident report, Snow said that Porter's vehicle struck the bus. Snow also claimed that he was driving about three miles per hour after stopping at a stop sign before turning left onto the bridge over Route 9.

At the scene of the accident, the truck was forced up against the sidewalk of the bridge. The front end of the bus was pushed into the left side of the pickup and the two vehicles became entangled. Rescuers could not separate the vehicles without severing Porter's leg, police said.

The Registry of Motor Vehicles, whose officers were at the scene of the accident, is required to investigate all accidents involving school buses. Inspector Daniel Bono, who is investigating the incident, could not be reached Friday.

Zalkind said that the $3-5 million Porter is seeking is based on mental anguish and the loss of the ability to work. "We still have to find out what the prognosis is for Vernon's condition. The final decision of the doctors has not been made," said Zalkind.

Porter's father said that his son is in good condition and good spirits. The older Porter said his son would probably remain in the hospital for at least two more months.

opponent Scott Harshbarger polled 138. Incumbent DA John Droney, who has a physical disability which hampers his speech, did not attend the caucus. Droney has been criticized recently for running for reelection, in spite of the disability which some say restricts his effectiveness.

Edward Garguilo, also a candidate for Droney's position, arrived at the caucus after nominations were closed. Garguilo blasted the event afterwards, calling it "a sham" and "politics at its worst."

In an apparent "oversight" Garguilo was not even invited to the caucus until he received a personal letter from Kangas, four days before the event.

Citing his anger with the way the caucus was run Garguilo said in a press release, "The caucus was an attempt by Scott Harshbarger supporters to bolster his campaign with an endorsement by a supposed disinterested good-government group which, in fact, had no intention of supporting anyone but its own, predetermined hand-picked candidates."

Garguilo claimed "the plan backfired. Paul Cavanaugh, bent on playing the 'stack-the-caucus' game, literally arrived with busloads of supporters and stole the endorsement."

"Instead of concentrating on stacking such caucuses, the candidates ought to be focusing on bringing their respective positions to the public."

Although Garguilo, Danehy and Droney appear to disagree with the slant of the Change Middlesex County group, it does number dozens of state and local officials on its membership roster.

Included from Newton are State Representatives David Cohen and Susan Schur and Alderman Carol Ann Shea.

Two state senators, Carol Amick and Samuel Rotondi, are on the list of supporters as well as 13 state representatives, two former state reps and former County Sheriff Buckley.

Newton resident is planning Art in Bloom museum benefit

NEWTON — Spring is just around the corner for one Newton resident who is already at work planning "Art in Bloom," a major benefit for the Museum of Fine Arts.

Mrs. Champe A. Fisher, West Newton, a member of the Museum's Ladies Committee, is serving as chairman of this colorful event which will open to the public April 27 and continues through April 29.

"Art in Bloom is a wonderful way to herald spring," Mrs. Fisher said, "combining the fine arts of the Museum with the flower arranging talents of more than 50 Garden Club representatives, and especially after this long, drab winter. It really lifts one's spirits just to be planning this festival of flowers and art."

A major annual Museum fund-raising event, "Art in Bloom" will feature guided walks through flower-filled galleries, daily luncheons and fashion shows, demonstrations and talks by gardening experts, a children's program, and the opportunity to tour the Museum's exhibitions. The benefit is a three-day event (April 27, 28 and 29).

"This year's theme is gardens from around the world," Mrs. Fisher explained, "and we are fortunate to have noted horticulturists present talks on English, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese gardens, as well as exotic demonstrations by our own Ladies Committee members. But the highlights of our art in Bloom celebrations have always been the spectacular flower displays arranged by participating garden clubs whose representatives have been inspired by one of the museum's treasure floral paintings and other works of art."

Mrs. Fisher has been a member of the Museum's Ladies Committee since 1978 and has served as chairman of the Lewis Hine (photographer) Exhibition opening, chairman of the "Fine Art of Living" benefit inaugurated in 1981, and was co-chairman of the 1980 Art in Bloom benefit. Her other activities at the Museum of Fine Arts have included working on new members' receptions, serving as a volunteer guide and providing assistance at the Information Desk.

The Museum's Ladies Committee marked its 25th anniversary in 1981. Members of this committee donate their time and talents to promote participation in Museum activities, foster public support, increase Museum membership, and assist on special events.

In addition to her Museum of Fine Arts responsibilities, Mrs. Fisher is a member of the Newton Center Garden Club, Deacon, Second Church in Newton, past co-chairman, Newton United Fund, and former director of the All-Newton Music School.

Ex-bank robber savors the good life

Straight talk from Teddy Green

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — There was a time when Teddy Green could be found playing the life of a rich playboy on the lam - throwing around $500 bills like there was no tommorow and taking trips to foreign countries with beautiful women he called his "secretaries."

These days, the 67-year old reformed bank robber, who spent 17 years of his life in prison, can be found at a small desk in Newton's Clark and White Lincoln-Mercury showroom - selling cars for a living.

His biggest "take" for a job was $384,000. "A year and a half later, I blew it all," he says.

Green, now a Dedham resident, preferred to dig his way into humid bank vaults on weekends with an oxygen lance, munching on candy bars for energy. He says the most "exciting" part of his job was counting the cash.

After a big heist, Green could be found gambling and drinking his money away. He once blew $36,000 on the turn of one card in a game of baccarat with King Farouk in Monaco. "It was nothing to tip a girl fifty bucks for your hat," recalls Green. "You never earned the money; you didn't know the value of it...I used to spend about $3,000 a week on nightclubs and raising hell."

Buy that car Teddy Green used to be a bank robber; now he sells cars.

> Teddy Green's biggest 'take' was $384,000. 'A year and a half later I blew it all.' But the best part was always counting the cash...

It's a long way from those heady, endless nights of caviar and carousing when money meant nothing, but Green likes it just fine.

"I think if I had my life to do over again I'd be a used car salesman," he says.

Green, a car salesman for seven years after being paroled from the infamous Alcatraz Prison in 1967, began his new job with the Washington Street car dealer last week, coming out of retirement. "I was bored," he says. "I just couldn't stand sitting around idle."

The Boston native took time out from the laid-back life of a car salesman Thursday afternoon to recall those days when he made his living by forcing his way into bank vaults; when his "good friends" were criminal legends like Machine Gun Kelly, Alvin Carpis and Robert "The Birdman of Alcatraz" Stroud.

Green says he robbed 20 banks. "They only nailed me with one," he adds. "I got acquitted and discharged on the other 19."

Why did Green become a bank robber? "If you want groceries you go to Stop and Shop and if you want money you go to the bank," he says philosophically.

But doesn't he really miss the money?

"No," says Green. "You think that kind of money brings you happiness, but it doesn't...The happiest years of my life was when I was working."

The law caught up with Green while he was planning a job with a few of the boys in Georgia that ended in long haul behind bars. But he didn't take life locked up for "borrowing money" without a fight. He constantly tried to escape.

"I just didn't like it that's all," says Green of his prison stretch. "I wanted to go home. I didn't want to bother anybody."

He once mailed himself in a box out of Charlestown State prison and wound up in New Jersey. And during his stay at Alcatraz Prison, Green tried to escape 12 times.

During one of the attempts, the stubborn con tried to chip through the cell floor to the basement, covering up the hole in the floor by day. When one of the guards fell through the opening, hidden by drawing paper, Green was summoned to the warden's office.

"The guard fell through the hole in your cell," reprimanded the warden. Green responded: "Goddamn those termites!"

Green says Alcatraz was unlike any other prison. It was the end of the line — where the most petty squabbles could end in murder. "There were quite a few murders among the inmate population," he says casually. "Any little incident would trigger a psychopath. That was the worst thing."

For enjoyment, prisoners, who were denied newspapers and other luxuries, would keep rats as pets. Green likes to tell the story of a tough guard who frisked a con, came up with a rat and fainted. "You know that poor guy (prisoner), they took him to disciplinary court and put him in solitary for frightening guards."

Life in prison, however, changed Green. He says he went through a "metamorphosis" which resulted in his parole in 1967. "One day, I was pacing up and down in solitary and a flash came through my mind and I said: 'What the hell am I doing here?'"

When Teddy Green used to pass a bank on the street, he would get a feeling - a feeling that he had an "account" in that bank. But those days are gone for good.

"With maturity, I've gained wisdom," says Green, smiling.

He's sold five cars in the last week.

Frank is urging review of exports by States to nations in the Mideast

WEST NEWTON — Congressman Barney Frank, D-Mass., has asked President Reagan to reconsider the administration's approval of exports to three Mideast nations which support terrorism.

The decision to allow certain goods to be exported to Iraq, Syria and South Yemen "represents a misreading of the Export Control Administration and undercuts previous policy commitments of this administration," Frank said in a letter to Reagan.

Under the terms of the 1979 Export Administration Act, it is to be U.S. policy to use export controls to encourage other countries to take immediate steps to prevent their nations from being used by those involved in international terrorism.

"To say that these nations do not fit into this category is a grave error," Frank said, adding that Syria and Iraq have known ties with the PLO and South Yemen" supports terrorism. All three nations practiced gross violations of basic human rights," according to the State Department's Human Rights report.

In addition to their human rights violation, "each of these countries has been a vocal opponent of the Camp David Peace Accords, the only viable vehicle for available either. So he wore bowling shoes during his first marathon.

Eventually Hurwitz stopped running, but not because of peer pressure or lack of interest. "I was in my last year of medical school," remembers Hurwitz, a graduate of Cornell University and Harvard Medical School. As a medical student, Hurwitz often ran from Cambridge to the Fenway. However his hospital internship followed by three years in the army took up most of his time.

Hurwitz still found time for golf and squash though. Two years ago when his squash partner failed to appear at the Newton YMCA, Hurwitz decided to run around the track.

"That's when it started again," he says. Hurwitz ran and finished the 1980 and 1981 marathons.

Next week Hurwitz hopes to improve his time. In 1980, he finished in three hours and 33 minutes and in 1981 finished in three hours and 35 minutes. "I'd like to cut that down five or 10 minutes," he says.

Hurwitz will wear blue and yellow shorts and T-shirt with the American Medical Association emblem, and his New Balance sneakers.

There's a good chance that Hurwitz will also be running with a partner. "The psychology is that you pace yourself better with somebody else. You get better time and they keep you going," he explains. Last year, Hurwitz ran half the race with a drug researcher from Michigan.

"The spirit is very good among the runners," says Hurwitz. He also enjoys the crowd's enthusiasm. "The crowds are extremely helpful," says Hurwitz. "The cheering crowds keep running even when you're a mile behind the winner."

A member of the Charles River Medical Society and a Waltham Hospital trustee, Hurwitz doesn't have a set schedule for running because of the demands of his profession. "I try to get it in whenever I can. I feel good physically and mentally too. It gives me a feeling of well-being," explains Hurwitz.

Hurwitz family though doesn't share his zest for running. His wife of 36 years, Rose, "isn't too happy about it. My sons are indifferent towards it," he says.

Hurwitz daughter, who lives in San Fransisco, however is also a marathon runner. She's overjoyed about her father's participation.

When he finishes the marathon Hurwitz will probably "collapse, take a hot shower and eat a good meal." Then he will start preparing for next year's race.

"I'll run as long as I'm healthy. My time will slow up but I'll keep going."

A time to worry

Okay mom and dad. Listen up. The kid has been drinking again.

You already know that, huh?

You know he came to school last week with a couple beers under his belt? You know his teacher caught him and sent him to the office? And you don't even care?

Sure, you say. At least it's not drugs. He could have been out smoking pot with his friends. At least it's only beer this time. No sweat.

Well kids and booze don't mix. They never have. And kids, booze and school - that's even worse.

So with backing from police and school officials members of the Newton Youth Commission and Human Rights Commission are trying to do something about it.

As School Superintendent Aaron Fink said last week, alcohol use among teens is "a real problem" which is, in some ways, "more insidious" than drugs.

These days you hear about kids and booze when a teen runs a car into a tree or, in more tragic cases, into another car loaded with people.

When somebody dies from a teenage drunk driver's actions, you hear about it and worry.

But the time to worry is long before that happens. And many people in the city want you to worry about it.

The schools have gone a long way with different alcohol education programs but it takes more than a few hours in a classroom to get across the responsibility one must take when one picks up a drink.

Parents must take the initiative in teaching their kids about alcohol the same way, hopefully, they would sit up and listen when it came to drug abuse.

United or tarnished

The theme for this year's city-sponsored Memorial Day parade is "A Community United."

That, it is sad to say, could be the most inappropriate title of the year.

City Hall and a group from Nonantum are sparring over joint sponsorship of the annual parade and at this point it looks like Garden City residents will have a choice of two parades come Memorial Day.

This situation is sad because it all boils down to politics and personalities.

Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini, head of the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association, a very community-minded man, is going head-to-head with Mayor Theodore Mann over the issue of parades.

The mayor, who is equally community-spirited, has appealed to Pellegrini to bury the hatchet which surfaces periodically in this match-up.

It is no secret the men have their differences. But if Mann's appeal goes unanswered two parades will probably result and the spirit of patriotism will be the victim.

Memorial Day is meant to honor the men and women who served their country in war. It is no place for personality spats.

Newton should be "a community united" or we are all a bit tarnished by the end result.

Falkland Island clash? No, a parade

By Mark White

You know there's some heavy negotiating going on. Nuclear disarmament? No. The Middle East? No. The Falkland Island? No.

This negotiating involves a much more touchy subject and one which is clearly more volatile.

It concerns the Newton Memorial Day Parade.

Scoff if you will, but this city is undergoing a crisis that rivals any of the others.

It appears there is a split between the Nonantum Parade Committee and the city of Newton. The result of this split may be two parades. Count 'em - two.

However, Marking time has learned there are secret negotiations going on at this moment to resolve this patriotic deadlock.

We take you now to the "war room" at City Hall. Carleton Merrill, chairman of the Veterans' Service Department, is seated with the mayor on one side of the table and Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini on the other.

Merrill clears his throat, and speaks.

"Okay, Fat. We should be able to resolve this. Let's discuss what you can contribute. We'll tell you what we can afford to do, given the constraints of Proposition 2 1/2. And maybe we can break this deadlock."

Pellegrini: " First, we don't want to march around and salute the mayor."

Mayor: "How about a little bow?"

Pellegrini: "No."

Mayor: "A little curtsey, perhaps?"

Pellegrini: "Nothing."

Mayor: "How about playing 'Hail to the chief'?"

Pellegrini: "Take a hike! What are you doing about music? We're going to have 10 marching bands, four drum and bugle corps units and a trumpet flourish."

Merrill: "Well, Fat, you know we're strapped for cash."

Mayor: "Who do we have?"

Merrill: "The Lunenberg Marching Kazoo Band and the music appreciation class from the Bowen School."

Pellegrini: "We have balloons to hand out!"

Mayor: "Carleton, dig out those 'Newton - All American City' balloons from a few years ago and order some more of those 'Newton - the only city with a AAA bond rating' balloons."

Pellegrini: "We have clowns!"

Mayor: "Carleton. Invite some politicians."

'Fat' claimed he'd have balloons, clowns and marching bands. But the city was promising only surplus cheese from the Feds and tunes by the Lunenberg Marching Kazoo Band...

Pellegrini: "Terrific! What else do you have? We also have the Boston Police precision drill team on motorcycles!"

Merrill: "Would you believe Chief Quinn doing wheelies on a moped?"

Mayor: "What about people to watch this thing? Every year we march by ourselves. How about some people to watch this thing for a change?"

Pellegrini: "We always turn out the people in Nonantum bus as soon as we leave 'The Lake' it's like walking in a ghost town."

Mayor: "Carlcton, he's right. We have to get more people. How about that crowd we bus into my political announcements? Can we get them?"

Merrill: "No, mister Mayor. They're booked up."

Mayor: "Okay. Empty the elderly housing projects and turn out the city employees to line the streets."

Pellegrini: "We have food for all the marchers. We have a lot of nice people making sandwiches for all participants."

Mayor: "Carleton, call the Federal Government. Talk to that guy who sent us the National Guard to bail us out of the Blizzard of '78 and get us some of that free cheese they've been handing out.

"Then call Building 19 and see if they can offer us a deal on Kool-Aid."

Pellegrini: "Listen Carleton , maybe we can work this out. But we call the shots. If not, have fun with your kazoo band!

"And remember. No saluting the mayor."

Mayor: "Fat, maybe just a wave or a trumpet flourish or how about a 21-gun salute??"

Pellegrini: "Only if the guns are all aimed at you, Mr. Mayor."

Racism, bigotry must be addressed

By Leonard Zakim

Over this past year the problem and tragedy of increasing numbers of reported acts of vandalism, harassment and assault motivated by racial or religious bigotry has saddened and concerned many in the Commonwealth.

The firebombing of black families' homes in Cambridge and Weymouth; the arson of a Milton synagogue's sacred Torah; and the ever increasing problem of anti-Jewish or racist hate mail, intimidation and other related problems has been perceived by many - particularly victims - as being the norm rather than the exception.

Indeed, while the more spectacular of these repugnant acts are publicized widely, numerous other daily infringements of an individual's rights to safety in his or her home, work place and school are greeted with silence, acceptance and indifference. Perpetrators of these incidents have gotten a message that they can get away with anti-Jewish or racial acts. We at the Anti-Defamatin League reject that message as do most citizens of this state.

However, contrary to last week's Newton Graphic editorial assumptions that the criminal justice system responds strongly to these problems, the record indicates the opposite.

Case after case of what we refer to as "ethnic terrorism" are viewed by police officials and prosecutors as merely malicious mischief or plain old vandalism. That kind of response exacerbates the anguish a victim experiences and, in effect, tells the victim not to bother reporting the crime. Insensitivity and indifference are the usual responses to these cases. Maximum penalties are never applied, despite The Graphic's assumption that that is the case.

Obviously, the problem of bigotry is one that has been with us for thousands of years. The bill proposed by Rep. David Cohen and strongly supported by the ADL will increase the penalties for these acts but will not put an end to bigotry.

However, what the new penalities will do is to communicate to prosecutors, police and the courts that this is a serious crime and that the people of Massachusetts are establishing a standard of intolerance for these crimes.

Assuming the criminal justice system responds to acts of racial or religiously motivated violence is wrong. Case after case of 'ethnic terrorism' is viewed by officials as 'merely malicious mischief or plain old vandalism.'

Moreover, the application of these penalties to those who until now preyed at will on minorities in Massachusetts will quickly alert them that such crimes will be punishable. Deterrence is a primary motivation behind the bill.

Ultimately, the law can only set limits to that conduct which we are prepared to accept. The responsibility for setting behavioral norms, respect for individual differences and understanding between all Americans must be shared by the schools, the religious community and the family.

The responsibility of elected and appointed officials to clearly and firmly articulate policies and pursue practices which reflect the best ideals of this country must also be fulfilled. Representatives Cohen, Susan Schur, Joseph DeNucci and Jack Backman, as well as over 20 other legislators, in their support of this bill, are exhibiting the kind of leadership in this area that we sorely need.

Rather than questioning their judgment, although not their intentions as The Graphic did last week, the media has a duty to participate constructively in the search for a solution to a problem which has kept from too many the realization of the American dream.

The media must be called on to join a community-wide effort to rebut the presumption of indifference upon which perpetrators of these crimes depend.

The media should be part of an effort to pressure the criminal justice system to respond sensitively and effectively to these incidents.

Lastly, the media should be headlining the attempts by legislators of all faiths, races and national origins to, above all, assure the victims of racially or religiously motivated crises that they are not alone.

We at the ADL commend the efforts of Rep. Cohen and pledge our continued support for this bill, its enforcement and the educational effort required to address these problems before, as well as after, they occur.

Runners, walkers, brook adopters

Walk a mile in his shoes

The inclement weather kept a group from St. Bernard's Church Parish in West Newton from carrying out their annual Good Friday vigil- a lengthy walk to seven Newton churches.

However, some 25 people, headed by Father Anthony Moore, decided to go ahead with the walk on Saturday. Fr. Moore and 13-year-old William Jillet of Newton were the first ones to finish the walk. According to Fr. Moore, their time was two hours and 48 minutes.

Just one little, tiny mistake

In the "can you just change one tiny little thing in that press release we sent to you" category this week, we note a bit of correspondence from the group "Change Middlesex County."

The release recounts the recent county caucus held in Lexington in which 300 residents took part.

We quote: "The Middlesex Citizens' County Caucus, held recently in Lexington, was a small success, according to Jeanne Kangas, Boxborough selectman and president of the bipartisan group called Change Middlesex County."

The day we received the press release we also received a telephone call.

"Can you change just one word?" we were asked.

Change "small success" to "small success" we were asked.

Anything to oblige, we said, but we always felt those small successes can add up to a real "smashing" finale.

Up for adoption: one brook

The good folks at the Charles River Watershed Association have formed what may be one of the more unusual adoption programs.

The program is called "Adopt-a-brook" and gives community-minded people a chance to help to help sustain a watershed education and management project along the 309 square miles of watershed, which encompasses 80 tributary brooks and streams flowing into the Charles.

Groups in Newton might be interested in adopting brooks including Cheesecake, Laundry, South Meadow and Hammond, according to the recent CRWA newsletter, "Streamer."

Groups which want to adopt a brook can make a real project of it, with walks, slide shows, local education programs and research projects on the history of the brooks.

And for those who take on this interesting task the Association even prints up "Certificates of Adoption", suitable for framing, of course.

If you are interested call the CRWA at 527-2799 in Auburndale.

Additional river ramblings

Along the same line, the Charles River Watershed Association has slated the Charles River clean-up for May 8, rain or shine (or snow?).

The local coordinator for the annual event is Frank Wright of the Newton Conservators at 965-3944.

Recalling those good old days

In the "good old days" column this week, a note from the people organizing the Newton North High School reunion for the Class of 1977.

Oh, how those years fly by after you turn 20.

The gathering will be on Friday, May 21 at 7 p.m. in American Legion Post 440 in Nonantum.

Reservations are due in by May 1 and tickets will not be available at the door.

For more information contact Rusty at 244-1799.

Reunion time is always a good chance to recall those pranks you wish you had gone through with; the ones you did and wish you hadn't; and, of course, the great annual football games against Waltham High.

Run a mile in her shoes

With the Boston Marathon routed right through the center of the city it's no wonder Newton spawns so many excellent runners.

Nancy Cuthbertson of the Highlands recently added another notch in local runners' hats when she took the women's trophy in the 10K Lahey Clinic Road Race in Burlington.

With a winning time of 35 minutes and 3 seconds, Nancy knocked almost four minutes off her winning time of last year in the same race.

All that was in spite of blustery winds and chilly temperatures.

The race attracted some 400 runners from all around the Boston area.

Proceeds from the race were donated to the Burlington High School Scholarship fund.

Congratulations!

Aldermen back $50,000 in firefighter overtime

NEWTON — Trying to get a grip on overrun overtime costs, the city has begun a study of sickleave time taken by city personnel.

Deputy Mayor James Hickey made the disclosure of what he characterized as a "significant problem," after the Aldermanic Finance Committee put an additional $50,000 aside for fire overtime for fiscal year 1982. He noted that the problem "was not just with fire," and said he's looking at the three major city departments for any discernable patterns.

"It would be unfair to characterize it as abuse," cautioned Hickey. "At least what I've seen, the increase in sick time is disturbing; especially in the fire department."

With the $50,000 appropriation, the city has paid out $344,000 in fire overtime in FY1983. The Aldermanic Public Safety Committee approved by a 7 to 1 vote the overtime expenditure earlier in the evening. Finance approved the monies by a 5 to 2 vote.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly said "hopefully" the additional appropriation would carry him through the remainder of the year. Last year, the city spent $369,000 for fire overtime.

"Absenteeism is a very serious problem in the overall municipal workforce," Hickey told the Public Safety Committee. "The sickness problem in the Fire Department has increased tremendously in the last 10 years."

"We're trying to identify what is causing overtime," said Hickey. "The sickness has a direct bearing on overtime."

Hickey said he targeted the month of February in his study and checked the records dating from 1970. The average firefighter took .2 day for illness in February 1970 compared to "slightly over" 1 full day twelve years later.

Rodney Barker, who in a show of "protest" voted against the $50,000 Fire Department overtime request, asserted: "That the public should be asked to pay this is an outrage."

Hickey said the Public Works and Police Departments have traditionally been the leaders in absenteeism, but the Fire Department had become the major problem in recent years.

Barker, who has pressed Reilly consistently on the overtime abuse in the department, said: "It is the job of management to devise schemes whereby a greater check is made on this kind of absenteeism." Reilly said the department use to check up on those firefighters calling in sick but now that has become an impossibility because many have moved outside the city.

Barker said that it is "ironic" that while Mayor Theodore Mann has recommended the closing of the Manet Road Fire station, thousands of dollars are being "wasted because of absenteeism."

Search rules eyed

tioned in the ad (for the job) and, if that was a criteria, it should have been from the beginning."

Committee member Susan Silbey agreed with Jones, saying, "I for one never put that down as one of my criteria. Otherwise, one would never have advancement."

In terms of experience in education, Strand's career began in 1966 as a social studies teacher in New Canaan, Conn., and in 1971 he became director of a career education high school in New York City. He later became principal of a Yonkers, N.Y., junior high for two years until 1976 when he became assistant superintendent of the Pelham schools.

After a year as acting superintendent there, Strand was named the permanent superintendent of the Pelham system which has a school budget of $10.8 million and a system of 2,200 students. Newton's school budget is currently over $39 million and the system has over 11,000 students.

Clark's experience in education began in 1964 as a classroom teacher at both the elementary and secondary school levels. He worked as a teacher for four years before taking a job as inservice coordinator for curriculum development for elementary and secondary schools in three counties in in the Kalamazoo Valley school district in Michigan.

From 1969-72 Clark was principal of an elementary school of 500 students in Kalamazoo and from 1972-78 was director of student services for the Kalamazoo school system which has 24 elementary schools, five junior highs and two senior highs. In 1978, Clark took his current job in Shaker Heights, a school district with nine elementary schools, two junior highs and one senior high.

Newton's current superintendent of schools, Aaron Fink, was principal of a high school in Scarsdale, N.Y., before coming to Newton as superintendent in 1969.

Silbey argued that Clark had more relevant budgetary experience than Strand because she felt Pelham had not experienced the financial constraints of Ohio or Massachusetts. She saw another strength of Clark as the ability "to marshal a constitutency for change."

Jones agreed that Ohio had faced "the challenges" being experienced in public education today and praised Clark for "leadership ability."

Leonard Gentile stated his support for Clark on the basis of style, "creativity" and "willingness to be open to change."

James Mnookin supported Strand because he "talked a lot about many educational issues which we have faced and will face."

Berwick said she felt it was "important" that Strand has been a superintendent and added, "I thought this committee was agreed that we didn't want to take risks in terms of management skills." She also viewed Strand as being "much more specific" in his answers.

"I find Dr. Strand's answers to questions at least in some cases to be more satisfying to me," Berwick said. "I find him to be a deep thinker and I find him to give very well-considered answers."

Stalemate possible in final vote for super

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Sharp divisions among School Committee members on the choice for the new superintendent became more rigid Monday night with a "hung vote" looming as a possibility.

Although not voting officially, the committee seemed to be divided 4-4 in support for one of two finalists for the job – Dr. John Strand or Dr. Percy Clark, Jr. The "vote" was also a clear division of north and south side of the city with support for Clark from the north side wards (Wards 1-4) and support for Strand from the south side wards (Wards 5-8).

> 'We owe the community an open discussion of what we're going to do and why we're going to do it.'
> Marcia Mitchell

During the meeting in Bigelow Junior High, the School Committee spent one hour reinterviewing the two finalists for the position: Strand, superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y., schools and Clark, a black assistant superintendent of instruction for the Shaker Heights, Ohio, schools.

As committee members were stating their preference, Mayor Theodore Mann, when it came his turn as discussion went around the table beginning with Ward 8's Robert Ricles, deferred and made no comments.

With Ricles, Ann Berwick, James Mnookin and Marcia Mitchell already on record as either strongly supporting or "leaning toward" Strand, statements from north side representatives Susan Silbey, Katherine Jones, Leonard Gentile and Chairperson Nancy Mann came down in support of Clark.

The committee voted recently to require six votes to appoint a new superintendent to replace Aaron Fink, who is leaving after 13 years. Mayor Mann, ex-officio member of the School Committee, could cast the decisive sixth vote to elect the new superintendent.

However, in speaking last, Mayor Mann summed up the prevailing opinion of the committee as 5-3 in favor of Strand, a statement which Gentile and Chairperson Mann called incorrect.

Mayor Mann said he thought both men were excellent candidates and that he would vote in support for whoever garnered at least five votes from the committee.

In her comments, Silbey appeared to support Clark over Strand, but did not actually state a preference as other School Committee members did. However, other committee members, with the exception of Berwick, confined their expressions of support to a "leaning" for one candidate over the other or an "inclination." Berwick stated candidly that she "planned to support" Strand.

Following the public interviews, the committee was silent and apparently reluctant to air negative comments about candidates in open session. Under the state's Open Meeting Law, the School Committee as a public body is allowed to discuss only the reputation, mental or physical health of candidates in closed, executive session. All School Committee interviews and votes must be in open session, along with discussion of the professional competence of candidates.

Chairperson Nancy Mann announced at the start that the final vote would not be taken until the committee's next meeting Thursday.

Before a crowd of over 100 in the Bigelow auditorium, committee member Marcia Mitchell pressed the committee to begin discussing the finalists and not wait until Thursday. Because of a PTA Roundtable meeting on Thursday, the committee will hold a brief meeting beginning at 6:15 p.m. that night.

"We owe the community an open discussion of what we're going to do and why we're going to do it," Mitchell said and urged the committee to begin discussions Monday night.

"I seriously think that the School Committee will do a disservice to the community" by voting on Thursday with little discussion of reasons for their vote, Mitchell said.

"We're supposed to be a public body," she said. "We're not supposed to be doing this kind of private negotiation and then voting."

'Bravo' to young musicians

To the editor;

This past Saturday afternoon I attended a free "Concert For The Young" presented by the Newton Symphony Orchestra. It was one of the most moving musical experiences I have had. I shed some tears of true joy at the beauty of seeing people of all ages making music together.

As soloist in the second movement of the Lalo Cello Concerto, Newton South High School sophomore Chizuko Matsuaka played both beautifully and professionally with Eric Benjamin and the Newton Symphony.

The All Newton Elementary School Orchestra, so excellently prepared by George Napoli, was invited to the stage to perform three pieces with the Symphony. Seeing the young people each have a stand partner from the Newton Symphony was so expected and yet so unique! The orchestras sounded magnificently together. I know the children will not forget this special experience.

I hope it can happen again for all those aspiring young musicians and for those of us in the audience. Everyone should make a note to attend the "Concert for The Young" of the Newton Symphony next year. Bravo to all who participated.

Idea has come and gone

To the editor;

The aldermanic suggestions made last week of "free help" for needy taxpayers deserve comment.

Just as soon as landlords provide lawyers with free office space, secretaries volunteer them uncompensated services and utilities supply them with complimentary light, heat and telephones, just that soon will capable lawyers be able, in a competent and uncondescending manner, to afford "free help" to the victims of the revaluation disaster.

Hard-pressed Newton homeowners, now faced with intolerable tax burdens are looking not for handouts but for justice. Those who have sought and obtained elective and appointive office should face up to their inescapable responsibilities and promptly come up with an acceptable and workable alternative to the revaluation mess they have created.

"Taxation without representation" is an idea whose time had come and quite properly had gone in these parts more than 200 years ago.

Andy Kessler decided to make a project out of the towering John Hancock building.

Project becomes full-fledged artist's exhibit

NEWTON— When Andy Kessler of Winston Road, Newton, decided the John Hancock Observatory was the place he wanted to photograph, he took his project guidelines literally.

The assignment for his Rhode Island School of Design photography class was limited to "the description of a place" using a group of photographs. Kessler did just that, and what was originally just a college assignment has blossomed into a full-fledged exhibition in that very place - 740 feet above Boston in the John Hancock Tower.

Laurie Steig, John Hancock Observatory's promotion coordinator, saw Kessler's work and was so impressed she agreed to display his pictures in the 60th-floor Observatory.

So now through May 1, eight photographs depicting the John Hancock Observatory - as seen through the lens of Andy Kessler - will be exhibited there.

"I wanted people to be only a small part of the photographs," the 20-year old Kessler explains, "because I felt that the presence of people would take away from the 'description of place.'" To create the effect, the RISD sophmore used a long camera exposure, successfully obscuring the people who necessarily became part of the photos in some instances.

For the project, Kessler was assigned to describe a place with strong detail encompassing function and atmosphere. He had been in the observatory "many, many times," and combining his fondness for the comtemporary space with his "love of grand views," the match was made.

The Newton native's interest in photography was first sparked back at Oak Hill Elementary by Edward McCarthy, Jr., and was later fueled by Robert Arrunda from Newton South High School and Mass. College of Art.

The photographic studies major has had his work appear in catalogues and on album covers, has taught photography to elementary school children and recently completed a semester internship in New York City working for commercial photographer Steve Steigman.

But for now, it's April's exhibit in the 60th-floor observatory that has gotten Kessler's adrenalin pumping. Besides having his work displayed in a spot where more than two million visitors have passed, Kessler is looking forward to the exhibition for another reason. "It's rare to see your photos displayed in the place they were photographed," he points out. "And I'm really excited about that."

Two alleged violations on tap

NEWTON — Two alleged violations of liquor laws will be before the Newton Board of License Commissioners when the Commissin meets on Tuesday, April 20, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 222 at Newton City Hall. The hearing is open to the public.

Carelton P. Merrill, administrative director of the commission, said this week the management of Patch's Backyard, Inc., 107R Union St., Newton Centre, has been cited with an alleged violation of Mass. General Law Chapter 138, Section 34, "sale or delivery to a minor" on the date of March 17. On this date it is alleged two minors were served alcoholic or wine/malt beverages. Patch's Backyard, Inc., is presently the holder of a restaurant, all alcoholic - seven day license with a 2 a.m. closing hour.

The management of Fondi, Inc., 114 River St., West Newton, holders of a package goods store, wine and malt beverages license, have also been cited for the alleged violation of "sale or delivery to a minor," the alleged violations occuring on the date of March 27 when it was reported that two minors were observed purchasing cases of beer.

Merrill said both alleged violations before the Board of License Commissioners are the direct result of the observations of the Liquor Officer of the Detective Bureau of the Newton Police Department who has been assigned as an Agent of the Board of License Commissioners by Chief William F. Quinn.

The management of the Boston Fish House, 227 Needham St., Newton Upper Falls has been requested to appear at the April 20 meeting to discuss concerns which the members of the Commission have in regards to the allowed capacity of the licensed premises which is presently set by the Newton Building Department at 362. It is the intent of the Board of License Commissioners, out of concern for public safety, to make certain the legal limit of 362 is not exceeded, Merrill said. At the same hearing the commission will review new plans for alterations of the inside of existing premises which have been submitted by the management of the Boston Fish House.

The management of the Newton Corner Bowlway, 29 Bacon St., Newton, has submitted an application for four additional video and one additional pin-ball coin operated automatic amusement machines. The applicant presently holds a license for the operation of 10 coin operated automatic amusement machines.

Limited Editions, Inc., 1176 Walnut St., Newton Highlands, Jo-Ann Isaacson, president, has made application for a restaurant, wine/malt beverages - 6-day license. The premises presently consist of a "coffee bar" within a craft gallery where light food is served.

Two requests for Changes of Managers of licensed premises will also be before the Commission as Monantum Post 440 Building Association, Inc., 295 California St., Newton, and A.E. Hotels, Inc. d/b/a Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, 320 Washington St., Newton, have both filed applications for approval to change managers.

The public hearing on the application of H.C.H., Inc., d/b/a Palmyra, 344-348 Walnut St., Newtonville, holders of a restaurant, all alcoholic 7-day license, for six to eight bar stools at the existing service bar, this application held from the meeting of March 16, will be continued on April 20 with a determination to be made by the Board of License Commissioners on that date.

The Commission will also act upon applications for temporary one day all alcoholic or wine and malt beverage permits requested by the Committee to Re-Elect A. Joseph DeNucci, for the date of Friday evening, April 16, this a vote confirming previous action by the Commission, and the application of the Metro District Dental Society for the date of Sunday, May 23.

Executive department wins budget approval

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The Aldermanic Finance Committee Monday approved, without debate, a three-percent hike in the city executive department budget for fiscal year 1983.

The budget proposal, which was presented by Mayor Theodore Mann, asks for $179,940, up $5,933 from fiscal year 1982. Mann had requested all city department heads to simulate a 4.5 percent cut for FY 1983.

The executive department's budget is labor intensive with $156,691 of the total budget going toward salaries. The department supports seven positions, including the mayor's, a deputy mayor, a budget officer, a citizens assistance officer, two secretaries and a part-time clerk.

Mann said the FY 1983 budget was "an exceptionally tight budget" for all departments and that the executive department had taken on added responsibilities over the past few years that accounted for the growth in the department.

The Board of Aldermen recently voted not to raise the mayor's annual salary of $37,500 for the next four years. The mayor also receives a $1,000 expense allowance.

Under the proposed FY1983 budget, Deputy Mayor James Hickey will get a $1,283 pay increase raising his salary to $34,178. Budget Director David Wilkinson will receive a $2,459 pay hike raising his salary to $27,883.

James Zigo, whose duties under the city charter is to process citizen complaints and inquiries and regularly submit reports, will receive a $734 pay hike boosting his salary to $17,046.

The committee passed a resolution requesting Mann to consider a $2,500 funding request for consultants for the Board of Aldermen. Under Mann's proposed budget, the executive department will receive $2,500 for the funding of consultants.

Both the executive department budget and the resolution must be passed by the full 24-member Board of Aldermen.

St. Bernard's plans July 22 pilgrimage to Galway, Ireland

NEWTON — St. Bernard's West Newton, is planning an unusual pilgrimage-tour to Galway and the west of Ireland on July 22. It is intended to coincide with the traditional ascent of Croagh Patrick, St. Patrick's "Holy Mountain" where he fasted for 40 days. This climb always takes place on the last Sunday in July. Mass is celebrated on top of the mountain after a 6 a.m. start, with a climb that takes three hours or so. (A coach tour of the west is laid on for those who do not feel able to cope with the climb itself.)

A day of prayer will be spent at the shrine of Our Lady of Knock, while there will also be a coach tour of Connemara, as well as visits to Ballintubber Abbey, the Burren country and the far-famed Cliffs of Moher. Fr. Anthony Moore will say Mass for the pilgrims on top of Croagh Patrick and accompany the tour as spiritual director.

Aer Lingus has granted the group a special concession allowing its members to stay over for as much as six months without paying any extra fare. This gives pilgrims a chance to visit with relatives and friends, as so many have roots in the west of Ireland. Furthermore, Aer Lingus has made available a special $99 round trip fare to any airport in the British Isles, as well as a $149 round trip to any airport on the European continent served by Aer Lingus. Reservations for this tour should be made as soon as possible.

Local libraries gear up for the National Library Week

NEWTON — "It's a time for encouraging the development of a better-read, better-informed citizenry," stated President Dwight D. Eisenhower when he proclaimed the first National Library Week.

National Library Week, now in its 24th year, will be celebrated April 18-24 by the Newton Free Library. Special events include: "An Evening of Poetry Readings," Tuesday, April 20 at 7:15 p.m. at the Main Library, 414 Centre Street; "A Spellbinding Storytelling Festival," Saturday, April 24 at 10 a.m. at West Newton Branch; and a "Friends of the Library Book Sale" which takes place Friday, April 16, 7-9; Saturday, April 17, 9-5; and Sunday, April 18, 10:30-3:30 at the Auburndale Branch Library, 375 Auburn Street.

National Library Week is also National Volunteer Week and along with other programs, the library will host a "Thank You Party" honoring "The Friends of the Library" for their moral support and encouragement; federal legislators for 25 years of LSCA; and the creative people, authors, artists, poets, and musicians who provide the library with materials that contribute to the library collection.

We hope that during National Library Week, in addition to taking advantage of the special programs, people will realize the wealth of information which is accessible to them year-round, and the many varied services that the library has to offer including a well-equipped center for the visually handicapped; a free film series; weekly storytelling hours for pre-school and ol-age children; and an "Outreach Program" in which library materials are delivered to the Newton residents who are unable to get to the library.

National Library Week is celebrated in order to call people's attention to library services and programs. The library needs public support and active, regular use.

With almost limitless diversity of information, a library can further a reader's growth intellectually, emotionally and personally.

Today's library offers much more than books. At the Newton Free Library the goals are to make sure the public has free access to information in all media, to encourage greated library use, and to serve the varied needs of the community.

WE JUST DEVELOPED A FASTER, MORE SOPHISTICATED SYSTEM FOR MAKING LONG DISTANCE CALLS. HERE'S HOW YOU'LL RECOGNIZE IT:

beep.

It's just a little sound. But when you're away from home, it can make long distance calling so easy, it's like magic.

And right now, New England Telephone is adding that new beep to all the Touch-Tone™ phones in Newton.

Here's what'll happen. Whenever you dial "O" plus a long distance number at any Touch-Tone phone, you'll immediately hear the beep. Then, if you're at a pay phone or a coinless Charge-A-Call phone, you'll hear a recorded message that tells you exactly what to do next.

If you have a Calling Card (that's our new name for your Bell System credit card), just punch in your card number after the beep. Your call will go through like magic. It's easy—so easy you don't even need the operator. And that saves you time.

And another nice thing. Even if you want to make a series of long distance calls, now you only have to punch in your card number once (our new system has a very good memory). After you finish each call, instead of hanging up, just press the "#" button and dial your next call. Simple.

If you don't have a Calling Card, don't hang up. Just dial "O" again and the operator will handle your call as usual.

So remember, if you're looking for a fast easy way to make long distance calls, just listen. And we'll beep.

The late Mrs. Burnham honored by governor

NEWTON - Governor Edward King recently joined with the Massachusetts Mothers' Association in honoring, posthumously, Elizabeth Dean Burnham as Honor Mother of Massachusetts for 1982.

Scouts from Area 5, which includes Newton in the Council sold more cookies this year than last.

Cedar Hill Days: Spend the morning at Cedar Hill wooded area in Waltham on two Saturdays, April 17 and May 1, 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Eileen Sullivan, Outdoor Specialist will lead a Discovery Walk. Find the orienteering course, the brook and pond and plan for future walks, cookouts. Call the Boston office 482-1078 ahead, as the number is limited to twelve each morning.

Girl Scout Leaders Day: Governor King recently proclaimed April 22nd as G.S. Leaders Day in Massachusetts, a special time to recognize the women and men who serve as G.S. volunteer leaders as positive role models who "encourage girls to develop a growing confidence that enables them to meet today's challenges and to become tomorrow's competent self-assured women." After all, what would scouting be without our volunteer leaders, assistants and service unit members!

A first: Girls who are part of the cast of "Annie" (currently appearing in Boston) have formed the first and only "Annie" G.S. Troop in the country. They were invested as scouts at a ceremony in February and are different in another way too; — the troop enjoys having a mixed bag of ages, ranging from 7 to 12 years old. Besides sightseeing trips around historic and modern Boston, they plan overnight camping at Cedar Hill and are working together to earn a badge in "The World of Arts."

Father-daughter square dance: A very special event for Brownies in Newton coming soon is The Father-Daughter Square Dance, Tuesday evening, April 27, at Day Junior High School. Of Course, Brownies can ask mothers or male family friends to be their partners. Experienced caller and youth worker, Jane Carlson is the caller for the dances. Hille Kerne and Margi Maynard are the planners of this fun evening.

McDonald's salutes Girl Scouts: As part of our Gift of Water project, McDonald's paper tray liners from Patriots' Trail Council give hints on ways people can conserve water. So as you munch on a burger, take a minute to check out the tray liner.

Kaleidoscope calendar: If you are female and between 12 and 17 years old, maybe one or more Kaleidoscope events are for you, a busy teen. On Musical Tuesday, April 20, 10 a.m.-10p.m., those who like music or are thinking about a future in this field will enjoy exploring the broad scope of musical resources in Boston, from music schools to speciality record shops to ancient instruments at the Museum of Fine Arts to free concerts. Only a few days left to call the Boston Office on these events. April 22, A City Search with DETOURS, a teenagers' resource center will explore metro Boston for interesting, transit-accesible things to do. Spend an hour on horsebvack at Hingham Riding Stable. This is a good time to go, even if you haven't ridden...but have the urge to learn. "A Horse, Of Course" will be on Wednesday, April 21, 10-11 a.m. Sometime this Spring, young women will meet with a group of women engineers at MIT to learn how one can make use of an interest in math, science and about what makes MIT an interesting, special place. On Saturday, May 1, teens will take a most unusual bus trip to Cape Cod, visiting Ecology House and the New Alchemy Institute to discover such things as how would it feel to live underground; how to heat your whole house with solar energy; keep your food cold with wind power, and other far-out things.

Girl Scout Camp: Now is the time to begin thinking about what sort of things you would like to do this summer. No, it's not too early. G.S. camp folders are available from the G.S. offices (Boston/Waltham) if you want to learn more. Also for children with chronic diseases who usually would not believe it would be possible for them to go away to camp, there is a camp created by Pines of Carolina G.S. Council and Duke University Medical Center offering children a week of summer activities with Girl Scout campers. Besides counselors, the children are cared for by an extensive medical staff. The children (who have such diseases as: cancer, sickle cell anemia, cystic fibrosis, hemophilia) enjoy an environment that fosters as much independence and self-reliance as possible, as they share swimming, boating and other camp activities. Interested? Write Camp Kaliedoscope, Gay Byers, Pines of Carolina G.S. Council, Route 8, Box 59, Raleigh, N.C. 27612.

Prof. Locke is honored for his bibliography

NEWTON — Professor Ralph P. Locke, a former Newton resident, has been awarded a prize by the Music Library Association (MLA) for "the best article-length bibliography" published in 1981. Professor Locke, the son of Doris T. Schwartz and the late Merle I. Locke, graduated from Newton South High School in 1966 and is now an assistant professor of musicology at the Eastman School of Music.

Locke received the award for his article "New Schumann Materials in Upstate New York," published in Fontes Artis Musicae, Vol. 27, Nos. 3-4, and written in conjunction with his Eastman colleague Jurgen Thym. It consists of a history and catalogue of the Dickinson Collection, one of the most valuable collections of autograph scores, letters and memorabilia of Robert and Clara Schumann still in private hands. The collection belongs to Mrs. June Dickinson of Livonia, N.Y., and was assembled in the years after World War II by Mrs. Dickinson and her late husband Edward Dickinson.

Thym and Locke's article calls the collection "a treasury for all scholars and musicians interested in the Schumanns." Among the unique items described, often in great detail, are 287 Clara Schuman letters and 15 Robert Schumann letters, three scores by each, as well as numerous letters of other nineteenth century composers and performers.

THE WORLD of Travel
by Hank Fleming
WEST BERLIN
There are more dimensions than its geo-political isolation that make West Berlin a unique city. Its people are quite different from the stuffy German stereotype. They are usually brash, outspoken and energetic. West Berlin is also alive with small, avante-garde theaters. Its art is musically displayed by a Philharmonic or chestra, opera companies and chamber music groups. There is also plenty of jazz of all types as well. In this city that never sleeps, there are more than 250 movie houses, casino gambling and night clubs without closing hours. It is considered to be the only true cosmopolitan city in Germany. In fact, it is even the "in" travel spot for West Germans themselves.
Our purpose as professional travel agents at FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham is to furnish you with the lastest and up to date information on such items as air fares and hotel rates and where needed passport and visa requirements. We do everything possible to make your trip as trouble free and comfortable as we can. There is no extra charge to you for our services either. Most major credit cards honored. Call us at 899-5658. Hours: Mon. Sat. 9-5:30, Fri. 'til 8.

Take a Walk...

Step into Great Shape

Walking is possibly the most efficient, and therefore most beneficial, form of exercise available. In today's fitness-oriented society, walking can be the perfect introduction, or augmentation, to a well-planned exercise program.

Walking increases muscular stamina, especially in the legs. It also conditions your cardiovascular system, improves circulation, promotes weight loss and can therefore positively affect your general physical and psychological well-being!

Brisk walking (3.5 miles per hour) burns approximately 300 calories per hour for a 130-pound person. The more you weigh, the more caloric use will take place.

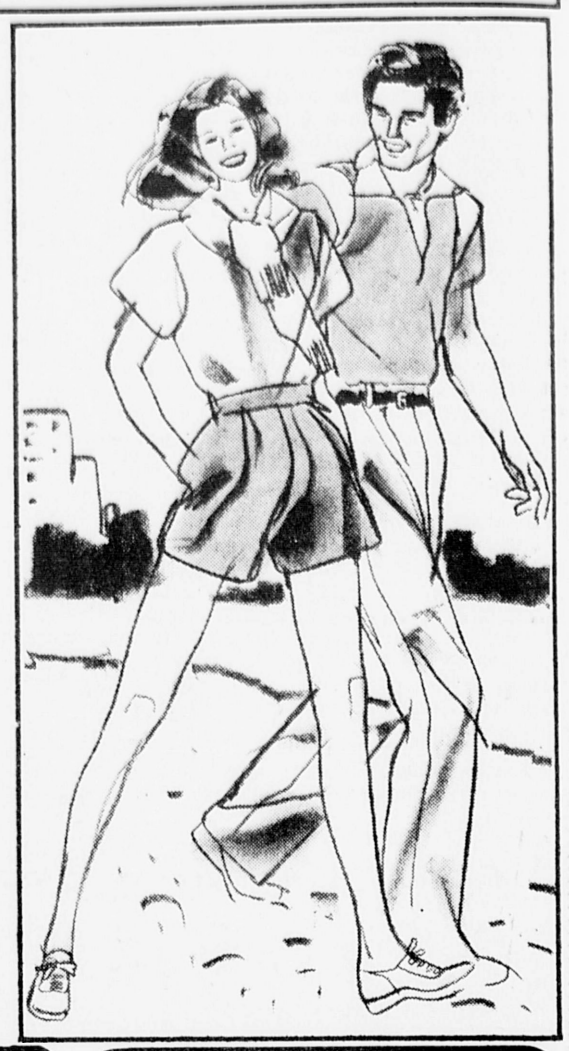
One of the most enticing aspects of walking as a regular form of exercise is that there is virtually no risk of injury. If you are not accustomed to exercising regularly, walking is an excellent way to get started. Begin by taking moderate walks around the block, and gradually increase the briskness of your walk, as well as the length. Eventually, you may want to work up to racewalking, which is an extremely vigorous form of walking and can burn up 450-500 calories per hour.

Another practical consideration regarding your choice of exercise is the cost. Again, walking comes out ahead. You need not purchase any expensive equipment to indulge in this sensible activity. The only essential equipment is a properly-fitting pair of good, comfortable shoes.

The benefits of exercise are well-known, but the dangers of overdoing it are also notorious. Walking is such a natural activity for us that injuries are almost unheard of, as long as basic safety factors are attended to:

• Wear loose, comfortable clothing to prevent chafing and blisters.

• If walking at dusk, or after dark, be sure to wear highly-visible or fluorescent clothing. Many sporting goods stores have a variety of appropriately reflective suits and shoes.



For people who just can't wait.

Bring that special roll of color print film into PhotoQuick by 10am any weekday, and we'll have your photos ready for you at 4pm.

Aerobic Exercises

Aerobic exercises are an excellent way of combining all three of these essential elements.

These exercises aid your body in raising its metabolic rate so that calories continue to burn for hours after you've completed your exercises.

Many experts believe that fat is not as easily stored in a body that regularly engages in aerobic exercise, as that body is conditioned to use energy rather than to hoard it.

Aerobics also exercise your heart muscle and lungs, and oxygenate your blood.

Examples of aerobic exercises are: swimming, brisk walking, jogging, bicycling and aerobic dancing. As long as the activity is smooth, rhythmic and continuous, it qualifies as aerobic.

Naturally, before beginning any exercise program it is wise to consult with your physician, especially if you have been inactive in the past, are over 35, or have had any previous health problems.

Nutritional Considerations

A balanced diet is always important, but when you exert yourself during increased activity it's even more important to have the nutritional strength to draw from. In addition to maintaining a normal diet sufficient in proteins, vegetables, fruits, dairy products, fiber, vitamins, minerals, etc., it is important to realize some requirements your body may now have due to your increased energy output.

If you are attempting to lose weight, you will be decreasing your intake of total food. But, you must not deny or reduce your body's essential nutritional requirements. Thus, you must pack more nutrients into less food. Be certain that all of the food you ingest is nutritionally worthy of the calories produced.

You may need to increase your fluid intake as you begin to exercise more vigorously. While dehydration is more of a problem with athletes involved in strenuous sports, the moderate exerciser also needs to keep fluid intake in mind. A good indicator is your thirst. If you feel thirsty, stop and satisfy it!

DeNucci aims to help needy Newton property taxpayers

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

BOSTON — State Rep. Joseph DeNucci (D-Newton-Waltham) is drawing up legislation to aid needy and elderly taxpayers hurt by skyrocketing property tax bills under revaluation.

DeNucci Wednesday said he is preparing a legislative package that he will file with State Rep. Gerald Cohen (D-Andover)- chairman of the powerful House taxation committee.

DeNucci, chairman of the Human Services Committee, said the legislation would allow cities and towns to broaden the eligibility requirements for elderly residents filing property tax exemptions.

He said the package includes a home rule proviso that would allow the changes only if local legislative bodies and officials approve them.

DeNucci said the legislation would allow communities to increase the dollar amount of property tax exemptions that have been reduced dramatically because of the drop in property tax rates under revaluation. The Newton tax rate is expected to drop from $177 per $1,000 of assessed property to $22.10 under revaluation.

The legislation would reduce the minimum-age eligibility requirement for an elderly clause 41 tax-exemption from 70 years old to 63. Furthmore, DeNucci said the package will increase the minimum eligibility financial requirement from $6,000 for a single person to $10,000 and from $7,000 for a married couple to $12,000.

With soaring inflation, DeNucci said the current minimum financial requirements for property tax exemptions are not "realistic."

"I think that something like this will fly," said DeNucci of the legislation. "We have to do something for the very low allowance that an elderly person can make (to qualify). There is a tremendous amount of frustration from my constituents."

DeNucci criticized Proposition 2½ for the soaring property tax bill increases faced by many taxpayers in Newton. "It seems to me my constituents in the working class sections of the city got hammered the hardest because of 2½," he said.

Under the re-distribution of taxes forced revaluation, city homeowners will pay a $3,498,900 shift in taxes that were being picked up by commercial and business taxpayers last year. Proposition 2½ supporters contend that taxpayers would have eventually been hurt even more without the tax-cutting measure.

Noting that the "city and board of aldermen dragged their feet on revaluation for many years," DeNucci charged that the tight time frame of the accelerated revaluation conducted in Newton has resulted in an unprofessional job with errors and discrepancies.

Under a timetable submitted by the city to the state Department of Revenue, the project was scheduled for completion by Jan. 1. Robert Finnegan, president of the revaluation company, said he was "confident" that the project could be completed under the eight month timetable.

The city has received initial approval for commercial assessments, but the state must still review commercial values. Approxiately 8,000 to 10,000 taxpayers scheduled informal hearings with the company which ended last week.

Property tax exemptions under laws

A number of exemptions are available to elderly and needy taxpayers who qualify under state statute. The exemptions have dropped dramatically because of the sharp decrease in the city's tax-rate. Taxpayers can file for the exemptions after residents receive tax bills. The exemptions and the minimum dollar awards are:

•Veteran (10 percent disability or Purple Heart recipient) - $175.

•Veteran (loss of use of one foot or hand) - $175.

•Veteran (loss of both feet or hands) - $700.

•Veteran (needing special housing because of disability) -$875.

•Veteran (100 percent disability) - $525.

•Blind - $437.

•Elderly Clause 41- $500. In order to qualify, residents must be 70-years old by July 1,1981, lived in the state for 10 years, owned and occupied a home for five years, gross income must be less than $7,000 if married, $6,000 if single and total real estate and personal property can not exceed $20,000.

•Clause 17 Surviving widow or spouse - $175.

•Elderly -clause 41A- deferral of taxes for anyone 65-years of age or older who must not have more than $20,000 in assets for 1980.

•Any needy homeowner can apply for a hardship exemption which is given at the board of assessor's discretion.

Taxpayers can appeal tax bills by filing for an abatement with assessors up until 30 days after issuance of tax bills. Taxpayers filing an abatement will be granted a hearing with assessors, according to city officials. The board must act on the abatements within 90 days of receipt of all abatements. The board's decision on the abatement can be appealed to the state Appellate Tax Board up until 90 days after receipt of notice from assessors.

Pines talks against casino gambling at state hearing

NEWTON — Lois Pines of Newton, former Regional Director of the Federal Trade Commission told a legislative hearing on casino gambling the state should "stop trying to solve its problems with a roll of the dice."

Pines said, "Casino gambling is an example of trying to solve one problem and creating hundreds of others," and that Massachusetts should not be fooled by "the illusion that casino gambling brings in more money than it costs."

We cannot afford casino gambling's economic costs, nor should we be forced to tolerate its human costs," Pines said in a statement submitted to a hearing of the Joint Legislative Committee on Government Regulations in Gardner Auditorium.

"In Atlantic City, casino gambling meant a 170 percent increase in crime, compared with a state-wide increase of 26 percent. Of all the persons arrested for these crimes, 95 percent were out of towners. Don't we already have enough of our own problems?' Pines asked. "Do we have to import more?"

The former state representative and a candidate for lieutenant governor warned that Massachusetts must consider the costly problems a casino creates.

"Who pays to widen the highway leading to the casino?" she asked. Who pays for increased police and fire protection? Who pays for increased demands for housing? Who has to face the increased problems of organized crime, drugs and alcoholism?"

"The residents of Massachusetts. That's who."

Pines pointed out "the state of Nevada—the center of casino gambling in America— has the highest alcoholism rate in the country."

Local woman addresses Camping conference

CHESTNUT HILL — At the request of the American Camping Assn., Beverly Shiffman, president of Student Camp and Trip Advisors of Chestnut Hill, addressed its national convention in New York in early March. In the 13 years since she started the service, free to families, Shiffman has counselled thousands of families about appropriate experiencs for their children. She has also counselled directors of camps and student trips in their efforts to improve their programs.

Shiffman spoke of the pattern she has observed evolving from the changes in the world around her and detects definite trends. "The imposition of Proposition 2½ has meant changes in the non-academic programs in the public schools," she said. "Reagonomics has exacerbated the cutbacks in sports, music, arts and crafts necessitated by the new approach to taxation."

"The rising divorce rate, creating the one-parent family, puts the camp in the position of being the family of the future," Shiffman said. "Since most children live with the mother, there is a need for a strong, secure male role-model with whom a boy can identify. At girls' camps there must be males in natural roles other than the doctor or the director. Frequently the camp offers the only stability in the child's life. Considering the growing numbers of one-child families, it may be the only place where a child can develop a relationship with peers," Shiffman said. Because of the mobility of young families, the camp frequently offers the only experience with an extended family—the surrugate cousins and aunts and uncles.

"Today, for many legitimate reasons, both parents are working, creating problems of another sort. Children who are beyond the age for day-care centers must still be kept off the streets and engaged in satisfying activities," she said.

As the child grows, so hopefully do his/her interests and abilities. Student Camp and Trips Advisors help parents and their children examine the relevance of programs like whale-watching, or marine biology and archeology, or wilderness and survival experiences with trained directors, or camping in Chian with Chinese children, or several weeks on a working ranch, or biking in Europe or America, or a theater arts camp in Canada, or white-water canoeing in Maine or Wisconsin—"All the possibilities for stretching teen-age minds," according to Shiffman.

Sign-up on for summer camp program

WEST NEWTON — Registrations for the Newton Community Service Centers Summer Day Camp Programs for children 2.9-12 years of age are now underway daily at the Centers facility at 492 Waltham St. in West Newton or through mailed applications which are available by phoning 969-5906 daily.

The Older Camp for Boys and Girls 6½-12 years of age includes a private camp site located at Hale Camping Reservation in Westwood includes 30 acres of tree-covered land, swimming facilities, cookout accommodations, and 1,200 acres of long, winding nature trails.

The program is a comprehensive one, including swimming instruction and free-swim), arts and crafts, hikes, sports, boating, games, archery, etc. In addition, other special activities will be offered, such as cookouts, and camp-wide programs. Some youngsters will want to be involved in a special confidence-building "ropes course," which is aimed at improving coordination and agility, facilitating group involvement, and enhancing feelings of joy and trust in one's self and others. All campers benefit from the involvement of graduate students enrolled in the Boston College Summer School. These mature and creative individuals, most of whom have had extensive and varied experience working with children, bring an added dimension of involvement and imagination to the camp.

A camper-counselor ratio of 7 to 1 provides responsible and positive leadership for enjoyable programming.

Campers leave by bus from the NCSE Inc. building, 492 Waltham St., West Newton, each morning Monday-Friday at 9 a.m. and return at approximately 4 p.m. (3 p.m. on Fridays). There is no additional fee for the bus ride to and from Westwood.

The Program Director is Nicholas Siciliano.

The Younger Camp for Boys and Girls 2.9-6 years of age includes a rich variety of child oriented activities-indoor and outdoor games, arts and crafts, music, creative movement, wading pools and special events will be offered in a relaxed "camp" atmosphere.

This planned summer program will be divided according to age into small groups.

The program is located at the NCSC Inc. facilities and outdoor area (formerly the Davis School) at 492 Waltham St. in West Newton.

There will be an open house on Sunday, June 27, from 1 to 4 p.m. for individuals which will provide an opportunity to see the site and meet the staff.

Due to the increased number of families needing additional care for children before and after the standard camp day, we are offering the following alternatives hours:

9 a.m. - 4 p.m.; 7:30 a.m. - 4 p.m.; 7:30 a.m. - 6 p.m.; 9 a.m. - 6 p.m.

Additional hours are primarily for children ages 2.96 years and transportation is available only for the standard 9-4 day. Arrangements can be made for campers 6½-12 years of age.

The Program Director is Susan Werbe.

Newton South baseball finding the answers

The Newton South baseball team has begun finding answers to some of the questions encountered by coach Neil McPhee when practices began a few weeks ago.

The Lions have a hefty assignment this season in trying to find an encore for last year's tremendous 17-5 campaign. The real question marks entering the season centered around replacing shortstop Mike Kasten, catcher Brian Striar and second baseman Russ Nicoletti. The Lions also needed to find some pitching. They'd expected to have Righthander Bill Bracken back, but his eligibility is still up in the air for academic reasons. Even if Bracken does return, however, McPhee is fully aware that one pitcher just won't do it on the high school level.

After three scrimmages against Newton North, Belmont and Catholic Memorial, McPhee is encouraged. "The big plus from these scrimmages has been our pitching," Neil said Thursday night. "Both Mike Pappas and Mark Paglia have looked very good, so now, even if we don't get Bracken back, we have the comfort of knowing there are two guys who can do the job."

Paglia has been a welcome addition to Newton South. A transfer student from Newton Catholic, he is capable of catching and playing second, short or third in addition to pitching. McPhee has indicated he might also be used in the outfield. "The important thing is the flexibility we have," says Neil.

What has given the coach so many options has been the play of newcomers Brian Lewis at shortstop and Adam Rossman behind the plate. Lewis has exhibited a strong, accurate throwing arm and decent range through the scrimmages. If he can handle the shortstop job, that will allow McPhee the freedom to shift Paglia around. If he can't, Paglia will have to play short.

Rossman has been catching for the Lions and doing a good job. He's new to the varsity and thus, if the season were to open today, McPhee says he'd start Paglia there. But the feeling is that before the season is over Rossman may mature into a fine catcher. "If he can show an accurate arem which will keep baserunners honest, he can play there," McPhee noted.

We've talked a lot about Paglia's versatility, but there are other keys to this team. South's hopes of winning ride greatly on the trio of Steve Mosca, Joe Spagnuolo and Mark Nicoletti. All are returning veterans, and as McPhee pointed out, all are "clutch" athletes. "That's the great thing about those three. They are as good a group as you can have as far as coming through in crucial situations," explained Neil. "And it looks like Paglia will fit into that mold like a glove."

McPhee says they are "consistent, clutch and capable." You can't do much better than that.

Spagnuolo, one of the finest quarterbacks in Newton South history, is also being tested as a pitcher. Spagnuolo pitched some in grammer school, but he injured his arm there and hasn't been to the mound since. "He's a got a live arm," says McPhee, "but he's a little afraid to cut it loose for any length of time because he thinks he might hurt it. I've tried to explain to him that throwing 35 passes in a football game probably puts more strain on your arm than throwing 75 or 80 pitches. At least I think it does."

The Lions have displayed awesome power in their scrimmages, belting two pretty decent Belmont pitchers around for a home run, three triples and two doubles. Spagnuolo had the homer and one of the triples while Mosca had a single, double and triple, Nicoletti cracked a three-bagger and Lewis poked a double. "Of course, that's not going to happen every day, but it's nice to see," said McPhee.

So Newton South does appear to possess most of the ingredients needed for a winning season — pitching, defense, power and speed. Whether they can fit all those pieces into the correct puzzle is something scrimmages cannot answer. "We won't get all the real answers until we get out there in a real game and start throwing the ball around. When it really counts," McPhee said.

North is given a chance in Suburban league

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Provincial as it may sound to some, the way to spell "favorite" in this year's Suburban League baseball race is W-A-L-T-H-A-M. That is the belief, at least, amongst the people who will be coaching this season against Al Scafidi and his talented Hawks.

"Waltham has to be given the favorite's role," says Brookline's Norm Laakso.

"They're definitely the team to beat," agrees Bill Fulginite of Cambridge R&L.

"I have Brockton in the back of my mind, as always," says Quincy's Arthur "Bud" Mosher, "but Waltham seems to have it all this year."

Boasting four talented lefthanders on a staff of six very capable pitchers, the Hawks do seem to be as good a choice as any to capture the Suburban title in 1982. Scafidi has been taking the low road during the pre-season, preferring instead to say any one of six clubs could take this year's crown, but while that may be true to a certain degree, the fact is that the smart money has to be on the Hawks.

If the Hawks should stumble, however, nearly every Suburban coach agrees that Brockton would be the team to take their place. The Boxers can never be counted out because, as Weymouth South's Frank Niles says, "It doesn't matter how many people they graduate, with their numbers and that program, they'll always be tough."

Cambridge, with perhaps the league's finest pitcher in Mike Harshbarger, defending champion Weymouth South, Weymouth North, and Newton North also all received votes as possible winners.

And so with the preliminaries out of the way, here is a rundown of the 1982 Suburban League.

NEWTON NORTH — After two years of second division finishes for Tom Rezzuti, he finally has a contender. The Tigers welcome back three starting pitchers — John Corsi, Paul Howley and Rich Marchioni — in addition to talented hitters like Bill Jordan, Joe Slamin, Matt Ryan and Chris Pachus.

That mound trio has been starting since their sophomore seasons and should be ready to come into their own. Corsi has the most potential, but Howley can mystify batters with his assortment of pitches and Marchioni, if he develops more control, can also be tough.

Defense and clutch hitting has been a problem for the Tigers in the past. If they are to win this year, Corsi, Slamin, Marchioni and Ryan, particularly, must prove they can hit with men on base when the game is on the line. The Tigers must also learn to make the big plays. "We need to create a winning attitude," says Rezzuti. "This year, more than in my first two, the enthusiasm does seem to be there. These kids really want to win."

So does Rezzuti, and that alone may be enough to propel the Tigers ahead in the scramble for the top.

WALTHAM — The Hawks you know about already, but just a few

South softball ready to return to winning

For Newton South softball coach Warren Bechtold, last season was something out of the ordinary. For the first time in his four years as head coach, the Lions failed to qualify for the post-season tournament, finishing 6-9 after sharing two Dual County League titles in the previous three campaigns.

But word around the South campus this spring is that Bechtold's nine could vault right back into the thick of things this year if certain holes are filled. The biggest question mark, undoubtedly, is pitching, where Bechtold must replace the graduated Carol Tennant. "If our pitching comes through, we'll be right in the battle with everyone else," says Warren. "But the league is so balanced this season that we could wind up first or last."

Last place is unlikely because the Lions do have some talented athletes. High on the list are the two captains, Gail Arduino and Laurie Spicer. The strength of any softball team should be up the middle and Bechtold has it with this duo. Arduino backbones the infield — where she hit .450 last season — from shortstop while Spicer roams centerfield. Bechtold calls Arduino "our finest athlete." As for Spicer, well, all she's done this year is also star for the Newton South basketball and volleyball squads, performing so well in the latter sport that she was invited by UMass to try out for a scholarship.

Another returning starter is Junior catcher Barbara Littman. Littman had an off-year at the plate last season, but Bechtold is confident she will turn that around in 1982.

Talk of strength up the middle brings us right back to where we began — pitching. Newton South's hopes lie chiefly with Junior Martha Young, a hard-throwing righthander. Young has the talent to be the No.1 pitcher providing she gains consistency. "When she's around the plate, she gets people out. All she lacks is the consistent control," says Bechtold.

Bechtold is trying a number of other girls out as pitchers, including newcomer Blanca Wales and Sophomore Donna Segao.

Wales is one of the pleasant surprises for Bechtold this year. Along with her twin sister, Chiqui, she has earned a starting spot in the lineup despite being only a sophomore. Natives of the Phillipines, Blanca beat out last season's starter, Linda Siegel, for the second base job while Chiqui won a spot at third.

Junior Lynn Waldstein fills out the infield at first base with Senior Leslie Smith providing backup.

Starters in the outfield along with Spicer will probably be Senior Chris Moan (.325 in '81) and power-hitting Judy Cimetta. Cimettta displayed her abilities at the plate in Newton's first scrimmage with a long home run.

Others who will see outfield duty are Segao, Sharlene Speizer and Debbie Logan.

The 1981 season was a frustrating one for Bechtold. He lost his best athlete, Kim Smith, to an ankle injury and neither Smith nor the club ever recovered. But the coach says this year will be different. "The attitude is tremendous," he said. "Our biggest problem last season was our infield defense, but the Wales sisters should help out a great deal there. Once again, it all goes back to our pitching."

Doesn't it always.

The Lions were scheduled to open the season today at Madison Park, but unless they use orange softballs and wear cross country skies, the game will not be played. They'll try again Monday when they host Belmont, or perhaps Thursday in the DCL opener vs. Bedford.

34th Shamrock road race scheduled Patriot's Day

The 34th running of the Shamrock A.C. Road Race will be staged next Monday, Patriot's Day morning, with more than 100 youngsters, ages 12 to 17, expected to compete.

The three-mile trek from Waltham to Watertown is open to any boy or girl of age eligibility from Waltham, Watertown, Newton, Weston, Belmont and other surrounding areas. The race will start in front of the Waltham City Hall on Main Street and will finish up in front of the Watertown Police Station on Cross Street.

Last year's winner was Kevin Malloy of Watertown High. He won the first place trophy donated by the Watertown Aire of Eagles. Special trophies will be awarded to boys and girls finishing first in each of the following age groups, 12, 13 and 14.

The Eagles will have open house for all runners at their headquarters on Mt. Auburn Street following the race.

To enter the race call Chairman Moxley at (24-0685, or report to the Watertown Police Station at 9 o'clock the morning of the race. The town of Watertown is supplying two doctors to exam the runners before the race. The runners will be assigned numbers after they have passed their exams.

Smith's road to Majors brings him to bullpen

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

In light of what has been happening in the Major Leagues over the past few years, Mike Smith's transformation from starter to reliever seems only natural.

After all, baseball people, like those in the television or recording industries, have never been accused of originality. TV executives find a sitcom that folks watch, and before you know it there's 10 more just like it on the air. Baseball managers are much the same. They see Milwaukee's Rollie Fingers win both the American League's Most Valuable Player and Cy Young Awards in the same season; they watch what Rich Gossage has done all these years for the Yankees and how Bruce Sutter has turned the Cardinals into instant contenders; and their answer to it all is simply — get me one just like them.

Thus Smith, a starter since his graduation from Newton North in 1976, is now a reliever with the Atlanta Braves organization. So it goes. "It seems kind of strange to me," admits Mike's father, Steve. "He has always started and he's always been a winner. But it doesn't bother Mike any. His attitude is that if that's the way to go to the Majors so be it. He just wants to get there."

The days of pitchers going nine full innings are over, of course. Managers now construct their staffs around a starter (six strong innings), a middle relief man (two innings) and a short relief man (Gossage-type). Steve Smith finds it a bit comical. "Geez, they're like doctors now," he says with a grin. "Everybody's a specialist today."

But if the 23-year old Smith is going to make it to the top, this appears to be his quickest avenue. He has spent five years in the Minors, last season toiling for Durham, N.C. of the Carolina League where he went 9-3 with a 2.78 ERA and was voted the top pitcher in the league. That was at Single A, however, and as Smith has said to his father in dismay, "I'm not getting any younger, Pop."

He caught the eye of many people in the Brave organization for his efforts at Durham. After being 12-3 there in 1980, he returned from brief stopovers at Richmond, Va. (AAA) and Savannah, Ga. (AA) to win his first five starts and compile a string of 39 consecutive scoreless innings. (Ironically, Marc Sullivan, son of Red Sox' owner Haywood Sullivan and a high Boston draft pick last year, broke Smith's streak). The highlight of his season came when the Braves invited him to pitch for them in an exhibition game against Richmond. Smith lost a rain-shortened 1-0 affair, but his seven-inning stint was impressive.

That led to his being invited this year to their Major League camp at West Palm Beach, where for the first time he found himself working out with new manager Joe Torre and the remainder of the legitimite big leaguers. It was a startling experience at first, but Smith settled down quickly. "He was kind of awed in the beginning," his father said. "But once he got used to it, he just said to me, 'You know, this is the life. This is the way to go.'"

Think everyone gets rich in professional athletics? The best part for Smith about making the Major League camp was the difference in meal money. At the Majors he was allotted a hefty $250 per week; the Minors give you a miserly $63. "That's why the Minors are so frustrating," says Steve. "I'd like to see some reporter do a story on what that's like. That $63 is all they get during spring training, you know. There's no salary until they're assigned to a team. It gets tough. Mike comes home during the winter and sees his friends getting married and driving around in nice cars and that's when he says he's not getting any younger."

The Braves, who apparently don't believe that Al "The Mad Hungarian" Hrabosky can do the job this year, invited 21 pitchers to their camp in hopes of finding a reliever. Smith was given two outings. He retired eight of nine batters against the Yankees — Lou Piniella singled cleanly to left — and allowed two unearned runs in three innings against the World Champion Los Angeles Dodgers.

Mike's development has been monitored closely the past two years by former big league hurler Johnny Sain, recognized as one of baseball's best pitching coaches. Sain, who has been credited with nurturing such 20-game winners as Jim Kaat, Denny McLain, Mickey Lolich and the beautifully-named Jim "Mudcat" Grant, is high on Smith. "Sain told me recently that if Mike stays healthy, he should have no problems making it Majors," says Steve, who made the trip to Florida to watch his son's progress.

The biggest problem facing a starter-turned-reliever is the new regimen he's required to adopt. For Smith, that meant having to pitch very day and learning to warm up in 10 pitches rather than 10 minutes. "It was tough for him at first," his father noted. "He was always the type who took awhile to get into the game. Now he had to learn to be ready quickly. But as far as pitching every day goes, that's not a worry. Mike's arm is strong. He was clocked this spring at 93 miles-per-hour, though he averages around 89 or 90."

Smith is understandedly becoming weary of the Minor League scene. He's been at it five years, and as his father says, "There's lots of money at the Majors, but none down there." But, unless something drastic occurs with the Braves, he is still probably another year away from taking the big step up. There is the hope, at least, that as a reliever the long waiting process can be quickened.

Waltham is pick in Suburban league baseball reasons why they are rated the favorites. Scott and Steve LaForest, Dan Perkins, and Jim Danielson on the mound, Larry Scafidi at third, Darren Marcou at short and Jim Walsh at second are seven strong ones.

Scafidi's major concern? A good start. Last year the Hawks lost three of their first four and had to finish with a rush, winning 10 of their last 11, for a tournament berth. Scafidi doesn't want them to be placed in that situation again. "We played sloppy defense at the beginning of the season last year," says Al. "I want to make sure we avoid that happening again."

WEYMOUTH SOUTH — Niles has taken the Wildcats to the Suburban championship the last two seasons, sharing the title with Brockton in 1981. The 'Cats went 16-5 in '81 and 12-4 in the league. They advanced all the way to the South Sectional final before losing to Brockton in a wild game which had to be suspended and played over two days. "One I'd just as soon forget," says Niles.

He might also want to forget the losses his team has sustained through graduation. Gone are every one of South's starters from a year ago. Two of them, Jim Moriarity and Brian Smith, were drafted by the pros. Smith, South's power-pitcher, is playing in the Red Sox' farm system while Moriarity, who was picked by the Detroit Tigers, elected to attend college instead.

Another graduate was three-time All-Star hurler Jim Stenson, so Niles has his work cut out for him. "We have just two people back with any kind of varsity experience," says Niles. "Actually, what we've got is our jayvee team moving up to play varsity. There is some talent, but we'll take time to develop. If we're still in it by the end of the year, we could sneak in. We still have a title to defend."

Up from the jayvees to keep South in contention is Mark Stenson, younger brother of Jim. Word has it that this Stenson may be better than the one which dominated the league for two years, so the Wildcats should be in decent shape there. They also have Seniors Butch Newall and Bob Harkins and Junior Bill Jackson available for mound duty.

Other big guns will be Third Baseman John Sheridan and Pitcher and Leftfielder Glenn Fitzgerald. Sheridan may pitch a little too. Basically, South is a young, inexperienced outfit which needs to mature. "The pitching will have to carry us for awhile," says Niles.

BROCKTON — Ahh, good old Brockton. Is there ever a year when they are not in contention? "We've got the talent; we just need a good start," says Coach Tom Pileski.

Actually, not a lot returns from the outfit which went 20-4, shared the league title and then won the South Sectional. Five lettermen are back, led by Pitcher Rick Collette, Shortstop Kevin Crocker and Center Fielder John McDonald.

Collette, a big, strong fastball pitcher, will be the ace of the staff. "He'll be our No.1," Pileski says. A righthander, Collette was 2-0 in 14 innings last season.

Behind him will be Southpaw Joe Orcutt and Righty Shawn Barry. Both played Jayvees last season; Orcutt was 5-1 and Barry a dazzling 7-1. The ability is there.

"We expect to be contending," Pileski notes. "We just feel that it will take time for the experience to set in. By the end of the season we should be one of the better teams in the league."

Collette also powers the offense. A .333 hitter in '81, he'll see outfield duty when not pitching. McDonald started half of Brockton's games in right and batted a lusty .390 while Crocker played 18 of 24 games at short for the Boxers.

WEYMOUTH NORTH — The Maroons enter the 1982 season with a new coach, a new attitude and the feeling that they are as solid as any club in the Suiburban League.

A fantasy? Maybe not. Phil Van Neste, an assistant basketball coach for Weymouth High in the late 1960s, takes over a team whose pitching depth may rival Waltham's or Newton North's. He posseses a nucleus of six returning starters from a 7-9 team which was good enough in '81 to defeat Weymouth South, 5-4, and take Brockton to nine innings before losing, 3-2. "The problem last year was defense," says Van Neste. "We gave games away. But most of those errors came from third base, shortstop and center field, and we believe we've filled those positions with people who can do the job."

Back is Righthander John Walsh, a control pitcher who was 4-0 including that big victory over South. He is backed by Lefthander Rich Lockhead — the loser to Brockton — and Righthander Mike Walsh. Although officially listed as North's No.3 hurler, Van Neste believes Mike Walsh may have the best pure stuff of anyone on the staff. "He was used mostly in relief last year," he says. "But I'm thinking about making him a starter and using Lockhead more in relief."

Walsh's record during Senior Babe Ruth League play in the summer was 14-2, so Van Neste feels he has a winner.

The Maroons also possess one of the finest second basemen in the league in Senior Tom Leahy. "He turns the double-play better than anyone I've ever seen on the high school level," Van Neste says. Leahy only batted .250 last season, but a hand injury suffered in the first game hampered his performance. He proved he can hit by stroking the ball for a .330 average at the much tougher Legion level last summer.

Other returning lettermen are Center Fielder Tino Gomez, a .400 hitter and described by Van Neste as a "Joe DiMaggio-type. He never makes a hard play look hard because he's so graceful," Catcher George Zmudzien and First Baseman Glenn Raeside, who hit .356 on a part-time basis.

"We'll be a singles and doubles team," Van Neste says. "I'm hungry to win and so are the players."

CAMBRIDGE — Another darkhorse contender. Says Bill Fulginite, "We've worked very hard to make our program the equal of any around. This is the year when we can contend."

If the Cantabs are to improve on last season's 11-11 record, the reason will be Harshbarger. Fulginite says very honestly that for Cambridge to do well, he needs eight or nine wins from Harshbarger. "That's a lot to ask for, I know, but Mike is one of the best high school athletes in the area. He could even be the top player in the league," he says.

Harshbarger was 6-3 on the mound last season and .364 at the plate, so he can do it all. He will need some help, though, and the people Cambridge will be relying on will be First Baseman Jeff Holmes, Shortstop Colin Daughtery, Catcher Jack Lopes ("Best athlete I've had here"), Sophomore Third Baseman Jim Hoog and 6-3, 220-pound Designated Hitter Bob Hoog.

The question mark is experience and a lack of pitching depth. "If we get backed up, we could be in some trouble," Fulginite said.

BROOKLINE — It's another rebuilding year for Norm Laakso and the Indians. Gone is their best player, Jorge Bassiacos, but back are starters Gary Leung (third base), Doug Scalise (center field), Chris Horblitt (catcher), T.R. Fay (designated hitter) and Steve Cronin (pitcher).

The Indians were 6-10 in '81, and with a lack of hitting and not much depth, it's doubtful they can do much better than 8-8 this time around. "We're optimistic, but pitching is a big question mark," says Laakso. "We're also a little weak up the middle."

NORTH QUINCY — The Red Raiders return four starters from an 8-9 team and enter the season with many underclassmen. "Defensively, we should have a nice team," says Coach Charlie Bunker, "but we have lots of inexperience. It'll be a question of how we adjust to varsity action."

Pitcher Paul Earle heads the contingent of returnees. Earle was 3-3 last season with all three losses being by one run.

First baseman Ray Mallory (.315 average), Shortstop Bob O'Brien and Catcher John Kozlowski are also back.

"I'd be happy with a .500 season," says Bunker.

QUINCY — The Presidents haven't been too stately in a long time, and this year should be no different. The Chicago Cubs of the Suburban League, they were 3-15 last season. They should be the same this year.

"We're in the pits," Coach Bud Mosher says simply. "I don't know why. I can't explain it because Quincy has an awful lot of good baseball programs, but we just don't have enough quality people to contend."

The best Quincy can offer is second team All-Star Catcher Paul Quigley and Junior Third Baseman John Balzano. Both are solid players on a weak team.

The real problem at Quincy is the interest level. Mosher has just 14 players, counting Jayvees, on this season's squad.

Glee club spring concert Wednesday

NEEDHAM — The Highland Glee Club will present its spring concert Wednesday, April 14 at 8:15 at Newman Middle School in Needham.

Guest artist will be Mary Lee Cirella, soprano soloist well known in the New England area, especially for her oratorio performances. Cirella has studied voice at New England Conservatory and with Phyllis Curtin at Tanglewood, has appeared with Worcester Oratorio Society and John Oliver Chorale. She has also made opera appearances with the Cambridge Opera Workshop. Presently a lecturer in voice at Tufts University, she has sung in faculty concerts there. At this concert her featured number will be "The Jewel Song" from Goiunod's "Faust."

Another special feature will be presentation of Highland Glee Club's annual scholarship award for further musical study to a senior at a Boston-area high school.

The main part of the program will include tributes to music and dance: Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," the moody "Tarantella" of Randall Thompson, and a short Czecho-Slovakian dance song. Then a change of tempo with "Sympathy Waltz Song" from Rudolf Friml's comedy opera "The Firefly." Closing the program will be a Gospel-rock piece, "Gonna Rise Up Singin'."

Frank calls cutback plan 'misguided'

WEST NEWTON — Administration and Congressional proposals to balance the budget at the expense of the elderly by freezing their Social Security benefits are misguided and should be dropped immediately, Congressman Barney Frank, D-Mass., said this week.

Senator Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, and Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio, ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee, have proposed alternatives to President Reagan's 1983 spending plan that call for a one-year freeze in cost-of living increases for Social Security.

"It's important that we work to reduce the size of the deficit proposed in the President's budget," Frank said, "and there are a number of ways to do that without imposing harmful cuts to the most vulnerable segment of our society."

"Instead of frightening our senior citizens with threats to freeze their incomes in the face of escalating costs," Frank said in a press release, "we could reduce the deficit by cancelling the oil tax breaks and erasing from the budget the funding for the MX missile, military aid for El Salvador, construction of the Tennessee-Tombigbee barge canal, and price supports for the dairy industry.":

Newton students show their talents in musical

NEWTON — What happens when kids and adults get together to write a musical? A big department store moves into a small town; a young girl is torn between her love of music and loyalty to her family. This is just part of the drama when 30 talented kids from all over greater Boston come together to perform "The Duchess of Pleasant Hill," later this month.

Appearing in "The Duchess of Pleasant Hill" from Newton are Judy Bard, Jeff Dios, Ian Fellows, Noah Herzog, Elizabeth Holzman, Rona Hurst, Sara Lane, Joel Obermayer, Billy Salloway, Celia Savitz, Ali Schiff, Adam Schraft, Janine Sherman, Ellen Stern, Leslie Stone, Julie Subrin, Jenny Subrin, Mandy Vinyard and Jessica Weisman.

The production is the ninth collaboration of the Freelance Players, a children's theatre company of young people ages 9-16, and represents the culmination of a 12-week program which included script-writing, make-up and technical workshops as well as the standard rehearsals of acting, dance and drama.

"Kids have a tremendous amount of enthusiasm and creativity," says the group's director and founder, Kippy Dewey. "Under professional direction the kids have really become involved in every aspect of the creation from the beginning."

The group auditions over 100 kids bi-annually, but there are usually only a handful of openings; the kids keep returning year after year. "It is not always easy for a kid to get up and perform," explains former member Laura Porter of Wellesley, a soon-to-be Barnard freshman, "but the group as a whole is incredibly supportive. The kids develop close friendships. They may not all go on to Broadway or 'Fame,' but they have an opportunity to develop an interest in something really worthwhile that can last the rest of their lives."

"The Duchess of Pleasant Hill" will open first in the suburbs on Saturday, April 17, at 7:30 p.m. at Newton South High School, 140 Brandeis Road in Newton Centre, with a matinee on Sunday, April 18 at 2 p.m. as well. The group will move to Boston for the weekend of May 1 and 2 where they will be featured at the NEXT MOVE THEATRE, One Boylston Place, with all matinees at 1 p.m. Call 524-6848 for ticket information.

Parking ticket reprieve noted

NEWTON — Parking scofflaws have a two to three month reprieve until a tough new tow and hold policy, similar to the use of the "Denver Boot," will be enforced.

City Parking Clerk Richard Walsh says that computer files must be updated and a backlog of paid tickets must be recorded before the policy can be implemented.

Police Chief William Quinn, meanwhile, promised strict enforcement of the the tow and hold when the lists of scofflaws are issued to his department.

The Board of Aldermen last week unanimously approved the policy which will allow the Police Department to tow and hold the vehicles of drivers with five or more unpaid parking tickets.

Walsh said that lists of scofflaws provided to the Police Department will have to be updated daily for the system to work. "The worst thing we could do is tow someone that has paid their tickets," he said.

Since Jan. 1, the city has issued approximately 40,000 parking tickets. The tow and hold policy is part of a city effort to step up collection and reduce a backlog of unpaid parking tickets.

The 40,000 tickets are expected to bring in $140,000 of an estimated $400,000 the city plans to raise in revenue this year. In fiscal year 1982, parking tickets put an estimated $75,000 into the city's coffers.

The city took over the collection of parking fines from Newton District Court in January. Several outside sections of the state budget transfered responsibility for the parking violations from the state to cities and towns.

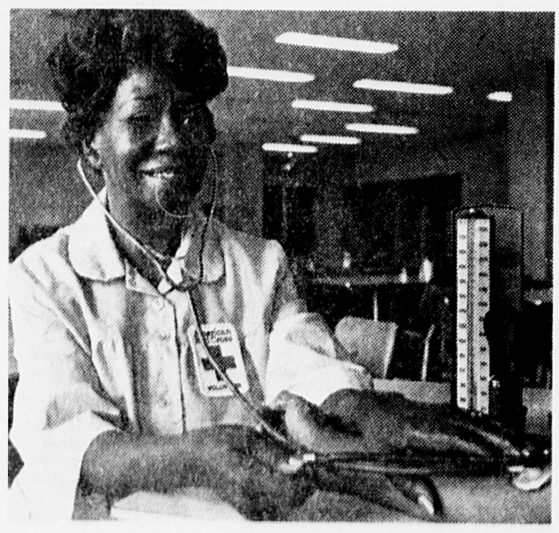
Ethel Moody gave more than 6,000 free blood pressure tests last year.
Has yours been checked recently?



Lots of folks call Ethel, Miss Blood Pressure, because she's one of the Red Cross volunteers who gives free blood pressure tests.

"High blood pressure is a silent disease," warns Ethel. "Generally, there are no symptoms. The only way to tell if you've got it is to have your blood pressure taken."

About 35 million Americans have high blood pressure. It's a leading cause of stroke, heart disease and kidney problems.

Prompt treatment reduces that danger. In most people, high blood pressure can be lowered and kept under control.

When was the last time you had your blood pressure checked? If you can't remember, it's been too long.

Stiff fines for crimes of anti-Semitism eyed

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With anti-semitic vandalism and crimes aimed at ethnic groups reportedly on the rise, Alderman Cynthia Creem is drawing up an ordinance to impose stiff fines for ethnic-related vandalism and threats in the city.

"I don't think we have anything that is severe enough for specifically that type of crime," said Creem, who has docketed the proposal with the Aldermanic Human Services Committee. "There should be real penalties for people who put swastikas on schools and buildings. I'm interested in imposing fines."

Creem said recent anti-Semitic vandalism at temples in Milton and Burlington was the impetus for a proposed ordinance. If approved, the ordinance, which is currently being researched by Creem, would be the first in the state aimed at anti-ethnic crime including racially motivated attacks.

"I think it's scary that there are still so many deranged people out there who have bitter feelings against ethnic groups," she asserted. "It's frightening."

The city has the power to impose fines. However, the city could not impose a minimum prison penalty. Aspects of the proposed ordinance are sure to spark opposition from ardent supporters of free speech and may be illegal under the constitution.

Creem pointed to the painting of swastikas at the Meadowbrook Junior High School last year as evidence that the ethnic related vandalism and crime is prevalent in the city. "It's all over the place," she said.

Creem said the ordinance is also aimed at deterring threats to people because of their ethnic background and would include a provision to impose fines for verbal and physical threats against a person because of his ethnic background.

"What I'd like to do is protect people from intimidation because of their ethnic bacgroud," she said. "There are people in Boston that are carrying placards that say: 'jews should be killed."

Alderman Verne Vance, a local attorney, said there clearly is constitutional problems and questions that must be resolved in regard to some aspects of the ordinance.

Vance said that he could not comment specifically on the merit of the proposal because he has not seen the ordinance.

He pointed out, however, that the constitutional protection of freedom of speech could present legal problems for the ordinance. "It is very difficult to punish oral and written speech," Vance said.

He also noted that a provision regarding vandalism specifically against churches could face legal difficulty because of the constitutional seperation of church and state.

Vance said the board would have to consider "carefully and responsibly" whether the ordinance could withstand a constitutional test.

Noting that any "reasonable person as a general philosophical matter" is opposed to vandalism or acts against someone because of their race or religion, Vance said there is a "real question" as to what specific legislative enactments the constitution would allow.

Crime prevention

Mayor Theodore Mann put a bumper sticker on his car recently as City Hall and the Newton Police launched the "Crime Watch" program. The program is geared toward increasing public watchfulness for criminal activities, and encouraging people to report such crimes to the police.

Hospital readies for Marathon Day

By Eileen Fitzgerald

NEWTON - Watching the Boston Marathon from Washington Street in Newton is always a spectacular event. But have you ever stopped to think about what goes on behind the scene to make sure all goes as planned?

While most people are busy cheering on the thousands of runners, 50 Newton Police officers, 50 Metropolitan District Commission officers, 20 auxiliary police, 45 Red Cross volunteers, 10 ambulances, 15 Red Cross vehicles and hundreds of Newton-Wellesley Hospital staffers are standing by all day to provide emergency assistance to any runner in distress.

As the only hospital on the marathon route - located at the 17-mile mark - Newton Wellesley begins preparing for emergency care several months in advance. Representatives from the Red Cross, the Newton and Wellesley Police and people from Chaulk Ambulance, the State and MDC police meet with NWH doctors and administrators to discuss medical coverage for the famed event.

The group also, along with the hospital's Security Department, outlines emergency traffic routes to and from the hospital.

Orchestrating the emergency care for a sporting event involving thousands of runners and spectators requires a total team effort from the entire NWH health care staff. Additional nursing and medical staff provide 24-hour care in the Emergency Department, while other hospital personnel work behind the scenes marking sure the department is fully equipped. Extra supplies such as stretchers, wheelchairs, hyperthermia pads, blankes, ice and intravenous fluids must be readily available.

As prevention against dehydration, a common malady suffered by runners, the hospital's pharmacy prepares its own beverage, called "Marathon-aide" which replaces the body's salt intake.

Another common medical problem for runners is hypothermia (which the body temperature drops below normal) or hyperthermia (when the temperature becomes abnormally high). As a preventive measure NWH physicians trained in emergency medicine instruct the Red Corss, police emergency medical technicians (EMT's) and ambulance personnel in the treatment of the two temperature problems on the morning before the marathon.

The hospital is also equipped to treat an overflow of patients. The Outpatient Department, staffed by doctors and nurses, serves as a back-up system to the Emergency Department. Social service and public relations personnel also set up a communications network in the Outpatient Dept. to call families of patients and to facilitate discharge plans.

Most of the 45 runners treated at NWH over the last two years suffered from exhaustion, dehydration and muscle cramps. However, the hospital is ready to handle any emergency. And that should be reassuring whether you're running or just watching.

(Eileen Fitzgerald is an editorial specialist at NWH)

NWH disaster plan worked well

NEWTON - Dozens of anxious parents rushed into Newton-Wellesley Hospital on March 25 fearing the worst after a serious accident between a school bus and a pick-up truck.

But when they arrived at the Outpatient Department they were surprised and relieved. Not only had their children received medical treatment, but they were being well-cared for by NWH nurses and social workers.

Just two hours earlier these 13 METCO students were on their way home from school in Wellesley when, shortly after noon, the school bus collided with the truck at the intersection of Parker Street and Route 9 in Newton Centre.

Within minutes the Chaulk Ambulance Rescue squad had alerted the NWH Emergency department about the extent of injuries. NWH Chief of Emergency Medicine Dr. Desmond Colohan gave medical instructions to the ambulance crew and sent medical resident Dr. Bruce Tofias to the scene.

Intravenous transfusions were immediately given to the 18-year-old driver of the pick-up, who was trapped in the truck for almost two hours after the crash.

Meanwhile, the Newton Fire Department, Police and rescue squad were in constant contact with the hospital. NWH Assistant Executive Director Michael Varadian said the communication network was "excellent."

"Chaulk Ambulance provided the hospital with the necessary medical information for us to adequately prepare for the patients being transported here," he said afterward.

Based on the reports from the scene, Dr. Charlotte Yeh, associate chief of the NWH Department of Emergency Medicine and chairperson of the hospital's Disaster Control Center , implemented a Level 1 Disaster Plan. Dr. Yeh said the Level 1 notifies hospital personnel they will be treating between three and five "immediate care" patients or less than 20 "minimal care" patients.

According to Varadian, the plan demands a total team effort of all hospital departments.

"All departments are alerted to provide back up support for emergency," he said. "This involves staff from nursing, social service, public relations, pathology, respiratory care, radiology, operating room and the outpatient department, pharmacy, central supply, distribution services and security."

Newton-Wellesley resident Dr. Bruce Tofias communicated by radio at the accident scene.

The Emergency Department physicians treated all 16 patients with the assistance of the medical interns, and residents, Emergency Department nursing staff, intravenous team nurses and radiologists. Only one child was admitted overnight for observation. Both the bus driver and a female passenger from the pick-up truck were treated and released.

A trauma team, with orthopaedic surgeon Dr. Carl Spector, vascular surgeon Dr. Robert Ewton and two orthopaedic residents performed surgery on the truck driver.

After the 12 children were released from emergency the hospital staff took them to the Outpatient Department where they were treated with cookies and tonic while their parents were called and reassured the children were safe.

Nurses also gave parents instructions for follow up care for the children, most of whom suffered minor bruises adn neck sprains.

Chief of Emergency Medicine, Dr. Desmond Colohan, praised the efforts of hospital personnel for carrying out the disaster plan.

"The team effort was terrific," Dr. Colohan said. "Within an hour and a half of the arrival of the first patient, we were able to medically treat everyone, notify the parents and even arrange to transport the students home."

Sealer seeks more manpower

NEWTON — The Aldermanic Public Safety Committee unanimously approved a resolution Monday night requesting that Mayor Theodore Mann hire an additional employee for the city's Weights and Measures department.

The one man department with a proposed "level funded" fiscal year 1983 budget of $23,372 investigates consumer complaints regarding goods priced by weight or measure.

Robert Silver, the sole city sealer of weights and measures, told the committee that review of many scales and weighed or measured goods is not accomplished because of the lack of staff.

"There are things that just don't get done," he asserted. "It's a ridiculous situation."

Mann is expected to ignore the resolution. In his budget message, the mayor, citing severe financial constraints, requested that any resolutions from the 24-member legislative body be accompanied by an alternative financial source or a corresponding cut in another budget recommendation.

After a brief 10-minute review, the committee gave unanimous initial approval to the weights and measure's budget.

Airwaves bind emergency system

Helped in recent bus accident

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — When a medical emergency occurs, the best anyone can hope for is that a capable doctor is nearby. But that isn't always the case.

Chaulk Ambulance has the next best thing. The Advanced Life Support System (ALS) allows the the paramedic on the scene and doctor at a nearby hospital to communicate verbally so that doctors can direct rescuers in emergency care. At the same time, a patient's vital signs are being electronically sent to the hospital, as paramedics on the scene watch them on a small screen.

"The paramedic is actually an extension of the emergency room," explains Curt Lovett, Chaulk spokesperson. "With this system, we hope to reduce the mortality rate by 30%," he added.

The ALS was used in Newton for the first time three weeks ago during a major vehicular accident in Newton Centre. A school bus filled with children crashed into a pickup truck over Route 9, pinning the truck's driver, an 18-year-old Newton man, inside the truck for more than 1½ hours.

Chaulk rescuers, with police and fire EMTs, sustained the driver intraveneously, as a Newton-Wellesley Hospital doctor made medical recommendations via the ALS radio system.

The youth's foot was later amputated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Though Lovett and several Chaulk rescuers agree that the results "may have been a lot worse" if they were not using the ALS.

The $16,000 ALS system consists of a Pioneer 3000 receiver for voice communication between doctors and paramedics. The Life Pack 5 features a four-inch screen for monitoring a patients cardiac rythms. The defribillator paddles release 400 watt seconds of electricity used in cardiac emergencies, which make up 60% of medical emergencies in Newton.

During a medical emergency, paramedics using the system call a central dispatcher in Boston, who then connects them with the appropriate hospital. A telephone coupler is used if rescuers are in a dense area where towers or high-rises interfere with radio communication. In Upper Falls, for example, radio and TV towers create communication problems, Lovett explained.

The ALS is relatively new. First used in Los Angeles in 1968, the ALS system has moved slowly in the United States. In Massachusetts, only Boston and a handfull of other municipalities have the system, according to Chaulk paramedics.

Chaulk, which came under contract in Newton eight months ago, will not use the system until mid-July. "We're still testing equipment," Lovett explained.

The ALS will be used by paramedics on Rescue 3. Generally, Rescue 1 and 2, operated by Chaulk's Advanced EMTs, respond to emergency calls. If the situation calls for the ALS, Rescue 3 will be alerted.

Even with the ALS, Lovett stressed that Chaulk's rescuers still need help from police and fire EMTs. Though Chaulk's EMTs are more advanced than those in the city's department, police and fire are often on the scene of an emergency before Chaulk. During a medical emergency, every second counts. "We've already had a number of "saves" because of police response," said Bruce Baxter, a paramedic.

Paramedics have 1000 more hours of training and are qualified to administer direct medication. EMTs provide basic life support, such as mouth to mouth resuscitation and CPR. Bobby Carl, another Chaulk paramedic added, "It really feels good to get to the scene and see someone doing CPR."

Police asking for one dozen new cruisers

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — If Police Chief William Quinn gets his way, the police department will receive $100,000 to purchase a dozen new cruisers.

Quinn told the aldermanic Public Safety Committee Monday night that the 1983 autos are needed to replace 12 police cars that are facing frequent and costly repairs. The cars are part of the Police Department budget package recommended by Mayor Theodore Mann.

The cruisers being replaced are: two 1972's, one 1975, four 1979's, three 1980's and two 1981's. The cars range from a 1972 Dodge with 60,620 miles currently (65,670 by the end of the FY 82) to a 1980 Ford Mercury with 83,517 miles currently (119,517 projected).

Alderman Richard McGrath argued that the cars do not desperately need to be replaced.

"These are not mileages that convince me these vehicles should be retired," said the veteran alderman, reviewing the mileage of cruisers slated for replacement. "I'd be very reluctant to vote these funds based on this information."

McGrath claimed that if the vehicles are regularly checked and maintained, they should be able to run for more than 100,000 miles.

A mechanic for the department, however, contended that the autos would face costly repairs and be off the road frequently because of breakdowns if not replaced this year.

Timothy Coogan, a consultant for the Police Department and the Greater Boston Police Council, said that most cruisers are replaced with anywhere from 65,000 to 80,000 miles.

Public Safety Committee Chairman Joseph DePasquale supported the purchase. "I think the annual replacement of police cars is necessary," he said.

collective bargaining more than 10 years ago, 18 additional officers would be available for duty. Officers work 8½ hour days.

He said city labor negotiators attempted to put the four-day, two-day work week on the table last year and indicated that it may be a bargaining chip in the contract bargaining set to begin in several weeks. The police contract expires at the end of the fiscal year (June 30).

In other action, the Public Safety Committee gave initial approval to transfer $15,000 from the gasoline account for construction of a new radio department in police headquarters on Washington Street. cluding changes in zone to Residence D and E — which would allow for between 32 and 80 units — should be studied.

Danziger, who first presented to the neighborhood a development which called for a 35,000 square foot building, thought the proposal now in front of the committee was "pretty modest."

Danziger said he would prohibit 'service tenants' from leasing offices in the building because of the heavy flow of vehicular traffic created by these type of tenants. Northland, currently a Wellesley based firm, would occupy about a third of the building.

The proposed building would be constructed of red brick and its primary access would be from the rear into the second floor. The plan calls for a 111-car parking lot at the rear of the building.

King's 'Workfare' program launched

Gov. Edward J. King's "Workfare" program to put welfare recipients to work across the Commonwealth has been launched by the Welfare Commissioner, who claims it will make recipients independent of the welfare program.

"This program will make people independent of a system that they've relied on so heavily for so long. The old way of doing things just doesn't work," Thomas H. Spirito said Monday at a news conference in Lynn.

The $23 million Comprehensive Work and Training Program is designed to have able welfare recipients work in an attempt to reduce the state's overall welfare caseload, Spirito said.

The program, which King calls "the first of its kind in the nation," mandates that welfare recipients with children over 6 years old and new applicants seek and hold unsubsidized jobs in the private sector.

Workfare is aimed primarily at those who receive Aid to Families with Dependent Children subsidies, and about 30,000 of the state's 104,000 AFDC recipients are eligibile to participate, administrators said.

Advocacy groups and welfare recipients have sharply criticized the mandatory aspect of the program and have expressed fears "Workfare" will not provide meaningful work.

$50 from Dodge 'Good Guys' for 'White Hats' at Marathon

BOSTON — Sporting the right white cowboy hat at the Boston Marathon April 19, may net you $50.

The New England Dodge Advertising Association is sponsoring a "Good Guys Wear White Hats" program offering licensed drivers a free white cowboy hat for taking a test drive at their local Dodge dealer.

And those test drivers who wear their free white cowboy hats to Boston April 19 to watch the Boston Marathon, have a chance at a certificate worth #50 from their local Dodge dealer.

The $50 certificates will be passed out by the "Dodge Boy's Spotter" who will circulate among the 3 million people expected to watch the race. The Spotter will decide at random which cowboy-hatted watchers win the $50 certificates.

The New England Dodge dealers expect to distribute more than about 7,000 white hats during their "Good Guys Wear White Hats" test drive promotion.

All Dodge cars - the Omni, 024, Charger 2.2, Aries, 400, Diplomat, Colt and Challenger - and all Dodge trucks - Rampage, light duty truck, Ram wagon and Ram vans, Ramcharger, D 50, and Power Ram 50 are available for test drives.

Newton resident Nelson Butters, Ph.D., a professor of neurology (neuropsychology) at Boston University. School of Medicine, recently was awarded a $79,186 grant from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism for the first year of the three-year grant to study how chronic alcoholism affects certain cognitive functions.

Long-term chronic alcoholism is a disease marked by distinct memory impairments. The condition is engendered by daily consuming the equivalent of a quart of whiskey or a case of beer over an extended period of time, such as ten or more years.

Researchers once used Alcoholic Korsakoff's Syndrome, an amnestic condition, as the model for a typical alcoholic illness. The syndrome was thought to occur suddenly as the result of nutritional deficiencies rather than the toxic buildup of alcohol in the bloodstream. Butters' earlier studies have shown that Alcoholic Korsakoff's Syndrome was a gradual consequence of toxic accumulation of alcohol, not simply the result of malnutrition , since well-fed alcoholics developed similar memory disorders as did alcoholics who were malnourished.

Further e vidence compiled by Butters indicated that both young and old alcoholics suffered memory lapses associated with alcohol abuse.

A 1960 graduate of Boston University, Butters received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Clark University in Worcester . He was the recipient of a Woodrow National Fellowship and one from the National Institute of Health Pre-and Post-doctoral Research Fellowship. President-Elect of Division 40 of the American Psychological Association, Butters is a member of the Collegium of Distinguis hed Alumni of Boston University's College of Liberal Arts and he is a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The author co-author of 454 scientific articles, he is a Research Career Scientist at the Boston Veterans Administration Medical Center in Jamaica Plain. He joined the BUSM faculty in 1967.

Butters, his wife, and their three children reside on Upland Avenue.

NCS spring programs

NEWTON — Newton Community Schools has recently kicked off its spring programs for senior adults, noted Joseph Baron, NCS executive director.

"Through NCS, seniors come together in their own neighborhoods and actively plan and manage their own programs," Baron said. "As a result of this high level of participation, we're proud to offer much more than arts and crafts programs traditionally offered to this age group. Because seniors design their own activities, we are able to offer a comprehensive range of programs including trips, guest speakers, musical presentations and physical fitness component."

In Oak Hill Park, seniors meet every Tuesday from 1:40-4 p.m. at the Solomon Schechter Day School, 60 Stein Circle. This month, participants will tour Channel 5, learn from a consumer workshop, and enjoy a mystery presentation. Plans are underway to tour Arnold Arboretum in May and the historic Lowell area in June.

In Thompsonville, participants meet every Monday morning from 10-noon at the Filippo Corsi Club, corner Jackson St. and Langley Road. In April, the group will travel to the Boston Aquarium and in June, 40 seniors will go to Rockport. Presentationss at the Club in the next few weeks will include a book review, a fashion clinic, dancing, musical reviews and a slide presentation.

NCS'largest senior group, the Upper Falls Senior Activities Series, meets at the Upper Falls Community Center (the old Emerson School) every Wednesday morning from 10-noon. There, two trips, the first to Portsmouth, N.H. and the second to Mystic Seaport, Ct., are planned for May and June. Local musical groups, including the Dads and Grandads and the Reinterpretation Jazz Bands will perform later this spring, and several lectures and physical fitness programs are also planned.

In addition to these senior-operated groups, Newton Community Schools also provides programs in conjunction with senior drop-in centers. Services are provided at the following centers: the Nonantum Multi-Service Center, the Bethel-Atereth Congregation (the city's kosher lunch site), the Newton Corner Drop-In Center and the Newtonville Drop-In Center. Newton Community Schools also sponsors theatre trips into Boston with the Newton Arts Center.

For more information on any of these activities, please call Newton Community Schools at 552-7118.

Gasoline monitoring is questioned

NEWTON — A $12,000 metering system purchased last year to regulate police department gasoline consumption may have been a waste of money.

Police Chief William Quinn, who opposed the purchase of the system, told the aldermanic Public Safety Committee Monday night that it has done little more than save the department paperwork. The system will cost the department an estimated $4,000 to maintain in the next fiscal year, according to the budget.

The system, used by other city departments, was designed to prevent the possible stealing of gasoline and spot gas guzzlers that need maintenance. The machine spells out the day, time and amount of gas used by police department vehicles.

Alderman Michael Malec said the committee should consider eliminating the system. "If that's all that is being done," Malec said of the reduction in paperwork, "maybe we ought to get rid of this machine."

Alderman Richard McGrath contended that the department is not using the machine properly. "You are using it as a sophisticated adding machine," asserted McGrath after pressing the chief on how the data from obtained is analyzed and used.

Quinn assured that there is no stealing of gasoline within his department. "We are cops," he told McGrath. "Don't underestimate us."

Running not good for young children

The director of the sports medicine program at Children's Hospital Medical Center is warning parents a child's body is not equipped to handle the stresses of long-distance running.

While acknowledging running can be useful in the development of the heart and lungs, Dr. Lyle Micheli said Monday there are significant consequences in a heavy running program on developing bones and muscles, even though it is too new a problem to define specific ailments.

"It's too early to tell how much real damage is being done to children by distance running," said Micheli. "The problem may not surface for another 10 years. Already, however, we are seeing overuse injuries that were once unheard of in children, and appear to be training-related."

Micheli said 10- and 12-year-olds are now training 40-50 miles per week. The pounding of feet against pavement can create stress on muscles and bones which have not reached adult strength.

"While studies have show that, with proper preparation, young athletes can sustain the cardiovascular stress of distance running," continuted Micheli, "ligaments and bones which are still growing may not be able to sustain muscloskeletal stress.

"The age limit for entering the Boston Marathon was set at 16 for some very good reasons," he said.

Micheli noted distance running used to be rare among children. But as running has gained popularity with grade school and junior high students, they are running longer distances "even if it takes them twice as many footfalls as adults."

The result is an increase in ligament and tendon problems and stress fractures. Micheli pointed out these fractures can occur in adults as a result of imbalance, knee misalignment, training errors or improper footwear. But the incidence in children is "simply a result of rapidly growing bones."

Micheli acknowledged few facts exist on injury rates or distance training for children. But, he recommended, runners under the age of 14 not train or compete at distances longer than 10 kilometers or 6.2 miles.

King undermined anti-corruption law

Gov. Edward J. King's administration has undermined the state's 2-year-old anti-corruption law by ignoring most of its provisions, a private government watchdog group claims.

MassAction, a nonpartisan research group, concluded that "the old system of public construction in Massachusetts continues to prevail at the public's expense."

A 68-page evaluation of the Construction Reform Act passed to curb waste and fraud in state building was released over the weekend. The Legislature passed the law in July 1980 after the Ward Commission revealed a pattern of inefficiency and corruption in state building, design and supply practices.

The study, entitled "Bricks Without Mortar," concluded that the administration failed to promulgate most of the rules and regulations required by the law.

Albert E. Anderson, MassAction chairman, said, "The thrust of this new legislation is being gutted by a lack of forceful implementation. To salvage this key reform, the governor, the Legislature and state agency administrators must get behind the effort now."

The statute stipulated that the state must adopt formal rules and procedures for capital improvements, tighten controls over designer and contractor selection and prevent duplication and unnecessary building.

The report described administration efforts to implement the law as "inconsistent."

"The majority of the new administrative requirements have not been implemented," the report said, adding that "this is particularly distressing in light of the fact that the commonwealth was allowed one year from the passage of the law to prepare for a new administration and to promulgate new rules and regulations."

"It is unclear why the executive branch has resisted complying with the Construction Reform Act," the evaluation said, "but the impact of such attempts is to undermine the objectives of the law and to establish dangerous precedents which threaten successful implementation."

Gerard Morris, a spokesman for King, reserved comment until administration officials have read the report.

A checklist of 70 major requirements of the law found that the administration had met only six, MassAction said.

The group criticized administration attempts "to compromise the success of the law."

It cited the administration's unsuccessful attempt last year to transfer Boston State Hospital land to the Massachusetts Government Land Bank for industrial development and to expand correctional facilities without following the legal guidelines.

Both bills were killed by the Legislature. (UPI report)

Dukakis proposes new crime plans

Former Gov. Michael Dukakis Monday proposed a four point anti- crime program that recommended 750 additional police officers, swift trials, tougher sentences for career and juvenile criminals, and citizen programs.

Dukakis said under Gov. Edward J. King, violent crime has risen by 30 percent and police officers have been laid off under the tax cut law Proposition 2 ½ because King has not increased local aid enough to insure their rehiring.

In 1978, King stunned Dukakis in the Democratic primary after a campaign that emphasized getting tough on crime.

Dukakis said this time he would not make the mistake of failing to let voters know "I'm not an easy guy when it comes to lawbreakers."

"Governor King's crime program is a failure," Dukakis said.

Under the Dukakis plan, local aid would be increased so that cities and towns could hire 550 more police officers and 200 would be added to the State Police, Metropolitan District Commission and Registry of Motor Vehicles.

Dukakis is taking his plan to West Roxbury Tuesday night for the first of a series of town meetings.

He said the recommendations came after he spent several shifts traveling with police officers in Danvers, Lynn, Quincy, Charlestown and other communities and seeing decimated ranks and dilapidated equipment.

"I'm appalled at what I'm seeing," Dukakis said in his first major press conference of the campaign for the Democratic nomination.

King has proposed numerous task forces on crime and Dukakis said King's plans for a Tuesday press conference on sentencing legislation would be the governor's fifth.

Dukakis said King has not followed campaign promises because "crime is up and cops are down."

He also said King plans for tough drunk driving laws wouldn't work because there aren't enough police to enforce them.

Notices may signal layoffs

NEWTON — Notices have been sent to all of the Newton schools non-tenured teachers in anticipation of the nearly 27 teacher layoffs in the proposed school budget.

As the result of continued declining enrollment, the proposed $39.1 million school budget calls for the elimination of about 26 classroom teacher positions. Under union contract, the School Department must give notice by April 15 of the non-reappointment of staff.

Although the budget eliminates 26.25 positions, Helen Thomas explains that notices were sent including some part-time teachers. to all 155 of Newton's non-tenured teachers, The actual number to be cut would be at most the 26.25 positions under the current proposed budget, but Thomas is hopeful that this number can be "significantly" reduced as teachers retire, take other jobsor early retirement.

However, Thomas, assistant superintendent of personnel, says the rehiring situation will not be clear until late August.

Skater carries on heritage

But as she grew up, she developed an intense enthusiasm for field hockey, which she still enjoys, and stopped skating for more than 50 years.

Plimpton's return to roller skating came unexpectedly. Last summer someone asked her pose in a pair of roller skates for a photograph. The incident prompted Plimpton to start roller skating again last fall.

"It's great exercise," says Plimpton, who always led an active life. She taught physical education in Washington, D.C. schools for 36 years. While there, she also helped create the Field Hockey Association of Washington, D.C. and played in many national tournaments.

A graduate of Radcliffe College and Wellesley College, Plimpton says teaching children for so many years has kept her young. In addition to roller skating, she still swims, skiis and plays field hockey. Plimpton also fills her days with visits to friends throughout Massachusetts, and often drives alone to Washington to visit with long-time friends there.

"My friends around here are a little older or else they're incapacitated in some way," explains Plimpton. Since she is an unusually active 75-year-old, her friends tend to be at least 10 years younger.

Plimpton would like to see others her age be as active as she, but warns that roller skating isn't that easy.

"I wouldn't recommend it for people my age unless they've done it as a kid. I know I was scared when I started again," Plimpton says.

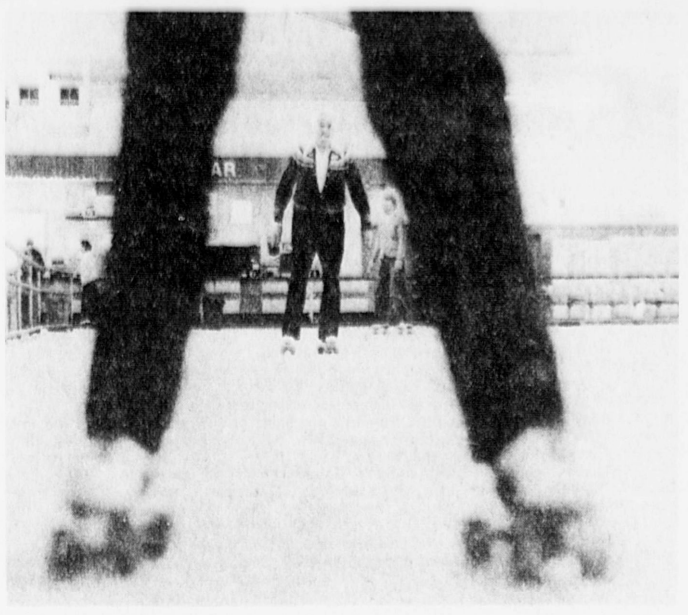
Plimpton owns a colorful collection of her grandfather's roller skates. The 50 pairs of skates include a rusted duo dating from 1863.

The collection has sparked the interest of The National Museum of Roller Skating. The museum, which held its grand opening this month in Lincoln, Nebraska, approached Plimpton last summer about acquiring the skates for the museum. "I may lend the skates to them for awhile," says Plimpton. She doesn't expect, however, that the midwestern museum will be a permanent home for the collection. "I think that the skates should stay on the east coast," Plimpton explains.

Her grandfather's original skates were first tested here in Newton also, when he tried them out on the wooden floors of the historic Nathaniel Allen House in West Newton.

Plimpton still lives in the Victorian home - filled with collections and family heirlooms - in which she was born and raised.

Much of it represents the family history that plays such an important role in her life.



FRAMED - Elizabeth Plimpton shows her style during weekly skating practice.

Besides original 19th century furnishings, Plimpton also maintains paintings by her uncle, Charles Franklin Pierce, her own 30-year-old collection of covered bridges, and some interesting miscellaneous items, such as an 18th pie shovel used in their summer home's original Dutch oven.

"I don't collect antiques just to have antiques. Most of these have come down through the family. They have meaning."

These days, Plimpton's only problem is finding other people her age that are still as energetic. "I'd like to find other people to play around with!"

OLD AND NEW - Elizabeth Plimpton shows off an antique skate from her collection, beside one of more modern times.

GOOD SPORT - Even at 75 Elizabeth Plimpton touts the benefits of roller skating as a way to keep fit.

Located on Elm Street in West Newton in a wood frame house, the agency contunued its growth and left the facility to utilize school buildings and church property to continue its programs.

Early programs included the establishment of a Penny Savings Branch of Newton to encourage young parents to save money, the start of what is now the All Newton Music School, drop-in activities and athletic teams for adolescents. Americanization program, summer camps, and friendship social clubs for all ages.

The agency built a portable facility to the rear of the Davis School and changed its name to the West Newton Community Center. The Rebecca Pomroy House was established in 1939, taking on a facility on Hovey Street. The Pomroy House stayed intact up through 1967 when it's facility was sold, and the agency moved into its quarters at 84 Eldredge Street in Newton.

In 1955 the facility at 429 Cherry Street in West Newton was erected. Late in 1958, at the occasion of its Golden Jubilee celebration, the "West" was dropped from the agency name which then appeared as the Newton Community Center.

General activities for all ages were continued at both the Center and Pomroy House, with the latter focussing on girls' and mothers' activities along with nursery school programs. In the early 1960's the staff joined activities which were undertaken to include youngsters referred by the Roxbury Multi-Service Center in the camping activity. Discussions were undertaken and research done on the need for Day Care in Newton, and a private grant was awarded to the agency to provide a detached worker program in Newton Upper Falls for a two year period.

In the late 1960's the agency took an active role in Newton Senior Citizens Committee which provided basis for the current Council on Aging and Youth Commissions; began dialogue and consummated the marriage of the Community Center and Pomroy House into the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc: administrated the Newton Head Start Program and Newton Youth Centers through funds provided by the Massachusetts Department of Youth Services; increased community organization efforts undertaken on behalf of special groups such as the pre-school child, the adolescent and the senior citizen.

The 1970's was a period of continued growth. It marked the beginning of a comprehensive Day Care and After School Care program; established the Newton Job Bank, Street worker Program, and the continuation of the Newton Youth Center through the City of Newton, the establishment of a Saturday Camp in conjunction with Boston College, addition of a variety of new leisure time activities such as creative arts, yoga, drama, and weight watching.

Administration took on new dimensions with area and regional responsibilities undertaken. The period was high lighted by the refurbishing and addition to the facilities at 429 Cherry Street and 84 Eldredge Street through broad community support.

Center holds Walkathon

WATERTOWN — On Sunday, May 2, at 1 p.m. there's an opportunity to double the benefits of walking by stepping out for the Watertown Health Center Walkathon '82. The eight-mile walkathon, beginning and ending at the center, will serve as a fund raiser for the area's primary health care facility, which has embarked on expansion and updating of its quarters at 85 Main Street.

All are invited to participate in the event and WHC staffers hope for a community-wide effort. According to Judy Kubzansky, WHC director, there is already substantial support for the walk. Area residents, health center families and friends, civic religious organizations, as well as businesses are expected to take part in the activities.

For more information on how to get in step with WHC Walkathon '82, please call 823-0001.

Marathon mob; some ask 'why?'

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Newton's Heartbreak Hill was a heartbreaker only if you were in running shoes Monday.

"I don't know why they do this," said Mrs. L.F. Carr of Dallas, Texas.

Carr was one of thousands of spectators jammed along the infamous uphill stretch of Commonwealth Avenue during the 86th annual Boston Marathon.

Grimacing runners forced themselves up the wide stretch near Boston College, just before the 21-mile mark of the 26-mile race.

"It's all down-hill from here," shouted the enthusiastic spectators to weary marathon runners. Exhausted men and women dragged themselves through the dust of winner Alberto Salazar - who set a new Boston Marathon course record - as the spirited crowd urged them to "Go, go, go!"

"This is where you make it or break it," remarked 28-year-old Waltham resident Keith Meliones. Meliones waited anxiously for his 55-year-old father, running the marathon for the fifteenth time. "We'll stop him and see how he's feeling," said Meliones. "He'll also get a word from his 'coach' and then we'll send him off," he said.

The annual race is also a chance for Meliones and his father to switch roles. After the race, "I'm the father and he's the son," the younger Meliones noted. During Keith's Little League days his dad was chanting in the stands. "Now, I'm the one watching him."

Not everyone had a friend or relative running in yesterday's race. Most people said they watched simply because it's a tradition.

A cop, 17 runners treated at race

Hospital treats 2nd highest number

NEWTON — Hospital officials reported Monday night that a police officer was injured in motorcycle accident and 17 runners suffered from exhaustion and heat following Monday's Boston Marathon.

Police however said last night that no vehicular or pedestrian accidents occurred during the race which brought half a million spectators to Newton.

A Newton police officer, whose name was not released, was injured during the event after he fell off his motorcycle, officials said. According to Newton-Wellesley Hospital spokesperson Michael Varadian, the officer was treated for bruises and later released.

"Seventeen runners were treated for heat and exhaustion," said Varadian. "Two were more serious than the others and are being evaluated for potential admission," he said. The names of the runners were not released. However Varadian said that a 19-year-old man who was having chest pains and a 23-year-old man were being considered for admission Monday.

Varadian said the marathon resulted in the second highest number of injuries ever reported to the hospital. Two years ago during slightly warmer weather, 35 injuries were reported, he said.

"We were prepared for more (injuries)," Varadian said. "We put up a Phase I Disaster Plan," he said, noting that the hospital expected at least 20 injuries.

"We stocked up on I.V.'s and cool blankets, planned for extra staff and set up a recovery room in the outpatient unit," said Varadian. Before the race, hospital staff also gave lectures on heat exhaustion and basic first aid refresher courses for police, fire, Red Cross and ambulance crew, according to Varadian. During the race, rescue crews and hospital staff communicated via radio communication.

Newton supplied 50 police officers and 35 auxiliary police officers over its regular day crew. Boston supplied 60 Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) police officers to guard the Commonwealth Avenue route. Also lining the streets were 12 Massachusetts State Troupers, 70 National Guardsmen, 10 Boston College police officers, four Newton police motocycles and 14 MDC police motorcycles.

Marathon also had 'clean-up batters'

CHESTNUT HILL — As Boston Marathon runners raced for the laurel wreath, about 50 college students were up ahead of them running for the 'bottle.'

"It's a great way to reach a lot of people," said Sarah Pike, a Boston College student. When the marathon starting gun sounded in Hopkington, area students began their "Boston Bottle-a-thon." The race was a contest to pick up all the bottles and cans along the marathon route before the first runner crossed the finish line.

Starting in front of Boston College's Bapst Library, students holding bottle bill trash bags and dressed in 'Bottle Bill' T-shirts hit the streets grabbing reuseable containers.

"We'll make a big dent in the litter cleanup," said Pike, who expected that the group would pick up 5000 bottles and cans. "Mayor Mann was real supportive of us. He said it would generally cost about $1500 to cleanup (Newton) the next day," she said.

Sponsored by MASSPIRG, a public interest research group, the event was held to promote the Bottle Bill, which passed in Massachusetts but is still being challenged by the bottle industry. "The industry spends millions on advertising (against the Bottle Bill)," said Pike.

Pike said hundreds of sponsors pledged a nickle for each bottle and can gathered by the students. The money will be used to fight the bottle industry, which they anticipate will try to defeat the bill through a referendum this fall.

Pike is originally from St. Louis, Missouri, which has a returnable cans law. She lived in Maine last summer where she said, "I saw how easily the bottle bill worked there."

MASSPIRG has been working for the bill for more than nine years. Other races have been held to support the bill though this is the first time the the organization has participated in the Boston Marathon.

"We'll have a lot of fun doing this too," said Pike.

To the left of traditional Judaism

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Their flyer bills them as a religion for Jews — today...and tomorrow.

What the small congregation of Kahal B'raira — a Community of Choice — has done is separate the secular and religious aspects of the Judaic culture, opening up an avenue for those Jews who have spurned the religion.

The Kahal B'raira alternative is to the far left of reform Judaism — a liberal Judaic ideology which many traditionalists and older Jews have yet to accept. The same traditionalists, the orthodox and conservative Jews, would probably call the followers of Kahal B'raira, heretics.

On Monday night at the First Unitarian Church in West Newton, about 25 members of the congregation gathered for a short, yet moving Holocaust service to commemorate the six million Jews who perished at the hands of the Nazis.

The service was picketed by the Supreme Rabbinic Court of America Inc., whose members have refused to recognize the group and called the "idea of having a Holocaust service in a church ludicrous."

Out of a void, Kahal B'raira, the local chapter of a national Humanistic Judaism movement, has created an alternative to conventional Judaism. Turned off by religion, the congregation of Kahal B'raira has spurned God and prayer while tightening its hold on the Judaic culture.

The alternative, which the group has fostered in eastern Massachusetts for seven years, is less structured than conventional Judaism and does not mold its services around the Talmud. Instead, members of the Kahal B'raira congregation write the services, a methodology which the group believes strenghtens their ties with the Judaic culture.

"Sometimes you're re-inventing the wheel," noted Laurence Stybel, 34, president of Kahal B'raira and a Newton resident. "On the other hand, our services are highly personal and there isn't a feeling of 'here is something off a shelf.'"

The group, which does not have a temple, holds its services either at the West Newton church or at members' homes. According to Stybel, the humanistic group has 109 local members and 12 chapters nationally.

"A lot of people have a strong identity with the heritage, the culture, and the holiday aspect, not with God or prayer," said Ken Davis, a past president of the group. "It is a way for people to express their Jewish identity."

The central tenet of the Newton-based congregation is that people act independently of God or a supernatural power. It is people who control their own destiny, not a supreme being.

Rabbi Jeff Silberstein, who presided over the ceremony noted: "We each have the freedom and the responsibility to choose good over evil. Sure there is evil in each of us, but we choose to control it."

"If we choose to act, we can make a difference in the world," he added, making note of the national anti-nuclear movement which has grown in the wake of President Ronald Reagan's commitment to a defense build-up.

The group also spurns prayer and faith and the enslavement to what it considers obsolete religious customs and ancient beliefs.

Silberstein, the son of two holocaust survivors, said that instead of

Copter, no Marcos

CHESTNUT HILL - It could have been Imelda Marcos who arrived in a helicopter at the Chestnut Hill Mall Sunday but it wasn't.

Although Marcos, wife of Phillipine President Ferdinand Marcos, had, according to Newton Police, flown in for the opening of a new Phillipine goods promotion at Bloomingdales, she was no where to be found.

Mrs. Marcos had recently shown up as the guest for similar openings in New York and Washington, D.C. Bloomingdale stores but crowds for her receptions in those cities were reportedly marked with critics of her husband's human rights policies.

So on Sunday, with Newton Police in attendance for the helicopter landing, officials of Bloomingdales' main office stepped off the chopper to herald the opening of the new Phillipine promotion at the prestigious store.

One Newton police officer had even indicated Tuesday morning the phantom Mrs. Marcos landed in Chestnut Hill in a jet but that report was later corrected to show it was a helicopter which had landed in the store parking lot.

The Phillipine promotion is reportedly one in a series of gala events staged by the department store chain, featuring goods from a variety of countries such as China and Ireland.

Holocaust: The next generation copes

Impossible to stretch
your mind around it.
Like poison,
it must be taken in small doses.

— From poem by Enid Dame, "Thinking about the Holocaust" from the book, "Living After the Holocaust — Children of Survivors."

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Growing up with Jewish parents who both miraculously survived Nazi concentration camps was not "traumatic" for Edie Wieder, maybe because her parents' experiences — and the nightmare of the Holocaust — were not discussed.

And although "practically everybody on both sides of her family" was killed by the Nazis, her parents were "models" of "resiliency" and have lived what she described as "normal" lives since that time.

But, what Wieder wanted to relate Wednesday to Newton South High students at a talk sponsored by the school's Enrichment Program series on the Holocaust this week was her "need" to break the long silence in her family on this subject when she was approaching age 30 and to then "make the leap between what I care about" and action.

The Holocaust, she says, "will never stop being a Jewish issue. The trick is how do you make it a learning experience for the nation."

Five years ago she joined the Boston organization, One Generation After, which is today composed of Holocaust survivors "and interested others." There Wieder met children of other survivors of the Holocaust.

Stimulated by the group's discussions, Wieder went home to her mother one weekend with a tape recorder and the intention of shattering the silence by interviewing her mother.

"I don't think I ever realized until that moment how important it was for her to get that story out," Wieder said.

One eight-minute segment of the three-hour "Walter Cronkite style" interview which she played for a group of about 25 South students records, hopefully for her own children someday, her mother's ambivalent feelings about why she survived. At the start of the interview, her mother says she had wanted to die, but later in the tape she said she had wanted to live.

When Wieder asked her mother, who is still alive, if she had felt guilt as a survivor, her mother said, "I wouldn't call it guilt. I would call it we felt we had nothing to live for."

Wieder grew up in a home where her parents, Polish Jews, spoke Yiddish, but did not raise their children in the Jewish religion. Her awareness of their experience was very limited. She did know that, unlike most of her friends in her New Jersey home town, she had no grandparents, no cousins, and very few relatives at all.

She told the students that she had only heard her parents relate two experiences during her childhood. Her mother had talked about the time she was hit over the head by a Nazi for stealing a potato and her father had told how he had been wiley enough to escape from a line of prisoners headed for extermination.

When asked by a student if she carried hatred of Germans, Wieder said she does not feel hatred toward Germans, only "hatred of that bureaucratic mind."

"The people who say 'No, I can't do that because it's not the policy,'" she said. "The people who can't think beyond the rules and the legislation and won't take chances."

Wieder's parents were married in May 1939, just prior to the start of World War II with the German invasion of Poland in September.

Wieder says her father was a master tailor and this skill allowed her parents to escape deportation to the camps for a longer period of time. After later spending time in two labor camps, her parents were among prisoners forced to walk 48 miles in the snow to the notorious Auschwitz camp.

Her father spent an entire year after the war searching for her mother and going from D.P. camp (displaced person camp) to D.P. camp. When he went back to their Polish city, even though the war was over, Wieder says a pogrom was taking place.

"The odds against my sitting here talking to you now are staggering," Wieder said. "I really consider my own life a kind of miracle."

After teaching speech for several years, Wieder is the newly-appointed director of Boston's Jewish Young Adult Center in Brookline. She remains an active member of One Generation After which located at 17 Commonwealth Ave., Boston.

Rabbi recalls 'the greatest suffering'

OAK HILL — The saddest part of the Holocaust for Rabbi Isaiah Wohlgemuth is that even his former non-Jewish friends turned their backs on him .

"There was not much courage on the part of the German people," said the rabbi. "This was the greatest suffering. You were nothing-just a bit of air," said Rabbi Wohlgemuth.

Rabbi Wohlgemuth last week addressed students at Newton South High School as part of the Enrichment Program's commemoration of the Holocaust 40 years ago in Nazi-occupied Germany. He told South students he spent only a month inside a Nazi concentration camp, but for several years he experienced Nazi's terrorizing of the Jewish community.

"Suddenly, in 1933, nobody knew me anymore. Anyone who knew me turned their backs. We were ghosts," said Rabbi Wohlgemuth.

"You were once free. Then suddenly, you weren't tolerated," said Rabbi Wohlgemuth of Jewish life under Adolf Hitler's regime. In public, Jews were physically and verbally abused, the rabbi told students. Their businesses were vandalized or forced to close because of Nazi boycotts. He remembered that a girl quit school because her father's business was failing. "They would come to you and say they want your business," said Rabbi Wohlgemuth, noting that the Jews didn't have a choice.

Jews were forbidden to teach school. Jewish children remained in public schools. They were tormented though by other children so the Jewish community started their own schools. "It was their greatest resistance," he said.

Rabbi Wohlgemuth was born and raised in the small German town of Kitzingen, a community in which about 600 Jews lived. More than half were killed by the Germans. Rabbi Wohlgemuth's father and brother, with whom he lived before he was imprisoned in Dachau, were also killed in Nazi death camps.

Dachau was one of the more infamous of 50 concentration camps established by the end of 1933. For several years, thousands of Jews were tortured, blackmailed and sometimes sadistically murdered in the camps. The concentration camps preluded Auschwitz and other extermination camps, where from 1941-45, 6 million Jews and 5 million non-Jews were murdered.

Rabbi Wohlgemuth was taken to Dachau on Nov. 10, 1938. It was the morning after "Kristallnacht" (The Night of Chrystal), when a Jew in Paris, unable to find his German parents, shot and killed a German embassy official, setting off in Germany more Nazi terrorizing, arrests and imprisonments of Jews.

Rabbi Wohlgemuth awoke the next morning, gazed out the window and saw the town in flames. "It was the infamous night of flames," remembered the rabbi. Soon Gestapo agents were pounding on his door. "Come along," they ordered the rabbi, who was immediately transferred to Dachau.

For Rabbi Wohlgemuth and others at the camp, exposing their bodies in public was humiliating. "I had to walk around naked all the time. We had to perform all our normal bodily functions in public," said the rabbi.

Fortunately the rabbi was told he could leave the camp provided he leave Germany within a month, which he did. "My immediate family, my friends and many from my community didn't get out," said Rabbi Wohlgemuth.

He rejoiced in 1945; now he speaks out

'It never dawned on me for one second of the mass destruction at Nagasaki or Hiroshima' Sydney Peck recalls. But now he favors complete elimination of atomic weapons.

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTONVILLE — Sydney Peck was one of thousands of active servicemen who cheered when the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima in 1945.

"I was as happy as I could be. I could go home," said Peck. He was on board a destroyer in the Pacific Ocean when news arrived that the Japanese had surrendered, ending World War II. Peck couldn't have been happier.

But today, Peck is whistling a different tune. "It never dawned on me for one second of the mass destruction at Nagasaki or Hiroshima," he said. Peck later visited the cities devestated by the bombs. He saw and spoke with the "hibashica," survivors of the bomb, who still live with its physical and emotional trauma.

"I'm so deeply opposed to the use of nuclear weapons," Peck says now, that he "favors their abolishment throughout the world."

Peck spoke Wednesday to students at Newton North High School during a one-day nuclear education program. A sociology professor at Clark University, Peck is a long-time peace activist who mobilized efforts against the war in Vietnam and for international nuclear disarmament. Peck is also director of the International Liaison Office of the International Peace Bureau.

He urged students to "recognize the dangerous threat that faces us all.

"We all share the responcibility for preserving life," Peck said.

Peck said the bombs dropped during World War II were 15 kiloton bombs which are equivalent to 15,00 tons of TNT. "It killed 80,000 people in Nagasaki," said Peck. "Now it's megatons," he added. "Picture a freight train 300 miles long, loaded with TNT," said Peck, noting that it's equivalent to one megaton of nuclear weaponry. Some bombs now contain 20 million tons of TNT Peck said.

"There's no escaping the bomb," Peck said. The U.S. and Soviet Union each have 15,000 strategic nuclear weapons which could destroy the world 12 times, Peck told students.

It's possible to cease the nuclear build up Peck said. "I think there's a way to do it. The U.N. (United Nations) plays a part in that process," he said. In 1967, Peck helped mobilize a Vietnam demonstration at the U.N. Some people thought it couldn't be done. Yet 400,000 protesters appeared said Peck. "This is how public policy is changed," he said.

"This is an international movement," he said, noting demonstrations by people throughout Europe. "World public opinion is important because it means we are not alone," Peck added.

"I have a profound belief and confidence," said Peck, "If people know the facts about the arms race, they'll act."

Group is investigating method of revaluation

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — "Save Our Homes Two," a city organization attempting to force assessors to reject the revaluation conducted by Finnegan Associates of Acton, is conducting an investigation into revaluation.

The organization has set up two sub-committees to investigate the computer methodology used to determine new assessments and to explore possible legal retaliation to block the revaluation.

Officials from the group, a revival of an organization formed to stop a revaluation attempt in 1975, met for the second time Thursday night, laying the groundwork for a stepped up membership, fundraising and petition drive.

Many aldermen are contending that the city must implement the revaluation with the only alternative an $11 million cut in this year's municipal budget. Revaluation, which is required under a court decision and state law, was accelerated in Newton to raise the city's tax levy, Finnegan Associates, which began the revaluation last May, has come under sharp criticism from taxpayers claiming discrepancies and errors.

John Rogers, president of Save Our Homes Two, said the group has already telephoned 400 homeowners to find out how they feel about the revaluation. He noted that many taxpayers have still not received the five comparable sales used to determine the assessment of their home.

Rogers said about 1,000 taxpayers belong to the organization which has raised $300 to battle revalution. "The primary purpose of the organization is to insist on and get a fair revaluation," he said.

He said the group is gaining steam in it's battle against the revaluation and he is hoping fund raising and membership will increase dramatically within the next several weeks.

He said the group, which has registered as a political committee, is attempting to spread the message that the taxpayers can do something to assure a fair and equitable revaluation. He argued there is a "widespread feeling that an injustice" has been committed.

"I think the energy is there," he said. "I think something will be done."

2,500-3,000 will get a break

NEWTON — A project manager for the firm conducting revaluation estimated last week approximately 2,500 to 3,000 residential property values will be decreased as a result of assessments being challenged by homeowners.

Finnegan Associates of Acton, the firm conducting revalution, began a review of the estimated 10,000 assessments challenged by homeowners on March 29.

Thomas Polzella, manager of the Newton revaluation project, said the company hopes to send out notices of the results of informal appeal reviews on Friday.

Polzella said an estimated 150 to 200 residential assessments will be increased as a result of the field review. Polzella said the firm has concentrated on eliminating the "obvious" errors.

Polzella said the firm reviewed an estimated 800 homes, but entered less than 100. He stressed that only major data errors in the home would result in a significant decrease in assessments and extensive interior review is unnecessary.

The state Department of Revenue began a review of commercial values Wednesday. Chief Assessor Robert Palmer said Wednesday that he expects certification of commercial values by the end of the week. He said the target mailing date for residential property tax bills reflecting the revaluation is May 1.

The accelerated revaluation, which was implemented in order to avoid an $11 million budget cut under Proposition 2½, has come under attack from thousands of taxpayers.

Many taxpayers have charged that the revaluation is plagued with inconsistencies, discrepancies and errors. "Save our Homes," a revival of a group organized to combat revaluation in 1975, has implemented an extensive campaign to prevent the revaluation from being implemented.

Under the city timetable submitted to the state Department of Revenue, the entire revaluation project was slated for completion by Jan. 1. The city must still receive certification of commercial values and final certification from the state agency before tax bills can be mailed to homeowners.

State won't press charges in science fair project cases

NEWTON — Officials from the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA) will not press criminal charges against Newton high school administrators, despite previously questioning the legality of two science fair projects involving animals.

MSCPA officials had speculated the science experiments conducted by two students involving animals were illegal. However, an MSCPA spokesman said last week the organization decided not to press charges after a review of the two experiments conducted by Newton North student Marc Weinfeld and Newton South student Matthew Cohen. MSPCA officials and about 100 science teachers met last week to review the projects involving mice and toads.

William Curran, director of law enforcement for the MSCPA, said the group has decided not to proceed legally against the experiments.

As a result the two students who conducted experiments with mice and toads may be allowed to participate in the state science fair at the Massachusett Institute of Technology on April 30 and May 1. Top prize is a $1,000 scholarship.

An MIT panel must review the two science projects before accepting them as part of the science fair.

Newton North High School Science department head Stuart Rist has argued that state laws regarding the experiments with animals are unfair.

Weinfeld's project, which won first place in the Newton science fair on March 22, investigated whether high frequency sounds emited by male mice were integral to the mammals' mating process.

Rist agreed that Weinfeld temporarily devocalized mice, but he stressed that he did so with the supervision of university personnel and under prescribed conditions.

Cohen's project studied pacemakers and how they affected the heartbeat of the toad. Rist said that the toad hearts were obtained from a legally licensed laboratory.

Furthermore, he noted that Cohen didn't dissect the toads. "He just showed the effects of pacemakers on the hearts," he said.

A state law prohibits animal experiments in public school which include "anesthetizing,electric shock or where normal health of (the) animal is interfered with." The law also prohibits students from exhibiting animals which have undergone experiments, except in a classroom situation.

Curran said Weinfeld and Cohen will not be allowed to display the mice or toads involved in the experiments under state law. Both students will be allowed to present their data but not be allowed to show the animals.

Michel Sasson, music director and conductor of the NSO, will finish his 17th season May 2.

Michel Sasson marks finale as conductor of symphony

NEWTON - Michel Sasson, in his last season as music director and conductor of the Newton Symphony Orchestra, returns to Newton on Sunday, May 2 to lead the NSO he founded and has conducted for the past 17 years.

In the final concert of the symphony's 1981-82 subscription series, Maestro Sasson will conduct Gary Graffman, world-renowned pianist, in the Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, the Prokofiev Symphony No. 5 and Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun."

Sasson, in the midst of a national tour with the Boston Ballet and Rudolph Nureyev, began his conducting career with the founding of the Newton Symphony in 1965.

From that point on he has built an ever-expanding career as a conductor. In 1969 he became the conductor of the Brockton Symphony Orchestra, a position he will hold through this season. In 1971 Sasson was named the conductor of the Boston Ballet, succeeding Arthur Fiedler. He has remained as conductor of the Boston Ballet during its national tours this year.

In addition, Sasson was for three years the conductor of the Esplanade Mozart Orchestra in the Bach Festival at the MDC Hatch Memorial Shell in Boston, and he has served as principal guest conductor of the American Bellet Theatre in New York.

During the 1978 season Sasson was a guest conductor of the Boston Pops.

The followinq year he made a successful tour with the Boston Ballet in Venice and Genoa, Italy. He was then invited to conduct the Genoa Symphony and the La Scala (Milan) Orchestra in a series of concerts during the summer of 1980.

He was also asked to open the symphony and opera season in those cities in the fall. The success of these concerts led to his appointment, in 1981, as principal guest conductor of the La Scala Orchestra, one of the most prestigious conducting posts in Europe. In this season, he has conducted a revival of Verdi's "Falstaff," several symphonic concerts, and more than 40 performances of ballet.

Sasson has made several recordings on the Vanguard label, conductinq four ballets by Agnes DeMille, with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in London. He has recently signed a contract with Columbia Recording Studios to record all the ballet literature over the next six years with the La Scala Orchestra.

In recongition of the enormous contribution Michel Sasson has made to the Newton Symphony, the board of directors has voted to name the concertmaster's chair in his honor. He will assume the position of artistic advisor to the NSO after this season.

For further information and ticket reservations for the Newton Symphony Orchestra concert on Sunday, May 2 at Brown Junior High, call 965-2555.

They are laughing in the public's face

The Newton School Committee deadlocked 4-4 voting for a new superintendent of schools last week.

It was a tough position to be in, since there are two qualified candidates and no clear majority favoring either one. The problem was compounded when word came in during the meeting that one of the candidates had just won approval for the superintendency of the Lexington schools.

So rather than abide by the state's Open Meeting Law to hold a closed "executive session" to iron out differences, the School Committee simply split into two groups, four members each, to meet behind closed doors.

The argument in doing this was that since neither group of four constituted a quorum, the committee did not even fall under the Open Meeting Law.

Some at the meeting said afterward anything which could be said between School Committee members had already been said in public during the lengthy search and interview process.

The only problem is that the two groups met for four hours behind closed doors, raising questions about what they possibly could have discussed that had not already been hashed out in public.

The two tidy little discussion groups may not have been strictly illegal under the law but calling private meetings - without a vote, without a reason being stated for the record - was a calculated circumvention of the spirit and intent of the seven-year-old Open Meeting Law.

Under the law the committee could vote to go into executive session to discuss such things as "the reputation and character" of the two finalists. In doing that, a motion would have to be taken from the committee, a roll call vote recorded and an indication made whether or not the committee would meet again in open session.

It would have been as simple as that. Instead, the committee chose, by some hazy consensus, to split into two groups, with no quorum in either, to meet in private.

Obviously there are serious differences of opinion among School Committee members about the two finalists. But isn't it time the committee began conducting this most important public business before the public? The public has a right to know the concerns committee members may have about the candidates, the process of selection and even how committee members interact when such differences of opinion exist. To bend the rules and close the doors on the public is shaky at best and bordering on irresponsible.

It is, in fact, laughing in the public's face.

Graphically speaking

Send 'em dead flowers or lemons

Some honors from Hizzoner

Leave it to Mayor Ted Mann to pull out the smooth touch at the right time.

When some women from Pioneer Women Na'amat, the Women's Labor Zionist Organization of America, were in the mayor's office last week to receive a proclamation Mayor Mann noticed little 6 1/2 year old Sandra Wong, holding onto her mother, Iva's, hand.

Iva is the daughter of Ginger Lesky of the Pioneer Women and was visiting from Merdian, N.Y. with her daughter.

So Mayor Mann gestured to little Sandra and told her to look in the bottom lefthand drawer of his desk.

Lo and behold. Sandra pulled open the drawer and her face beamed. For inside were lollipops and the mayor told her she could take several.

Then, the finishing touch, Mayor Mann stuck a bright orange "Mayor Ted Mann" sticker on Sandra's hand and our guess is that with such personal treatment, she'll never take it off.

When a reference was made to President Ronald Reagan's famous jelly beans in the Oval Office, Mayor Mann quipped, "I was doing this long before he was even around."

Just wait until the president hears about this...

You know what we mean

We really weren't out to confuse you in last week's Graphically speaking.

In a brief about the recent Middlesex County Citizen's Caucus we noted that a press release was issued proclaiming the gathering "A small success."

We were asked to correct the release to read "A smash success", but that's not the way it read in these columns. We stand corrected. We were not smashed at the time...

Oh, what price of prestige?

One of our regular office visitors was in last week chatting about the high cost of buying a home in the Garden City.

He observed that as you thumb through the Sunday papers looking at real estate ads you find there are really three prices people place on their homes.

The first one is the price at which they advertise the home. The second is the price they'll actually sell it for. The third is the price at which they want it assessed.

Guess which is lowest.

And what price productivity?

All's not bad in the economy.

The folks at Computer Design and Applications, Inc. on Elliot Street, recently rewarded their employees with a bonus of one day's pay and a day off for meeting their second quarter goals.

In praising his employees for their labors President Bob Caspe told them, "Our shipping goals were met and it was your conscientious efforts that made this happen."

Company employees will be able to enjoy June 1 off, courtesy of the management, for a job well done.

A round on the house for everyone!

Sticker mania hits Newton

In the next few weeks a new identification sticker will be adorning the doors and windows of many local businesses.

According to Director of Human Services Howard Lipton, an orange and black decal will be issued to merchants who agree to participate in the Senior Citizen Discount Program.

Working in cooperation with the Department of Human Services and Council on Aging, 20 dedicated volunteers have been busy visiting businesses in Newton to sign them up for the discount program.

So far, Lipton said, there are at least 300 participants. Any merchant who has not been contacted should call Alvin Koppel at 552-7170.

Hands across the border

Mayor Ted Mann recently signed a proclamation declaring this week as "Canada-United States Good Will Week."

And that is the theme of the annual Newton Kiwanis Club visit to Canada.

So the mayor has asked Alderman Robert Tennant to lead the delegation across the border as his representative to deliver, in person, the mayor's signed proclamation to Jean Drapeau, mayor of Montreal.

Have to hand it to you fellows, it's a nice gesture.

Just remembering his roots

Dr. Edward A. Nalebuff of Newton Centre is not one to forget from whence he came.

Dr. Nalebuff recently gave $10,000 for the establishment of a scholarship fund to his alma mater, Tufts University.

Dr. Nalebuff, who graduated magna cum laude from Tufts with a bachelor's degree in 1949 and a doctor of medicine degree in '53, is a lecturer of orthopedic surgery at Tufts University School of Medicine.

NOW is the time for Lois Pines

Lois Pines of Newton, a candidate for Tommy O'Neill's job, has been endorsed by the Massachusetts chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) in her bid for the lieutenant governorship.

Pines will address that group on May 1 and 2 at the Governor Carver House in Plymouth.

According to Newton resident Priscilla Leith, a member of the NOW annual meeting committee, some 150 NOW members are expected to attend the affair.

In its endorsement of Pines for the second seat on Beacon Hill, NOW praised her as "a leading advocate of issues that concern women" and cited her experience in both state and federal governments.

Besides leading the fight which led to the passage of the state Equal Rights Amendment, as a state representative, Pines successfully sponsored legislation which prohibits discrimination based on sex or marital status in furnishing credit or services. The legislation also requires 10% of state jobs be allocated for part-time workers and it provides income tax deductions for child care costs.

Camp trashed, help is sought

An emergency fund has been set up to raise money to repair extensive vandalism last weekend at the Massachusetts Cerebral Palsy of Greater Boston's Plum Island summer camp.

Cerebral Palsy of Greater Boston is based at 515 Centre Street where it operates workshops for people with cerebral palsy.

Lee Miller, a spokesman for CP said doors and windows were smashed and National Park rangers at Plum Island estimated damage at an incredible $6,000.

The camp is located inside the Parker River National Wildlife Refuge and it serves some 200 handicapped youngsters every summer.

Donations can be sent to Camp Seahaven Emergency Rehabilitation Fund, c/o the Massachusetts Cerebral Palsy of Greater Boston, 515 Centre St., Newton.

We leave you with dead flowers

We leave you with one very strange story.

In the mail this week we received word of a new service, serving the metro Boston area, of course.

We quote: "Announcing the opening of the Boston metropolitan area's first Dead Flower Delivery Service."

Figured you wouldn't believe us without a quote.

Seems this service is geared toward pleasing those customers who have grown tired of telegrams, candy, flowers and balloons.

The release said the service, called "The Bitter Bouquet," will also deliver things other than bunches of dead flowers.

Included among the other "amenities" are a basket of lemons, a bouquet of deflated balloons, "and a box of only the finest half-eaten or smashed boxed chocolates."

"We are The Bitter Bouquet believe our strange and humorous service is a truly strange and humorous service."

And, as the press release notes, it is "the perfect arrangement for any estrangement."

We kid you not.

KAPUT: A solution to traffic tie-up

By Mark White

For weeks many of you have told me how much you enjoyed this column and I am extremely pleased with your reaction.

I hope that these columns have been entertaining and that I've given you a few lauqhs. But now I am asking for your help. I have begun a crusade to solve a serious problem in our city - The Newton Corner Traffic Pattern!

My group is called "Kill Aimless Patterns Uniting Traffic," or KAPUT for short.

Why the sudden attention? Because as I am writing this column I am sitting in pain in a neck brace, courtesy of those state geniuses who designed the maze they call Newton Corner.

For years I have wondered what idiot designed that place. And finally I figured it out. They must be members of a group for population control in Newton. I am convinced that Newton Corner is a systematic attempt to kill a few of us off each day.

Think about it for a minute. Why else would anyone design a left turn coming off the bridge where everyone disobeys the signal? Have you ever seen anybody obey that left turn arrow or do they take the left as soon as the arrow for the Pike comes on?

Who else, but the Massachusetts DPW could design a pattern where, after passing Howard Johnson's and intending to go up Centre Street, you have to merge with oncoming traffic, pull over to the right, avoid cars coming off the eastbound exit ramp from the Pike and line up in the right lane, all in a time span of 10 seconds. Why else would anyone put an island in front of the library where most of the drivers refuse to pull into traffic and it's just a matter of time before you get whacked from behind by an anxious driver?

And it's not just the drivers who are in jeopardy. I defy anyone to cross Washington Street in front of the Paramount Theatre and not end up like a tortilla.

I grew up in Newton Corner. I remember a sensible traffic pattern and I am dedicating my efforts to restoring sanity to Newton Corner.

But we also have to concentrate on eliminating all the other traffic hazards in this city. The same intellectual giant who designed Newton Corner must also have designed West Newton.

I have written to ABC Wide World of Sports with a suggestion for a new event. It's called "Take a left turn from Waltham Street onto Washington Street in the shortest period of time without getting killed" contest.

I defy anyone to make that turn and live to tell about it.

And let us not forget the intersection of Oak Street and Needham Street, just beyond Marshall's.

While waiting to make a left turn onto Needham Street I had enough time to eat a sandwich, prepare a legal brief and write my autobiography.

But, back to Newton Corner, I have a few suggestions.

Snow only added to the insanity they call Newton Corner but with some luck, a new video game - 'Insanity' - may make the area a real money-maker. Photo by Jon Chase

First, build a tunnel which carries through traffic from Centre Street on to the Mass. Pike.

Then supply pogo sticks to all pedestrians who attempt to cross Washington Street.

Then a large pedestrian catapult could be installed in front of the library and aimed toward Watertown.

And, lastly, President Regan Reagan must declare Newton Corner a federal disaster area.

Now I admit that this is just a start but we must perservere and get the state to change this place.

Since financing is a problem I'am presently negotiating with ATARI for a new video game based on Newton Corner called "Suicide."

And if that falls through I am attempting to sell to a television station the rights to the story of how a man drove in Newton Corner every day for 10 years and never had an accident.

What show will it be? What else - That's Incredible.

(Mark White, presently recuperating at home, is a practicing attorney and former member of the Newton Board of Aldermen)

Deadlock on super vote; 2 closed door meetings

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee was unable to break its deadlocked 4-4 vote over the two finalists for superintendent Thursday night despite over six hours of negotiations, including four hours behind closed doors.

In a possible violation of the Open Meeting Law, the committee broke into two groups of four around 9 p.m. to attempt to reach a compromise. When they reconvened at 1 a.m., no one from either side had budged and Chairperson Nancy Mann advised the committee to pursue contract issues and "time schedules" with the two candidates.

Both finalists – Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., and Dr. John Strand – have other offers coming in and even as the committee was meeting behind closed doors, the news came in that the Lexington School Committee had just voted 3-2 to appoint Clark as superintendent.

Charges of racial discrimination erupted recently when Lexington passed over Clark, their second choice, who is black, after their first choice was dropped. Lexington resurrected a third candidate. That third Lexington candidate was Newton Centre resident Geoffrey Pierson, now Lexington's acting assistant superintendent.

Mann appointed a three-member subcommittee of herself, James Mnookin and Robert Ricles to broach contract issues with the two finalists and report back to the committee on Monday, April 26.

Chairperson Mann said contract negotiations with the two candidates may produce something that may change some committee member's mind.

"We have to try to find a way out of it," she said.

When asked about the influence of Clark's approval in Lexington on the Newton School Committee's decision, Mann said, "I mean if we plan to let Lexington make our decision for us, we knew that tonight at 9 p.m. (about the vote for Clark).

Susan Silbey remained committed to supporting Clark. "I guess we believe that given an offer, he'd come here," she said.

As for the result of the lengthy talks Thursday night, Silbey said, "No one has suggested they're going to change their mind."

Thursday night had been set as a firm deadline to select a superintendent. The committee knew of their "hung" vote after reinterviews with the two finalists on Monday but had hoped for compromises by Thursday's meeting.

When Mayor Theodore Mann, an ex-officio member, brought to the floor a motion calling for members to name their choice, the vote was 4-4 with School Committee members from Wards 1-4 supporting Clark, assistant superintendent of instruction in Shaker Heights, Ohio, and members from Wards 5-8 voting for Strand, superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y., schools.

Mayor Mann asked the committee if they wanted to change their decision that six votes would be needed to appoint a new superintendent to five votes, which would in effect leave the deicison to the mayor.

Committee members remained unanimously opposed to lessening the requirement.

Mayor Mann also criticized "insinuations" made "that there is any geographic dissension among the members of this committee."

"If anybody would check the maps," the mayor said, people would find that some committee members' wards extended into both the north and south side of the city. "I say that that is not the kind of issue that should divide this city."

Mann was referring to the exact split of the committee into wards traditionally recognized as north and south sides of the city.

Having called an early 6:15 p.m. meeting, the committee had originally planned to vote in time for a PTA meeting to be held in the school before 8 p.m. But, prior to the School Committee meeting, the PTA cancelled their meeting.

'Extremely angry' with use of 'spurious' stats

To the editor;

As someone who has tried to be reasonable and moderate on revaluation despite the outrageous errors in the original Finnegan reassessments, I am extremely angry at the repeated use by Mr. Robert Finnegan of spurious statistics to defend his company's work.

He states that only a miniscule fraction of those who sought hearings claimed more than a 10% error in their values were derived. In the narrowest technical sense, these statements may be true, but they ignore the painful realities of the process.

The standards of proof that he cites are beyond the knowledge or capacities of most homeowners at this stage. Mr. Finnegan's policy on what "proof" would be accepted at the hearings was unclear at best, Aldermen, Assessors, and his staff seemed to give different answers at different times on this subject. One can only hope that Mr. Finnegan's recent public statement that all comments will be given full consideration in reviews of values is still operative.

Mr. Finnegan seems to imply that several thousand people went to the inconvenience and expense of the hearing process just out of idle curiosity. The throng of angry people at Roberts Center would dispute his implication. The mild questions about how the value was obtained were in many cases angry and astonished demands for facts that could possibly justify ludicrously high values.

These requests for information probably turned up proof of errors in the description of homes, invalid comparable sales, or comparable sales that didn't prove the assigned value until they had been adjusted by an astronomical inflation factor that bore very little similarity to the reality of the housing market in Newton.

Mr. Finnegan should make no further public statements except in response to questions from public officials and the press. He should concentrate on fixing the errors in his first values. And he should not hide behind the certification of the Department of Revenue.

It has become painfully apparent that the department may have the legal power to certify values but the standards it uses have precious little to do with the true values of several thousand people's homes.

Closed doors raise questions

NEWTON — In an apparent violation of the state's Open Meeting Law, the School Committee held four-hour "twin" closed-door sessions Thursday night to try to resolve a deadlocked vote on the choice for superintendent.

When questioned, Chairperson Nancy Mann said the two simultaneously held sessions of four members each were legal because it takes five members of the School Committee to constitute a quorum. Mann justified excluding the public because the committee was trying "to break the impasse" over the selection of either Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., or Dr. John Strand.

"We didn't violate any law," committee member Susan Silbey said. "We only stayed in groups of four."

"As long as we stay four in a room we're not breaking any laws," member Leonard Gentile said.

Gentile said he justified taking the matter behind closed doors "because we're at an impasse. And, I mean, there has been so much public discussion everyone knows where we stand anyway."

Former Newton Teacher's Association president Warren Priest said the two sessions "might be a clever manipulation of the law" but "might be in the long run the only way a final resolution is going to come about."

"I think this is an attempt within the law to permit some kind of hard dialogue," he said.

THE WORLD of Travel
by Hank Fleming
LANAI ISLAND - HAWAII
Lanai is known as Hawaii's "pineapple island." Its early native inhabitants were exiled subjects banished by the Hawaiian royalty to the island which was believed to be inhabited by evil spirits. It was not until a major pineapple company doled out $1.1 million for Lanai did its fortune turn. Erosion was halted and roads and model plantation towns were built. Today, this relatively untrampled paradise, eight miles from Maui, is a magnificent escape for the traveler. Solitude and quiet are provided away from the beaten Hawaiian path. This sleepy isle is a must see for the "Barefoot" traveler.
As professional travel agents, our main purpose is to relieve the traveler of the detail and confusion that often goes into planning and execution of any trip, for business or pleasure. Murphy has 'killed' and he'll do it again

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

James Murphy has "killed" 14 characters in two books - not a bad record for a horror novelist.

The author, a Newton native, has also made his mark as an epic novelist working in the historical romance framework with a pair of novels following the loves and struggles of an Irish mill family from dlpoAmerica to Canada.

The historical romance is not exactly what you'd expect from a writer who is sure to get some attention from horror starved youths weaned on flicks like "Friday the 13th."

'I think I started because I couldn't do math' author James Murphy says. But after 12 years of publishers' rejections 'you just don't hang it up.'

Murphy's two bloody horror novels and twin-book historical romance are as different as night and day. However, the English teacher is comfortable with both genres.

"I go from horror to historical romance," says the feisty author, who lives in Falmouth, pointing to his horror novels. "In these two books, there are 14 dead."

The associate professor at Mass Maritime Academy admits that it is almost as if he was "two different people."

Murphy's newest book, "They were Dreamers," scheduled for release in August by Atheneum, is an epic-historical romance of an Irish family in North America.

His first novel, "Quonsett," is the story of a small Cape Cod tourist town terrorized by a savage murderer out for revenge. His latest psycho-terror tale, published by Dell's paperback division, is "Night Watcher" - also the story of a maniac on a killing spree in a small town.

His horror novels are filled with gory deaths - from the decapitation of a police officer to the gruesome end for two lovers, torn apart by piranhas in a swimming pool.

"They were Dreamers," however, is a sequel to his second book, "The Mill" - a story of a downtrodden "Mill" family in a fictional Massachusetts community during the 1800's.

"They were Dreamers," follows the oppressed family to Prince Edward Island where they find "maturity and affluence." The book has an ironic ending that clearly leaves the door open for another sequel.

"This is the one I'm pinning all my hopes on," says Murphy of "They were Dreamers. "The Mill" sold over 70,000 copies. He says the new book may be his finest and is hoping to break the 100,000 sales mark.

For many authors, writing is torture. Murphy, however, finds writing a pleasure. "You'd like people to think it's a killer," he says. "But I like it."

Murphy, 49, began writing seriously in high school. "I think I started because I couldn't do math," he jests. He continued in college, writing poetry and short stories. However, it was not until he was 44 that his first novel was published.

JAMES MURPHY JR.

"This is after 12 years of rejections," he says, pointing to his first book. "You just don't hang it up."

Murphy admits that he views his horror writing from a "commercial" perspective. "I'm not ashamed to admit it," says the outspoken author with six children. "I think there is some good writing there, but I'm thinking commercially."

He is an author fascinated by the pure pleasure and enjoyment of popular story-telling. Murphy says that his greatest influence as a writer has been the "movies."

"Paramount Theatre in Newton Corner - that was my university," says the 1950 graduate of Our Lady's High in Newton. "I went every Saturday and Sunday for 10 years."

Murphy says the most important elements for a successful book are "credibility" and "character." He is currently working on a ghost story titled "War Story" - the story of a soldier haunted by his war experiences.

Murphy likes to help those interested in writing. In fact, he has assisted several former professors in getting their work published.

Murphy's says he tries to give students with writing aspirations "trust, support and motivation."

"I'm just a working stiff myself and I did it," the down to earth teacher often says of his novel writing. "And I'm going to continue to do it."

Spiritually deprived in Soviet Union

60 couples celebrate Jewish marriage

NEWTON — Sixty Russian Jewish couples will formally celebrate their Jewish marriages on Lag B'Omer at Mishkan Tefila on May 11. The couples were all married in civil ceremonies in the Soviet Union but never had an opportunity to stand under a huppah (canopy), recite the proper Jewish marriage formula, and receive a ketuba (Jewish contract) before appropriate Jewish witnesses. Many of the Russian Jews have never seen a Jewish ceremony let alone participated in one.

Lag B'Omer was chosen as the most appropriate date for the ceremony because of the obvious religious and political overtones of this historical date on the Jewish calendar. Lag B'Omer, the thirty-third day after Passover, 17 days before Shavuot, celebrates a day of respite for Jews during the days of Roman persecutions in the time of Rabbi Akiba, approximately 135 or the Common Era.

Throughout Jewish History, this date is one of the few spring days appropriate or permissable for wedding receptions. Russian Jews, spiritually deprived in the Soviet Union, will now publicly embrace their Judaism as a sign of their new freedoms in the United States.

The ages of the couples span the spectrum of longevity and several husbands and wives will have parents or children celebrating their own marriages as well. In attendance as witnesses, will be several individuals whose spouses still have not been permitted to leave Russia.

The couples embrace both ends of the economic and professional spectrum and as a group are a microcosm of the latest wave of Post World War II Russian-Jewish immigration. They are all residents of the Greater Boston Jewish community. Some have host families from local synogogues and others are just beginning their quest to reestablish Jewish identity.

The wedding itself will be conducted by several Newton Jewish clergy in the sanctuary of Mishkan Tefila, accompanied by the organ and guest musicians from Boston's leading orchestra. Each couple will receive a newly-designed and lithographed Mishkan Tefila Ketuba (wedding contract) while standing under a specially designed floral huppah (canopy) that will cover the entire Mishkan Tefila bimah (stage), the largest such huppah ever constructed for an event of this religious magnitude.

Following the ceremony, the congregation will host a formal wedding ball and reception for 1000 guests. The black-tie wedding ball will feature a leading 15 piece band and orchestra, a smorgasbord buffet supper, and bar. Russian, Jewish, Israeli, and American dance music will be featured through the midnight hour.

The entire evening is being completely underwritten by 20 individuals from Mishkan Tefila and the general community. Food and drinks have been donated by several area businesses. Extensive floral arrangements and settings will be contributed as a tribute to the couples. Formal evening dresses have been given as gifts to all the brides. A booklet is being published in honor of the gala event and will also include explanations of many aspects of a Jewish wedding ceremony.

Invitations to the wedding and ball are available at Mishkan Tefila, or by calling 332-7770.

In consideration of a wedding gift to honor the couples being married, Congregation Mishkan Tefila will mail tickets upon request. All wedding gifts received will be contributed to Jewish Family and Children's Service, Action for Soviet Jewry, and the Jewish Vocational Service, all organizations that help facilitate the Russian-Jewish immigrant transition. Because of the magnitude of this formal event, attendance will be by ticket reservation and invitation only.

A large committee headed by Emily Lipof will answer all questions at the synagogue.

GOP hosts Heckler at 22nd annual fete

Sandra L. Rotberg
Correspondent

NEWTON- "Republicans are not wrong to celebrate on tax night and we have tried to reduce the tax burden," Congresswoman Margaret Heckler told more than 200 members of the GOP at the 22nd annual Lincoln Day Dinner last Thursday.

The dinner, in American Legion Post 440, was sponsored by the Newton Republican Club in cooperation with the Republican Women of Newton and the Republican City Committee to honor Congresswoman Heckler. Also appearing with Heckler as guest speaker was John S. Herrington, Assistant Secretary of the U.S. Navy and former White House aide to President Reagan.

Heckler said, "The tax burden has caused Americans to rise and revolt and with all the problems we have today, (and I won't minimize them) we have to remember that Carternomics did not work. That's how this all began."

Claiming there is an honest search for a new approach, Heckler stressed that Republicans are on the receiving end of media coverage which, she said, tends to deal with problems, rather than successes.

"In Congress," said Heckler, "We have to look to our presidency with respect and with the media focusing on America, we have to see that we were in far worse hands just one year ago."

Strongly opposing the bill for tax deductions for members of Congress, she has filed a bill to discharge the petition. The bill was initially designed to help miners suffering from black lung disease and according to Heckler, the tax deductions were added into this. "I call this act a backroom tactic," said Heckler.

Giving praise to President Reagan for making forward strides to the country, Heckler says she is proud to be a Republican in Congress. "Eight terms is not enough for Heckler," she claimed, "and I am still unbossed and still unbought."

With a quick visit from Mayor Theodore Mann, he complimented Heckler as being courageous and unafraid to stand up for the things we all believe in.

Mann quoted the famous Lincoln phrase "With malice towards none and justice for all." Mann said, "That should be the banner of the party of Lincoln to bring together a community under these lofty ideals. This should be our tribute to Lincoln."

After thanking guests and members of the Republican Committee for bringing him to Newton, Herrington said, "The Navy has exceeded it's goals for 26 months and with more high-school graduates than ever before. More Marines enlisted this year than in any other year in peace-time history."

Herrington claims taxpayers are actually saving money because so many pilots and officers stayed on by offering them an increase in salary. According to Herrington, it cost $650,000 to train a pilot and 450 million dollars was saved by people remaining in their current positions.

In 1981, $33.9 million was spent in defense. By 1982, the costs rose to $55.6 million. Herrington claimed that in 1962, President John F. Kennedy spent 44 percent of the entire national budget on defense, where Reagan is spending 29 percent.

GOP honors

Alvin Mandell (left) pictured with 22nd Annual Lincoln Day Dinner Chairman Frances Shaer, was honored last week with a Distinguished Service Award by the local Republican Party members.

Herrington said, "In the past ten years while we cut the Navy in half, the Soviet Union moved ahead. At present the Soviets possess the world's largest and most modern Navy, measured by the total number of ships they have."

Herrington reported that there are Soviet submarines that patrol off our shores within striking distance of half of our population. There are long range patrol aircraft that fly down our coasts on a regular basis and Soviet spy-ships that mingle with sport fishermen in Norfolk, Virginia and San Diego, California.

"It is our job," said Herrington, "to keep the torch of freedom burning."

Getting into program cuts, Herrington said there are always those that will require help on a permanent basis and they will be provided for. Concerned more with people for temporary needs, he suggests providing programs aimed at making them self-sufficient as soon as possible.

Herrington said, "I would suggest that no one have a vested interest in poverty or dependency. These tradgedies must never be looked at as a source of votes for politicians or pay checks for Bureaucrats. They are blights on our society that we must work to eliminate, not institutionalize."

Also honored in recognition of longtime and effective service to the party and community was Marjorie Heiser, voted Woman of the year and Alvin Mandell as Man of the year.

Gov. King shows support for DeNucci

Sandra L. Rotberg
Correspondent

NEWTON — Governor Edward J. King showed his loyalty with a brief appearance at a fund-raising event for State Representative A. Joseph DeNucci at the West Newton Armory Friday night.

And DeNucci, who has a fund-raising event every election year and seeks his fourth consecutive term, returned the compliment from the lecturn.

Cochairman of the Legislature's Joint Committee of Human Services, DeNucci said these events help keep his organization together and, "It is an opportunity to tell my people I'm with the governor."

The governor noted in his brief remarks, "The contributions Joe has made to human services and elderly affairs has not been only to his own district, but to the entire Commonwealth."

The governor said he and the secretary of transportation are going to run the M.B.T.A., not the "wildcat union."

DeNucci noted he is very close to the governor and feels King is doing a great job. "I think it is intolerable to create a situation today (the 'wildcat strike') without any official union sanction," said DeNucci. "I'm a strong union supporter," he continued, "and I'll stand up for them when they are right, but today they were wrong. I strongly support the governor in his actions taken today."

Raised in Newton, DeNucci became a professional prize fighter at 17 years old while still attending Newton High school. He won the New-England Golden Gloves Award and was ranked as the fifth middleweight in the world. His boxing career ended in 1973, about the time he was first introduced to politics.

DeNucci attributes his political career to former Speaker of the House John Thompson. "He came to see me fight one night," said DeNucci, "and asked me if I wanted to work as a page in the State House. At the time, I didn't know Beacon Hill from Bunker Hill."

According to DeNucci, he learned the area quickly, enjoyed it and now loves representing his people.

Chaiman of the Committee of Transportation Rep. Lou Nickinello said, "I was personally invited here tonight by Joe and we have been friends for a long time. He really cares about the people and I'm sure he will be unopposed because he should be."

Newton Alderman Bruce Carmichael said, "I'm here because I think Joe is the best Representative we could ask for. He has done more for the middle-class and blue-collar worker and I'm happy to show my support."

Most of the guests spent the evening dancing, drinking and having a good time, which was what DeNucci wanted.

After a few short words of praise in hopes of helping to re-elect some of his political friends, DeNucci said, "I have a strong feeling in my heart for each and every one of you, especially those of you that have followed me from day one with my first fight in Lowell."

"Many of you I see here tonight have been supporting me for years. Your loyalty, our mutual loyalty," stressed DeNucci, "is very important to me. You put me in the state Legislature and I showed them that I'm more than just a prize fighter."

Besides the apprarance by Governor King, DeNucci also hosted longtime friend State Treasurer Robert Crane, who served as master of ceremonies.

Judaism: another view praying and waiting for devine intervention, "we (Kahil B'raira) take responsibility for our own life."

Stybel said the "congregation is designed to appeal to the secular Jew" whose identity with the culture is strong, but feels uncomfortable with the notion of a supernatural being.

"We think there are a lot of Jews that only go to services once a year out of a sense of guilt rather than obligation," said Jim Kates.

The 36-page Holocaust service, which included readings from the bible, verses of Jewish poets, and Anne Frank's diary, was created by Frederic March with the help of Newton residents Sam Fogel and Bill Dain.

Stybel's father turned away from religion after losing the bulk of his family in the holocaust. As a youngster growing up in Manhatten, Stybel attended religious services which were given in German and in Hebrew.

"I couldn't relate," said Stybel of his early Judaic education. However , while in Vietnam, Stybel in his discussions with an army rabbi, found that although he rejected the religious teachings of Judaism, he shared many of the Judaic values.

His wife of eight years, Maryanne, was raised in an Irish Catholic home and later converted to reform Judaism.

"It gives us a group of people with whom to celebrate Jewish life," she said of Kahal B'raira. Many of the couples involved with the group have had mixed marraiges.

"If you want to understand Judaism, you have to study the Talmud," said Stybel of conventional Judaism. "We (Kahal B'raira) say the Bible is a very important piece of literature, but so is Sigmund Freud, Karl Marx, and Alfred Einstein."

'Support' is key to job hunt

NEWTON — "The unemployed person in today's job market often feels beaten before beginning," says Sue Jacobson, admission director at Continuum, a career school in Newton. Jacobson says, "people traditionally fail to build support into their lives during the difficult transition into a new job, then wonder why they fail in landing the job of choice."

"After working with hundreds of career changers, we see that support is a key ingredient for success - on the job and on the way to a job," says Jacobson.

As a result of many calls from unemployed men and women, as well as from those seeking job change or advancement, Continuum is starting a four-week program titled, "Support Group for the Job Hunter." The support group is aimed at developing the motivation, momentum, and strategies for successful job-finding.

The group begins April 21 at 7:30 p.m. and will be led by a Continuum career development counselor, Doris DerMarderosian. DerMarderosian has developed field placements in business and industry over the past five years at Continuum and holds a master in education degree in counseling from Boston College. She brings special knowledge of the Boston job scene and a background in organizational behavior studies to the new program.

The fee for the four week series is $45 and registration is limited. For a workshop brochure, interested applicants should call 964-3322 or write Continuum, 785 Centre Street, Newton, 02158.

Newton Police log

Men face assault charges

NEWTON — Two local men faced arraignment today in District Court on charges stemming from an alleged knife fight in a Washington Street restaurant early Sunday, police said.

Warren C. Hay, 23, of 18 Webster St. and Robert D. Jackson, 46, of 3 Prospect St. each were charged by police with assault by means of a dangerous weapon after the alleged incident about 1:25 a.m. in Papa's Restaurant at 1391 Washington St. Hay also faces a second charge of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon (a bottle).

According to police, patrolmen arrived at the restaurant about 1:25 a.m. to find Jackson allegedly holding a carving knife. A patrolman — with his gun drawn — asked Jackson to drop the knife, police said. Jackson complied.

But Hay then allegedly hit Jackson in the head with a bottle, causing a laceration that required 15 stiches to close after police took Jackson to Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Police said the alleged earlier fight started after Hay and another man allegedly voiced racial slurs at Jackson. The second man left when police were phoned.

Accused of kicking officer

NEWTON — A 19-year-old local man was arrested Thursday night after he allegedly refused to leave a Winchester Street home and kicked a Newton patrolman in the head, causing a wound that required eight stiches, police said.

Tony R. Glazier of 866 Beacon St. was charged with assault and battery on a police officer, trespassing and malicious destruction of personal property, police said.

Ptl. Paul C. Cantiloro returned to duty after getting the stiches at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, according to police.

Cantiloro and Ptl. Thomas J. Claflin went to the Winchester Street home where Glazier was visiting the daughter of the owners. Glazier refused several requests to leave and was arrested. But Glazier allegedly kicked over a coffee table, scratching it and broke several plants on it when police tried to arrest him. He also allegedly kicked a color television and kicked Cantiloro in the forehead before he could be subdued.

Woman mugged, robbed

NEWTON — A Pembroke Street woman was mugged and robbed of her pocketbook by two men who jumped her at the corner of Arlington and Pembroke streets, police said.

The woman told police she was walking south on Pembroke Street when two black men stopped a car beside her, got out and knocked her to the ground. They grabbed her purse leaped back in their car and drove away.

The woman was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital for a head injury she received during the robbery attack, police said.

Gunman bags drugs in robbery

CHESTNUT HILL — An armed robber escaped Thursday afternoon with a bag filled with drugs from a Boylston Street pharmacy, police reported.

Cambridge police reported a similar robbery earlier on Memorial Drive.

Newton police said the suspect, a white male in his early 20s entered Garb Drug, 25 Boylston St., at 1:14 p.m. The robber, who was holding a silver hand gun, handed the druggist a slip of paper listing the drugs he wanted. He then ordered the druggist to fill a plastic bag with the drugs. The suspect told the druggist and three store clerks to lie on the floor.

Mann blasts three 'obstructionists'

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann charged last week that three aldermen are harassing his administration by constantly proposing "specious" resolutions.

Mann charged that Aldermen Richard McGrath, Bruce Carmichael and Joseph DePasquale are requesting studies and proposing resolutions that are designed as "harassment" and not a genuine interest in dealing with the "true problems of the city." The resolutions are non-binding.

The three aldermen have often been vocal critics of the administration. He said his open door policy and "cordiality" has been rebuffed by the three. The chief executive said they "tie up" city business with "petty political stuff."

He also maintained that the aldermen were "exacerbating" the problems faced by Newton residents. Mann made the charges at a City Hall press conference.

He particularly criticed McGrath, referring to the veteran aldermen's constant criticism of the administration as the "shot of the week."

"Cooperation doesn't mean abdication," asserted Mann. "All I'm saying is there is a resolution of the week. They are epistles that come with charming frequency."

The three aldermen have been vocal critics of revaluation and the Manet Road Fire Station closing. Mann particularly cited the three aldermen's criticism of the illegal dumping of dead dog carcasses at the Rumford Avenue dump site.

He said the aldermen's actions have been "counterproductive to the "energies" of the remaining aldermen.

Mann is also apparently disturbed by a McGrath resolution, approved 15 to 3 by aldermen, requesting the restoration of $300,000 budget funding to keep the Manet Road station open. McGrath also proposed a resolution that an extensive study on the closing be conducted that was approved by aldermen.

Carmichael recently initiated a resolution approved by the board requesting that Mann send a letter to the Nonantum Christmas Party Association in an attempt to end a dispute that has resulted in competing Memorial Day parades this year.

The three aldermen denied that the resolutions and actions were politically motivated.

Carmichael, citing the attack as "unprovoked," stressed that resolutions are acted on by the full 24-member legislative body. "I don't know what he's talking about," he said. "I am doing my job as an aldermen when I ask for a resolution."

Carmichael criticized Mann for offering an "olive branch" only to those aldermen that always agree with him. "He doesn't want aldermen that have different opinions than his," said Carmichael of Mann. "He wants to see a legislative body that rubber stamps."

Carmichael maintained that what he called "the Mann monarchy" would often rather handle disputes behind closed doors. "There is no place for city business but out in the open," he added.

McGrath, who recently charged Mann with unlawfully altering a board order on the contract with the company conducting revaluation, called Mann's criticism a "personal reaction."

McGrath, who denied that he is preparing a run for mayor, defended his criticism as legitimate legislative concerns.

"The day that becomes specious is the day democracy ceases to operate in Newton," he said. "I do not find it counter-productive to be loyal opposition or have constructive criticism especially where I find myself more informed as a part-time legislator than he (Mann) is as a full time executive."

DePasquale was shocked and surprised by the blast fired by Mann. In a prepared statement, DePasquale strongly lashed out at Mann.

DePasquale called Mann an "insensitive and paranoid" administrator "who is slowly ruining the quality of life in the city." The chairman of the Public Safety Committee cited Mann's recommendation to close the Manet Road fire station and the elimination of the Fire Department operated ambulance service. He also criticized Mann's handling of revaluation.

He added: "It is unfortunate that he (Mann) considers people with opposing views or different thoughts as politically motivated or obstructionists."

Lions boot away debut

Five costly errors combined with 11 Lincoln-Sudbury hits spelled defeat for Newton South Wednesday as the Lions dropped their opener, 8-5, at Upper Falls Field.

Lincoln-Sudbury grabbed control of the contest quickly, scoring four runs in the first two innings for the early advantage. All four came off starter Mark Paglia, who hurt his arm on the basepaths and had to leave after pitching two complete innings. Andy Young did a respectable job the rest of the way, but he couldn't hold L-S off entirely and Paglia was tagged with the loss.

Bill Defranco cracked the first of five L-S doubles in the opening frame to begin a rally. He went to third on a passed ball, and after Paglia walked Mark Vazal, Defranco scored on the front end of a double-steal.

Mike Furciniti scored Vazal with a single and then advanced to third himself via an error and a passed ball. Jimmy Clark brought the third run of the inning home with a sacrifice fly.

Trailing 4-0, the Lions finally got on the scoreboard in the top of the fourth. Mike Pappas, Jerry Marcus and Adam Rossman all singled to load the bases and Steve Mosca got one run home on a sacrifice fly. Unfortunately, that's all Newton South would receive from the potential big inning.

L-S responded with one in the bottom of the frame, but the Lions edged closer with two in the fifth to chop the deficit to 5-3. After Mark Nicoletti walked and Evan Kushner replaced him on the basepaths with a fielder's choice, Brian Lewis set up a first and second situation. Marcus (2-for-4 on the day) came through with a ringing double which scored both runners.

Newton South's final two runs came in the seventh. Pinch-hitter Rich Wenning drove them both in with a single. Scoring were Kushner, who had been hit by a pitch, and Lewis, who had reached on a walk and moved to second on an error.

The Lions are in action again today (3:30 p.m.) when they host Weston High at the Newton South field.

The numbers told the story for Weston High Wednesday. Seven errors and 16 walks. With those figures on the Wildcats' side, the final was not surprising — they lost, 13-0, in their opener against Bedford.

Inexperience really did in the Wildcats. With three sophomores starting in the infield and another on the mound, Weston was struck by a case of the nerves. "The weather really did a number on us," said Coach Cliff Wilson. "We only got in one scrimmage before this game and, frankly, the kids were very nervous. So I'm just looking at this game as a scrimmage. We've got the talent and we'll get better. I can assure you."

Bedford picked up single runs in the first and second innings and then scored eight in the third to take a commanding 10-0 cushion. The Bucs only finished with six hits, but those 16 walks helped them score the easy way.

"We'll take oour lumps along the way because the kids just don't have the confidence yet," says Wilson. "We'll come back though."

With only four hits to their credit, the St. Sebastian's Arrows lost their season opener Wednesday to Milton Acadamy, 10-1, in Milton.

Milton bombarded losing pitcher Peter Hill, who went 2⅓ innings, for 6 runs in the third before righty Greg McNamara came on to relieve him. But McNamara and Hill combined for half of the Arrows' hitting attack along with Matt Lawlor and Mike Mullowney — each contributing one hit apiece.

Hill, a senior from Natick, gave up a total of seven runs and six hits while lefty Joe Noone threw a bit of relief in the sixth.

St. Sebastian's next game is Saturday against Noble and Greenough at Dedham.

Marchioni, Howley, Corsi Tiger captains

John Corsi, Paul Howley and Rich Marchioni have been selected tri-captains of the 1982 Newton North baseball squad, Coach Tom Rezzuti announced today.

Corsi, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard J. Corsi of 36 Hartley Circle, Newtonville, is a pitcher, first baseman, third baseman and outfielder for the Tigers. He was one of their better hurlers in 1981 and Rezzuti has tabbed him as the possible ace of the '82 staff.

Corsi has been seeing regular duty in the Tiger lineup since his sophomore season, displaying a powerful bat and solid defensive skills. He was also an outstanding linebacker for Norm Walker's football team last fall.

Howley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Howley of 157 Melrose St., Auburndale, also pitches and plays first base. A southpaw hurler, Howley relies on sharp control and changes of speed to keep hitters off-balance. A versatile athlete, Howley was also captain of this year's hockey team and an excellent wide receiver in football as well.

Marchioni, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Marchioni of 12 Fayette St., Newton, is a pitcher and outfielder. Like Corsi and Howley, Marchioni also played football last fall, starting at the cornerback position.

The Tigers open their season Friday afternoon (3:30 p.m.) when they host Natick High. They'll also face Needham Saturday.

DiMartino stars at Ohio Wesleyan

Newton's Eric DiMartino is picking up where he left off last year as the leading hitter of the Wesleyan University (Ohio) varsity baseball team.

DiMartino, sophomore second baseman for the Bishops, was batting .471 through seven games when Wesleyan recently completed a successful spring trip to Jacksonville, Fla. He is currently riding a six-game hitting streak.

Falcon women romp

The Bentley College women's softball team needed a helping hand to pull themselves out of the doldrums, and they got it Monday at Norton.

The host team, Wheaton College, practically handed a 16-4 decision to the Falcons by givingup 16 bases on balls and committing five errors. Bentley managed only five hits off two Wheaton pitchers. Chris Calliontzis, first baeman from Dedham, and Judy Mangion, shortstop from Marshfield, had two RBIs each.

Sue Armstrong, former Newton North High hurler, went the distance on the mound for Bentley and scattered seven hits.

Bentley lost a pair of doubleheaders over the long holiday weekend.

O'Neill will appear in local forum

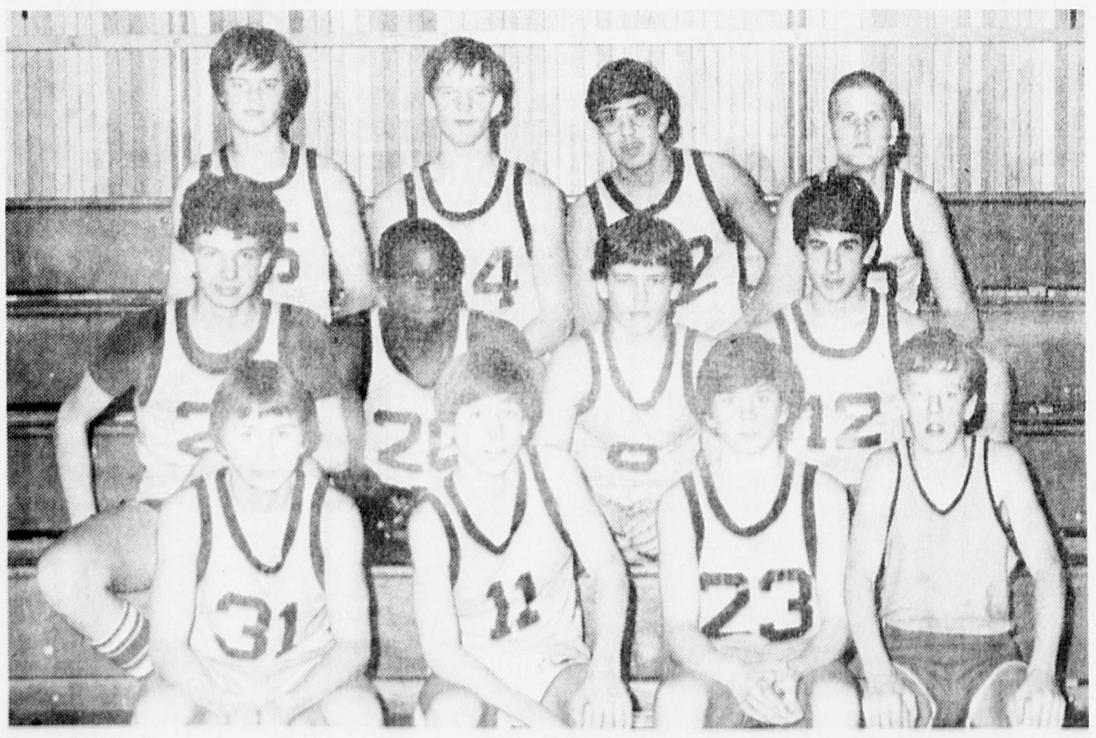
NEWTON CORNER — Lt. Governor Tom O'Neill, Democratic candidate for Governor, will participate in a gubernatorial forum in Newton on April 21.

O'Neill's statement to the Massachusetts National Organization for Women will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Howard Johnson's Motor Inn, 320 Washington St., Newton Corner.

Lieutenant governor for the past seven years, O'Neill has been credited with helping to bring millions of dollars in federal funds into Massachusetts. A former state representative from Cambridge, he has been chairman of the Massachusetts Arson Task Force, the Outer Continental Shelf Advisory Board to the federal Department of the Interior, and has served on state, regional and federal committees on such topics as tourism, water use, and energy.

In announcing his candidacy for governor, O'Neill made taxes, education, housing and civil service his four major issues.

He has proposed that the state impose high state-wide standards in the public schools; abolish the state civil service system; restructure taxes to lower property taxes and income taxes and broaden the sales tax to include more businesses; and reclaim and rebuild abandoned housing.



Runner-ups

Mayoral aide defends planned police budget

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Under fire from aldermen, a key mayoral aide Thursday night defended a proposed police department FY 1983 budget that would eliminate a captain's position, reducing the force by one to a complement of 203.

In a heated meeting with the Aldermanic Public Safety Committee, Deputy Mayor James Hickey said the budget reflected the "best judgement" of the administration, noting the police budget has been cut by less than one percent.

Hickey admitted that an ordinance change is needed before the cut could be implemented. The city charter requires six captains in the department. The cut will reduce the number to five.

He said Mayor Theodore D. Mann is planning to request an ordinance change within the next several weeks to pave the way for the elimination of the position which is funded at $31,128.

Several aldermen charged that the administration was being less than forward in an attempt to trap the legislative body into accepting the cut. A bitter shouting match ensued, with charges and countercharges.

Hickey said if the ordinance change was denied by aldermen, the administration would comply. However, he refused to rule out the possibility that cuts would be made elsewhere in the police department budget if that occurred.

An angry Alderman Richard Bullwinkle charged that the budget document was a violation of the ordinance. A stern Hickey, however, contended that there is no violation of the ordinance unless the budget is implemented without an ordinance change July 1.

Alderman Richard McGrath, meanwhile, charged that the administration was "playing a game" with the legislative body. "How are you going to screw us?" he asked.

Under repeated questioning by aldermen, Hickey refused to tell aldermen how the administration would respond if the ordinance change was defeated.

"I am not going to tell you what the mayor is going to do," he asserted. "I am not the mayor."

As aldermen continued to press, Hickey snapped: "Play it straight. I'm getting sick of it."

"Well go home," Bullwinkle shouted back. The Ward 3 alderman criticized the administration for overruling Police Chief William Quinn on the public-safety decision.

Quinn, who did not become involved in the shouting match, has vowed to fight to restore the eliminated position.

Newton's Mackey All-Star in Marlboro tourney

Brian Mackey of the Newton Community Center basketball team won a berth in the 14-and-Under Division All-Star Team in the recent Marlboro Boys' Club Basketball Tournament.

Mackey, an eighth grader at Day Junior High, was the high scoring guard for the Community Center quintet which bowed out in the quarterfinals. The Newton five downed P.F. Galvin (91-77) in the first round with Mackey scoring 28 points. In the 77-71 overtime loss to Rockwell Siding of Leominster, Galvin poured in 33 points.

The son of Boston College assistant coach Kevin Mackey, Brian was the only player from the Waltham-Newton area among the five all-stars. He can penetrate and has an excellent outside shot.

Newton Community Center will makes its debut in the Arlington Boys' Clu Tournament on Thursday, April 22, facing Belmont at 7:30 p.m. in the 16 and Under Division.

Marathon throngs cheer on Salazar to win

"It's Boston. It's part of growing up in Boston," said Jimmy McDonough, 55, of Brighton.

The world-famous marathon is a 57-year-old tradition for Simon Rubin, 75, whose home is on Heartbreak Hill.

"It's been running good and smooth every year," said Rubin. Like other families who live on Commonwealth Avenue, Rubin, his wife Jennie, their children and grandchildren picnic in front of their house and watch the race for the laurel wreath. "I think it's nice for the city, too," remarked Rubin, a retired hardware store owner.

Yesterday's event was a bit disappointing for Ap Sanopoulos, 66, and his son, Peter, who hoped to see at least one runner from Greece. Both men are friends of Stylianos Kyriakides, a Greek runner who won the event in 1946. "That's when the marathon went international. He brought a lot of notoriety to Greece," said Peter.

"My grandfather owned a hotel in Boston, trained him and fed him. That's how I met him," he added. Kyriakides,70, lives in Athens where he trains runners. "I still talk to him and write to him," Peter said.

As the first female runner dashed up Heartbreak Hill, Grace Peterson of Lexington applauded loudly "just because they're doing it."

"I'd like to see a super marathon - more than 26 miles - because that's built for men, for their endurance. But a woman can go on much longer," said Peterson.

Lois Pines, former state representative and now candidate for lieutenant governor, also said she was watching for the first female runner.

Andover resident Ann McKillop said after she watched tired runners drag themselves 26 miles, she and her friends from Texas would head for the finish line parties at the Prudential Center. "It's nice to get another view of the runners after seeing them like this."

Block grant funding wins okay

NEWTON — A triad of aldermanic committees gave their unanimous consent Wednesday to a $2.099 million Community Development Block Grant Program for fiscal year 1983.

Faced with a "significantly" reduced federal block grant for the second consecutive year, the city's Planning and Development Board reexamined its priorities for FY83 and concluded that projects that would directly benefit low and moderate-income residents would receive first priority.

The 24-member Board of Aldermen will vote on the block grant program on May 3. The program application must be submitted to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development by May 28.

Community Development Director Diane Schorr said the board decided to put money only into areas where more than 40 percent of the residents were of low and moderate income.

Carol Robinson, chairman of the Planning and Development Board, noted that the board is responsible for looking at the city as a whole, and for doing some long-range planning.

"We try and stretch the money as best we can," said Robinson. She said the board, within the guidelines that it had set, paid undue attention to those communities that organized and presented their specific needs to the board.

The Human Services Advisory Committee funding recommendations for FY83:

- Teen Drop-In Center — $41,900.
- Newton Day Care Center — $15,000.
- Streetworkers — $25,500.
- Plowshares — $7,000.
- Emerson after school care — $2,500.
- Day, after day — $5,500.
- Mental Health Intervention — $36,000.
- Newton Corner Senior Drop-In Center — $16,000.
- Community Schools — $2,000.
- Family Day Care — $10,000.

Cong. Frank aims at rental housing crisis

NEWTON — Congressmen Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., last week led a bi-partisan effort to persuade HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce to take steps immediately to deal with the serious backlog of critically needed rental housing units which are waiting to go into construction.

Pierce was urged to make changes in the so-called Financing Adjustment Factor regulations. The FAF regulations, originally issued last summer, allow for adjustments to fair market rents in newly constructed or substantially rehabilitated Section 8 housing when extraordinarily high interest rates make these projects financially infeasible without additional assistance.

However, the existing regulations limit adjustments to interest rates to no higher than 12 percent in the tax-exempt bond market and they require a June 1, 1982 construction start.

In a letter to Pierce drafted by Frank, Conte and Rep. Jerry Patterson, D-Calif., and signed by nearly 40 other House members, the lawmakers asked Pierce to extend the construction start deadline to December 31, 1982 and increase the interest rate limitation to 14 percent from 12 percent.

"If the FAF regulations are not amended and extended, we fear that a number of very much needed and worthwhile projects already in the pipeline will be lost," the letter said. The letter added that HUD itself had determined last summer that the procedure "was urgently needed."

Terming the 12 percent limitation "unrealistically low," the lawmakers wrote that a 14 percent limitation would "much more realistically reflect current interest rate conditions."

Frank is on the Housing and Urban Affairs Subcommittee of the Banking Committee. Conte is the ranking Republican on the Appropriations Committee.

Taste Marvel!

Latest research confirms MERIT delivers the taste of cigarettes having up to twice the tar.

Many low tar cigarettes make taste promises. But only 'Enriched Flavor'™ MERIT offers proof not promises. Proof through extensive smoker taste tests.

MERIT Taste Does It.

In impartial new tests where brand identity was concealed, the overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands. Even brands with up to twice the tar.

Moreover, when tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

In a separate part of this extensive new study, MERIT smokers report that taste is a major factor in completing their successful switch from higher tar brands.

Confirmed: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers say MERIT is an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

New image for used car

NEW YORK — With new car prices averaging almost $10,000, there's a great demand for well-kept used cars, says a Santa Ana, Calif., man who is launching a national program to franchise used car dealers and upgrade their public image.

Jim Cummings and his partner, Art Bartlett, created and built the Centruy 21 nationally franchised real estate brokerage operation. Their new venture, Triex, is based on the idea that nowadays a quality used car is a big enough deal to be listed and sold the way a house is.

He said last year's used car sales in the United States exceeded 10 million vehicles.

For several years now, Cummings said, new car dealers have been urging their customers to try to sell the old car themselves instead of trading it in on the new car. The new car dealer doesn't want to tie up money, on which he must pay high interest, on the trade-in car if he can avoid it.

Sixty percent of the used cars sold in this country are not trade-ins, Cummings said.

"I think people who sell their cars themselves, whether or not they are buying a new car at the same time, ought to be able to get as much for them as a dealer will offer on a trade-in," Cummings said. "But this is not the case. Trade-in prices still are somewhat higher on the average. By setting up a network of 3,000 to 5,000 quality franchised used car dealers across the country in the next five years we will close that gap."

He said the person who has a car to sell but doesn't want to buy another always has been at a marked disadvantage in the United states but that ought not to be the case any longer in view of the current national shortage of good used cars.

Cummings said Triex is selling franchises for $10,00 to "the cream" of the nation's new and used car dealers who have their own used car lots. There are about 26,000 of these.

What Triex is selling is a national image created by advertising and certain marketing aids. The franchised dealers will provide their own facilities and working capital and obtain warranty and consumer sales financing and servicing facilities from regular channel third parties.

These franchised used-car sellers will take other used cars as trade-ins just as is done now.

Next to the Triex national image, Cummings said, the big advantage of the franchise to the dealer is that people will be inclined to place their cars with him for sale on commission and he will not have to tie up money buying cars at used car auctions in order to maintain sufficient stock to attract customers.

Cummings expects new car dealers to purchase his franchises for the same reasons as used car dealers and because the National Association of Automobile Dealers has calculated that, in 1981, the average new car dealer was dependent on used cars for nearly two-thirds of his gross profit.

Cummings said Triex will open this spring with 40 franchised dealers in the greater Los Angeles area and expand in Texas, Illinois and Ohio later in the year. He expects to go countrywide in 1983.

For the individual selling his car, Cummings said, the big advantages of the Triex plan will be 24-hour-a-day display on a lighted lot, not having to worry about people calling at his home and no personal advertising expense or selling effort.

He said Triex will be in the upper end of the used car market only. Every car will have to be cosmetically and mechanically in good shape and readily financible through regular channels.

Japan aims for 'flying' trains

MIYAZAKI, Japan — The Japanese have this crazy idea that trains should fly like airplanes, and their space-age engineers have built one that cruises at 312 miles per hour.

Now there's much head scratching at the Japan National Railways over what to do with their brainchild.

The two MLs — which stands for maglev, meaning magnetically levitated linear motor propelled trains — have successfully completed two stages of development at this southern Japan test facility on the island of Kyushu. Plans now call for the building and testing of three vehicles later this year.

The maglevs sail through the air at a fixed height of about four inches above the magnetized roadbed, and would make the 311-mile run between Tokyo and Osaka in about an hour.

"Our aim," said a JNR spokesman, "is to take people out of airplanes and put them back on trains."

JNR did a pretty good transplant job a few years ago when they introduced the 130 mph shinkansen (bullet trains) which today hustle thousands of passengers between Tokyo and Japan's major southern cities often faster than planes.

"But the shinkansen are becoming too congested and too slow," complained the spokesman. "That's why we are developing the maglevs."

To the pampered Japanese train riders the other attractive features of the maglevs are that they are quieter, more comfortable and consume less energy than the present rail system, 80 percent of which is electrified.

"The maglevs would only use about half the electricity needed to run the shinkansen at speeds of about 156 mph," the spokesman said. "But at speeds of about 312 MPH, twice the amount of energy would be needed."

The far-sighted engineers at this Kyushu testing facility estimate it will take another eight to 10 years to put the maglevs into service on the major trunk routes. Eventually they predict unmanned maglev freight trains will run during the night, giving Japan the world's fastest freight service. Manned passenger trains will use the facilities during the day.

"Only two people are needed to operate maglevs," the spokesman said, "one at either end of the line. But people prefer humans at the controls of their trains and planes, so we would man the passenger-carrying maglevs."

The revolutionary concept of propelling vehicles through the air with magnets uses the same basic principles as the electric motor, except the magnetic energy in motors rotates a shaft in a circular motion. With maglevs the magnetic energy pulls and pushes the vehicles in a straight line forward or backwards.

The maglevs begin their flight on wheels. When the 10-ton vehicle accelerates to a speed of 100 MPH, the wheels retract and the train skims through the air, levitated by the repulsion force of the two magnets — those on the road bed and those aboard the train. Similar magnetized coils along the sides of the guideway always keep the vehicle on dead center.

The fate of the maglevs now passes from the physicists to the politicians.

NEEDHAM — Village Chevrolet is celebrating "Roy Trecartin" week from April 15 through 24.

Trecartin joined the sales department of Village Chevrolet (then Feely Chevrolet), in Feb. 20, 1955. He has been continually employed by the company since that time.

Trecartin has been a Needham resident for 56 years. Roy played on the original Men's Softball team in Needham sponsored by William Carter Company in the early 30's. A recent picture of the team has been publicized in several local papers.

Trecartin has sold more than 3,500 automobiles and trucks since he started with the company, and for 10 years has been awarded "Legion of Leader" status by Chevrolet Motor Division, General Motors Corporation. This is a select group of the top salesmen nationally. 21

One killed in two-car crash

NEWTON — Two local residents were scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday in Newton District Court each on a charge of negligent homicide as the result of a two-car crash that took the life of a 17-year-old boy early Sunday, police said.

Arthur Parker, 17, of Menasha, Wisc. was killed and Jonathan Humphrey, 17, of England, was injured when they reportedly were thrown from one of the cars by the impact of the collision.

Humphrey was listed in good condition in Newton-Wellesley Hospital Monday evening.

Humphrey and Parker were riding in a car driven by Rebecca Abrams, 17, of 22 Bernard Lane. Abrams faced arraignment Tuesday on charges of operating to endanger, failure to obey a red flashing light, driving with an operator's license that was invalid after 1 a.m. and the charge of negligent homicide, police said.

Michael J. Walsh, 29, of 35 George St. faced arraignment on charges of driving under the influence of liquor, failure to show caution at a flashing yellow light, possession of marijuana and the charge of negligent homicide.

Sabatier blasts judge's attitude in case

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Charles Sabatier may have settled his dispute in court last week with Delta Airlines but differences apparently lingered between himself and the judge involved in the unprecedented case.

"It's a hell of a situation that he (the judge) thinks he went to the greatest pains to come to this court," remarked Sabatier following dismissal of disorderly conduct charges against him in Newton District Court. Sabatier, who uses a wheelchair, had to be tried in Newton because the building has handicapped ramps. During the brief trial, Judge Robert Stanziani said the court "extended" itself to accommodate Sabatier because of his disability.

In the case Sabatier won a victory for other disabled people in that Delta Airlines changed a seating policy for disabled passengers. Physically handicapped passengers will no longer be forced to sit on blankets, a policy used by Delta in case the person had to be carried off the plane during an emergency. Delta and Sabatier came to the agreement and both parties dropped their complaints.

However, after the dismissal of the case, Stanziani charged that Sabatier, an advocate of handicapped rights, used the courts as a forum for his views, using it to "dignify his complaints."

Sabatier, 36, of Auburndale, was arrested March 17 after he boarded a Delta Airlines plane headed for Miami. Sabatier, who has used a wheelchair since 1968 when he was injured in Vietnam, refused to sit on a blanket. Delta uses the "blanket policy" for evacuating nonambulatory persons in the event of a crash. Sabatier was scheduled to address the United States Conference of Mayors. The flight attendent asked Sabatier to place the blanket under him, he refused and was arrested by state police.

Sabatier, Assistant Director of the Massachusetts Office of Handicapped Affairs, claimed the so-called blanket policy was not a law and was a "demeaning, insensitive and humiliating" practice that discriminates against physically handicapped individuals.

Sabatier pleaded innocent to the charges. He was arraigned outside East Boston District Court because he did not want to be carried into the court room. The case was heard in the Newton court because of its accessibility.

The trial ended after 30 minutes following a brief appearance by State Police Sargeant Carmen Tammaro, who arrested Sabatier. Assistant Suffolk County District Attorney Peter Grabler and Sabatier's attorney James Sultan requested the dismissal. Stanziani dismissed the case provided that Sabatier agreed to dismiss his complaint, which he did.

Sabatier's attorney came to the agreement with Delta last Tuesday. Under the agreement, Sabatier will be paid by Delta $2,500 and the company will change its blanket policy, making it an option rather than a requirment for handicapped passengers. In turn, Sabatier must sign a statement promising never to sue Delta over the incident.

Sabatier considers the policy change a victory for the handicapped. "I don't know one (handicapped) person who would choose to be humiliated," he said. Sabatier said he "politely" refused place a blanket under him during the March 17 incident. According to Sabatier, a flight attendent caused the disruption by raising her voice so that he felt humiliated in the presence of other passengers. "I should have been the one to call the state police," remarked Sabatier, whose wife, Peg Griffin,23, attended the trial with him.

Sabatier said he wouldn't mind being carried off on a blanket in the event of a plane crash. However, he said handicapped people should not be forced to sit on a blanket througout the flight.He added that the option should be presented to disabled people in a discreet manner.

"He accomplished something very important for handicapped people," said Sabatier's attorney. "As one individual, he got a major airline to back down. He should be a source of inspiration to other people," Sultan said.

"This case was built up by the defendent," said Stanziani, pointing to Sabatier's arraignment on the footsteps outside East Boston District Court and his refusal to be carried into the building. Stanziani also said Delta Airlines "extended all accommodations that were reasonable and proper." The judge also said "Delta was doing something for the safety of its passenger."

To Stanziani's remarks that Sabatier "is subject to the laws" and "must obey the laws," Sabatier responded that the blanket policy is not a law.

Several physically disabled people who attended the trial agreed wholeheartedly with Sabatier's position. Robert Byron was one person who was pleased with the outcome of the case. "The exact same thing happened to me on an Amtrack," said Byron, of Marshfield. He attended yesterday's trial as "moral support for him (Sabatier)." Byron is currently lobbying for handicapped parking in his town.

"I think all the disabled community will back him 100%," said Robert Alexander, 47, of Cambridge. Alexander said any disabled person who opposed Sabatier's stand was "definitely handicapped."

Proposed library budget 'rock bottom'

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The aldermanic Human Services Committee last week gave initial approval to a proposed $1.1 million library department budget eliminating three youth pages who stock shelves and reducing hours of several employees.

Dorothy Reichard, chairman of the Board of Library trustees, called the budget "rock bottom" funding for the system.

"The library has been hit overall harder than most departments," agreed Library Trustee Lyman Zie. "It's taken a bad licking in comparison to the schools."

The committee approved the budget by a 5 to 1 vote. Alderman Cynthia Creem was the sole opponent, citing the lack of documentation in the budget of the Oak Hill branch closing. The Library Board of Trustees voted to close the branch last December.

Library Director Virginia Tashjian pointed out that the system was forced to eliminate nearly 50 positions over the last six years.

The proposed $1,146,415 fiscal year 1983 library budget is a $44,783 cut from last year's budget. The budget includes a $3,506 cut in full-time salaries achieved by reducing hours of two employees and a $10,512 cut eliminating three pages.

Tashjian said that the cuts come with more people visiting the library becaue of the tight economy. For example, she noted that many residents come to the library to read newspapers there, rather than purchase them.

As a result of a lack of space and furniture, Tashjian said the system has been forced to set up bridge tables for library visitors in the main branch on Sundays.

"We haven't had any money at all for typewriters, chairs, tables, desks and meter printers," she also noted.

The system has also been forced to significantly reduce the purchase of new books for the last decade. The $140,000 funding of new books for the system has been "level" funded for at least the last five years.

Associated Industries host governor April 22

NEWTON — George Gilder, author of the best-selling "Wealth and Poverty" will be the keynote speaker at the 67th annual meeting of Associated Industries of Massachusetts Thursday, April 22 at the Marriott Hotel.

Gilder, described by the Los Angeles Times as "the prophet of the new economic order," has just completed a new book entitled "The Spirit of Enterprise." That title will be the topic of his speech to the more than 700 AIM members at the dinner.

The popular "Wealth and Poverty" is a particular favorite of President Ronald Reagan who has been so impressed with its ideals that he had presented autographed copies to his colleagues and friends. Earlier, new Massachusetts Commissioner of Education John H. Lawson will address the meeting on the subject: "How industry can help the secondary schools in Massachusetts."

AIM, the largest organization of industrial employers in New England will lead-off the day-long gathering with a luncheon meeting of its statewide public affairs organization. The program will feature a panel of some of the state's top political writers, who will discuss election campaigns now underway and other political issues facing Massachusetts.

The panel will be moderated by Jack Flannery, a media and political consultant who is former press secretary and chief of staff to Governor Sargent. Offering political insights will be Laurence Collins of the Boston Globe, Peter Lucas of the Boston Herald American, Brian McNiff of the Worcester Telegram-Gazette and Glenn Briere of the Springfield Union-News-Republican newspapers.

Preceding the evening banquet, an old-fashioned political rally will be held and all candidates for the office of governor have been invited to participate. Each candidate will be allotted a time slot to present his case to the AIM members and their guests. Toastmaster for the banquet is AIM Chairman Joseph R. Carter who is chairman and chief executive officer of the Wyman-Gordon Company of Worcester.

Greetings of the commonwealth will be delivered by Governor Edward J. King with invocation by the Reverend Robert W. Golledge, vicar of the Old North Church.

'Nobody's lady'

Taking feminism to the suburbs

NEWTONVILLE - Singer Carole Lynne doesn't want to be head of a major corporation, but she'd still like the option.

Lynne, a guitarist, songwriter and teacher, has hit the road with a one-woman show called "Nobody's Lady But My Own" which will be presented May 8 at St. John's Episcopal Church in Newtonville.

And Lynne, an avowed feminist, wants to bring her message to the suburbs to both men and women.

"In the past few years I have started to use my music to express my feminist ideas," Lynne said last week. "Most feminist events take place in cities. I want very much to bring feminist events to the suburbs."

Yet with misconceptions often abounding about just what feminism means, Lynne has produced her own show to bring the message across in a variety of ways.

"I feel the terms have been widely misunderstood," she said. "It's

N.Y. man wins super vote

Final tally unanimous

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Amid often bitter confrontation, the School Committee Monday night appointed Dr. John Strand as the next superintendent of the Newton schools over finalist Dr. Percy Clark, Jr.

Although the vote was unanimous, the committee remained deadlocked Monday night until members from Wards 1-4 (beginning with Chairperson Nancy Mann) decided to change their earlier vote and support a motion nominating Strand.

Strand, who is currently superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y. schools at a salary of $54, 500, and Clark had been the two finalists for the position for about three weeks. The two men emerged as the finalists from a pool of over 110 applicants and seven semi-finalists for the job which Superintendent Aaron Fink will leave at the end of the school year after 13 years.

Mann was the first Clark supporter to tip the scales in Strand's favor when she said, "I plan to support this motion. I must say that I think Lexington is going to be very lucky."

Over one week ago, Clark, a black assistant superintendent for in-

DA blasts last meeting

NEWTON — Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney called the School Committeee's "twin" closed sessions held recently on the superintendent search "a sham aimed at avoiding" the state's Open Meeting Law.

Droney, responding to a complaint filed by The Newton Graphic, said the divisions of the eight-member committee into groups of four during a recent meeting to discuss qualifications of two superintendent finalists, and "shuffling" of members during the private sessions was a "misuse of the quorum requirement" of the law.

Droney also said that if a decision had been reached on a candidate during the meeting of April 15, the district attorney's office might have viewed the move as invalid.

School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann said at Monday's meeting that she had not realized the illegality of the sessions and she said the committee "won't do it again."

The 1975 Open Meeting Law states that all meetings of a governmental body must be open to the public except under limited circumstances. Closed or executive sessions can be held only to discuss the reputation, character, physical condition or mental health and not

Back problems plague some in pension claims

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city Retirement Board granted 14 disability pensions since January 1981 including three to municipal employees under the age of 36 with back injuries disputed by one of three examining physicians.

Retirement Board Chairman Ernest Angevine said back injuries are the toughest to disprove. "That's a joke," he said of back injuries. "Anybody can claim a low back injury and we can't disprove it."

"It is the one thing that can be faked easiest of all," he said. Angevine, however, stressed that he was not aware of any abuses in Newton.

City Comptroller and Retirement Board member Lawrence Marino contended the three-member board is "pretty tough" on employees requesting disability pensions.

When asked if he believed Newton was free from disability pension abuses, Marino said: "I'd like to think so, but I would not guarantee it. There are some people who are trying to get away with murder."

The disability cases approved here since January 1981 include:

•a $15,882 annual pension for police officer James Scalzi at age 36. Scalzi, a 10-year city employee, reportedly injured his back on duty in September 1974 when he caught a little girl who jumped out of a second floor window during a fire. The board voted 2 to 0 for the pension on Jan. 26, 1982 with one member absent.

•a $9,973 pension for Department of Public Works (DPW) employee Bruce Gayzagian at 33. Gayzagian, a 15-year city employee, injured his back while attempting to lift a boulder while on the job. The board voted 2 to 1 for the pension on Oct. 29, 1981. Angevine opposed the pension.

• a $12,872 pension for DPW employee John Calderone, a 19-year employee, at age 47 with a back injury. The board unanimously voted for the pension on March 27, 1981.

• a $10,036 annual pension for DPW employee William Divola, an 11-year employee, at age 61. Divola fell off a ladder and suffered a knee injury. The pension was granted by a vote of 2 to 0 with one member absent on March 27, 1981.

•a $14,306 annual pension for police officer Marie Morello at age 32. Morello, a five-year employee, reportedly injured her back carrying a stretcher. Her pension was initially rejected by the board (2 to 1 vote), Chaulk senior paramedic Bruce Baxter instructs soon-to-be Guardian Angels as "patient" Tommy Binnell plays the part.

'Angels' bone up on first aid

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Chaulk Ambulance personnel faced a unique group of students last week when a group of Guardian Angels dropped into town.

"You're apt to be at the scene of an emergency moments before rescuers get there," Bruce Baxter, Chaulk's senior paramedic told the soon-to-be Guardian Angels.

The Guardian Angels, a national organization of volunteer crimefighters, patrol high crime areas in the nation's larger cities, including Boston.

Baxter and several Chaulk emergency medical technicians (EMTs) trained the group of 11 men and women in emergency first aid. Members of the group, many of whom are in their late teens, have already received 2½ months of guardian angel training. The program includes "a lot of pushups" and cardio-pulminary resuscitation (CPR).

Chaulk rescuers taught the group how to care for someone during a medical emergency. They concentrated on some basic life-saving proceedures such as keeping airway passages open, controlling bleeding and dealing with shock.

Baxter told them that during an emergency it would be only a matter of minutes before trained help arrived, yet the first few moments are vital. He noted it is important that Guardian Angels know emergency first aid because they're likely be at the scene before anyone else.

"You're so mobile that your chances of getting to an emergency first are 100% greater than mine because I'm sitting in a building while you're out walking the streets," Baxter told the group.

Following a brief lecture in human anatomy, the group broke into smaller groups where they were instructed in bandaging, controlling bleeding, determining what happened to the patient and how to treat a patient while waiting for medical help.

"Just be their friend. That can do a lot of good," said Baxter, who stressed that maintaining composure and keeping a patient calm is extremely important.

West Roxbury resident Elaine Bell, 30, said she was pleased with the training she received and is optimistic about her upcoming role as a Guardian Angel. Bell, a hairdresser, said she decided to join the angels "for racial harmony and to help with fighting crime."

Watertown resident Danny Diaz, 17, also said he joined the crimefighting group to help deter crime.

'Mascot' Tom learns from EMTs and police

NEWTON — Tommy Binnel of Auburndale worries the police will get angry if people start calling him the "Chaulk Mascot."

"I'm really the police mascot," says 13-year-old Tommy.

Tommy (pictured above as the "patient" during a training session at Chaulk Ambulance headquarters) wants to be a police officer someday so for the past two years he has hanging around police headquarters, learning about the life of the police officer.

So first he was known as the police mascot.

But when Chaulk Ambulance came under contract with the city last August, Tommy started spending several afternoons a week with the emergency medical technicians (EMTs) and paramedics. So now rescuers call Tommy the "Chaulk Mascot."

When classes get out at Warren Junior High School, the energetic youngster dashes over to Chaulk's Upper Falls headquarters or its Rescue 2 station in West Newton.

"I wanted to see if I could learn something," says Tommy. "I do learn things - like where equipment is stored and how to use some equipment," he says.

One EMT calls the late afternoon hours "Tommy Time." But sometimes Tommy stays late and helps out if Chaulk is holding special programs, such as first aid or CPR classes for residents.

Tommy says his parents don't mind that he spends so much time at Chaulk and police headquarters. "They don't mind too much. They'd rather have me here than out on the street," he says. "I stay

$500,000 income lost for tardiness

NEWTON — The city will lose up to $500,000 in revenue because of the delay in mailing of property tax bills, according to City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi.

As a result of the property tax bill delay and "insufficient" cash for the treasurer to meet city payroll and other expenses beginning next week, the Board of Aldermen Monday night unanimously authorized a $10 million loan. Scafidi must issue "tax anticipation notes" to borrow the funds.

The borrowed funds will prevent what could have been payless paydays for municipal employees beginning the second week of May.

The $10 million loan brings the total borrowed by the treasurer to $15 million. Scafidi said he will borrow the last $5 million only if it is needed.

"This is probably costing us between $300,000 to $500,000," Scafidi said of the delay in mailing out tax bills. "My investment procedures would have changed as far back as a month ago."

The property tax bills were originally scheduled to be mailed on April 1, but were delayed and set to be mailed by May 1. The Board of Assessors has recently targeted May 15 for mailing of the bills.

Chief Assessor Robert Palmer told aldermen that city mailed out new commercial assessments Friday. He said changes in assessments for an estimated 2,500 homeowners who challenged the new values will be mailed this week, along with increases for about 250.

He said the tax bills can not be mailed until the city has received final state approval on the changes in both commercial and residential assessments. Informal hearings between commercial property owners and the firm that conducted revaluation, Finnegan Associates of Acton, are scheduled to begin today.

He said the board of assessors will submit a classification plan to aldermen by the end of next week. According to Palmer, the plan will tax commercial, industrial and personal properties, the maximum allowed under state law — 150 percent.

Alderman Robert Tennant, meanwhile, said that the classification of business at 150 percent is unfair and may force smaller businesses out of the city. Tennant maintained that the majority of a $3.5 million shift from commercial to residential properties will result in savings only for the major utilities. "It is discrimination against business," asserted Tennant.

Alderman Richard McGrath, one of the most vocal critics of the revaluation, blamed the delays on Finnegan Associates. McGrath said that he will move to enforce a contract with Finnegan that could force the company to pick up the estimated $300,000 to $500,000 the city will lose. The contract with Finnegan requires the company to reimburse the city under a bond because of any delays caused by the firm.

However, Robert Finnegan, president of the company, has maintained the delays were caused by additional uncontrollable requests from the state Department of Revenue.

Chairman of the Aldermanic Revaluation Subcommittee Paul Coletti said: "You can't assess the blame for the delay directly to Finnegan versus what is related to the Department of Revenue, the executive department and the board of alderman. We all share the responsibility."

Critics claim 'chicken' by school board

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Supporters of Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., lashed out at Clark opponents on the School Committee for "playing a game of chicken" or "hardball" through their silence and apparent unwillingness to enter into debate Monday night over the two superintendent finalists.

When the 4-4 vote appeared cast in stone as the result of a vote on a motion supporting Clark, some Clark supporters on the committee wanted a discussion of what their colleagues thought the next step should be. Katherine Jones and Leonard Gentile broached the idea of whether Clark opponents were then in favor of naming an acting superintendent.

When discussion still did not open up, Susan Silbey said harshly, "I find it extraordinary that none of you have anything to say."

All four Clark supporters presented detailed prepared statements on their reasons for supporting Clark after a motion was made by Gentile to make Clark the next superintendent. Ward 5-8 members did not make any comments.

Silbey emphasized that she wanted to restate her reasons for wanting Clark "to those who would listen."

"I wanted to support Dr. Strand," Silbey said. "But not once ever did he talk about the fiscal constraints we face or any innovative action in this area."

Katherine Jones noted that Strand had said in an interview that his most difficult situation as superintendent in Pelham had recently been the instatement of an in-school lunch program.

"I vividly remember that in 1969 that problem was resolved in Newton," she said pointedly.

Both sides of the committee were aware that Clark received an offer on April 15 for the Lexington schools superintendent position and that Dr. John Strand, superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y., schools, was involved in another process which was not as far along.

Gentile said he interpreted his colleagues unwillingness for discussion "to mean that we're playing hardball here."

"If we walk out of here tonight without having made a decision," he stressed, "the chances of you getting Dr. Strand for a superintendent are even greater."

Silbey said her colleagues were "in fact playing a game of chicken or poker. I mean I don't hear any discussion."

When discussion later opened up somewhat following a motion by Robert Ricles to nominate Strand, Ward 5 member Marcia Mitchell said she continued to feel that of "two very fine candidates", Strand represented what the Newton schools need at this time.

Mitchell also criticized unnamed Clark supporters for "innuendos." "If someone were going to have changed their mind...you have to realize that emotion and psychology play a very important role in these matters," she said.

"You can't treat people this way. You just can't," Mitchell stressed.

"I don't know what you're talking about Marcia," Gentile said. "If you get intimidated by prepared statements, it's something I can't understand."

A few members of the audience addressed the committee after a final vote was taken after 12:15 p.m.

"I believe we have lost a golden opportunity to show that Newton is truly an All-American city," Lillie Jefferson told the committee.

"I am extremely dissappointed."

the professional competence of individuals.

The School Committee was to have voted for a superintendent at their last meeting on April 15, but found themselves deadlocked 4-4 in an open session vote on the two finalists for the superintendent's job. Chairperson Nancy Mann announced during a recess of that meeting the committee would meet in groups of four which would not be open to the public.

No roll call vote, statement of the reason for the executive sessions, or other requirements of the law were addressed by the committee prior to the sessions.

Following the four-hour "twin" sessions, the committee remained deadlocked over finalists Dr. Percy Clark, Jr., an assistant superintendent of instruction for the Shaker Heights, Ohio, schools, and Dr. John Strand, superintendent of the Pelham, N.Y., schools.

Following the closed sessions, several members of the School Committee were asked if they thought the sessions were illegal under the Open Meeting Law. According to Mann, the law was not broken because the two divisions into four did not constitute a quorum.

In a letter to Mann, Droney warned, "Such a ploy cannot successfully avoid the application of the law."

Several committee members have said there was shuffling of members between the two meetings which Droney stressed constitutes "a constructive quorum of the committee."

"The fairly uncomplicated and apparent legislative intent behind the Open Meeting Law is to assure that the public have access to the decision-making functions of their elected representatives," Droney said.

"If the public was excluded from any part of the deliberations, which lead to the committee's selection of a new superintendent, then the (law) has been violated and the legal validity of that selection is in question," he warned.

The Open Meeting Law states that any violations may invalidate action taken.

"It was a good faith effort to break a deadlock," Mann said.

"I can see that there was a constructive quorum," she said. "I gather it's just as well (that the committee did not reach a decision that night)."

At Monday's meeting, a vote on the superintendent was reached in open session, but a short executive session was held earlier in the meeting related to contract negotiations over the lunch program.

Newton professor wins grant for cancer study

NEWTON - Newton resident Susumu Tonegawa, Ph.D., professor of Biology, Center for Cancer Research, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been awarded a $161,630 grant from the National Office of the American Cancer Society. The Cancer Society is currently investing more than $12 million in Massachusetts institutions for research.

Dr. Tonegawa will study how antibody diversity is accomplished. The genes for accomplishing this diversity are located in a certain chromosome region. This region will be studied in detail using clonging and recombinant DNA techniques, as well as DNA sequencing and restriction enzyme mapping. One important mechanism for achieving the great diversity of antibodies is believed to be the rearrangement of genes in cells.

One of the largest sources of cancer research funds in the United States, the Cancer Society awards $51 million to researchers each year--nearly a third of the Society's total budget.

City Hall wants you to know, and care, where your kids are

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — In an effort to better educate parents on the problems of teenage drinking, the Mayor's Crime Prevention Commission has given approval for a mass mailing of a letter which calls on area parents to act responsibly in the policing of teenage parties.

The letter will alert parents to the liabilities involved in having parties, particularly those where liquor is served. It will suggest that an adult be present and visable at such teenage gatherings and that parents be aware of guest lists so to avoid drifters.

The letter, which will be first forwarded to Mayor Theodore Mann for approval, is expected to be mailed within a month's time so it is in the hands of parents before the high school proms.

The mailing and concern of the commission coincides with a crackdown by police on the sale of alcohol to minors. This past week, the city Licensing Board handed down a pair of liquor license suspensions for the selling of alcohol to minors.

"We're trying to notify parents there is a drinking problem around," said Jay Moskow, chairman of the 20-member citizens' commission. The letter idea has been introduced in neighboring community schools and as recently as March 20, a letter was sent to parents of students at the Beaver Country Day School in Chestnut Hill.

"We're trying to educate the parents," said Moscow. "They really don't know where their kids are and that is part of the problem."

Moscow felt that if parents took more interest in where their children were going on a weekend night and asked appropriate questions before a teenager left the house, there would be less problems.

Susan Downey of the Alcohol Resource Center for Primary Prevention, a regional center serving 40 communities in the southwestern region of Massachusetts, spoke to the commission and stressed the importance of getting parent and child together to form party norms.

The main center of the alcohol prevention resource center is located in the basement of the Eliot Church at 474 Centre Street, Newton.

"We're trying to promote responsible decision making around drinking," noted Downey.

Downey introduced several innovative alcohol-prevention programs to the commission, including a contract that would be signed between child and parent guaranteeing that a child would call a parent when he was unable to drive home or procure a ride from a sober driver.

The contract would also guarantee that the parent — at any hour of the night — would pick up their child or arrange for a taxi without debate or a hassle.

Weston recently adopted a similar contract arrangement between parents and kids.

"In terms of each commmunity, it's (the contract option) only going to be enforced if the people go along with it," said Downey.

Downey said her group is urging the development of the contract program in all high schools across the state.

"If we can mobilize students, it is going to work. Without them we're no where," added Downey. The resource center this week introduced the idea of the contract to each of the city's three high schools and has recommended that each school form student-teacher committees to tackle the problem of teenage drinking at prom time.

'Old House Fair' slated for May 2 in City Hall

NEWTON - Twenty-five years ago they were white elephants in the housing market - big, old, turn-of-the-century houses along the tree-lined streets of Newton.

Known mostly for their drafts and deteriorating condition, these homes could hardly compete with the appeal of modern conveniences in new tract housing. Times have changed, though, and now these former "white elephants" are in great demand.

So in recognizing the growing need for high quality products and services, the Newton Historical Society will host several dozen local and regional companies which specialize in restoration work during the Old House Fair on Sunday, May 2 in the War Memorial Auditorium at Newton City Hall.

The Old House Fair will run from noon to 5 p.m. and admission is $2.50.

Historical Society members are urging old-house enthusiasts to "discover the many resources available for their restoration projects."

"Even basic home repair can be a frustrating experience for owners of old houses," according to Susan Basham, Old House Fair coordinator and the owner of a Victorian house in Newton Highlands.

"A missing piece of moulding, a broken lock, a cracked stained glass window - you can't expect to find replacements in the local hardware store," she said.

But, she added, old house owners can expect to find them at the fair along with many craftsmen and women and building trades experts who specialize in work on older structures. Both antique and reproduction replacement parts will be on display, and homeowners will be able to discuss their projects with suppliers of millwork, wood refinishing products and services, surface cleaning and light mixtures, to name a few.

Analysis of a house's age, style and visible alterations will be provided by architectural historians in "The Dating Booth." To use this service homeowners should bring photos of their old homes. Historians will also assist homeowners in tracing the development of neighborhoods and will illustrate proper research methods using historical records. As a special service for do-it-yourselfers, an Exchange Board will enable homeowners to locate or offer for sale leftover items from restoration projects.

Several workshops will be conducted during the fair, including one by architectural preservationist Maximilian Ferro, who will speak at 1 p.m. on "Irreversible damage: What not to do to an old house."

Architect Allen Charles Hill will assist homeowners in careful project planning during a 2:15 p.m. workshop. The fair will also feature films and slide presentations throughout the day, along with entertainment by Silver Fox, a vocal group specializing in turn-of-the-century music.

Until recently the Newton Historical Society was known as the Friends of the Jackson Homestead. Colin Diver, president, announced this month that approval had been received from the Massachusetts Secretary of State to change the name of the organization to the Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead.

"It is the society's goal," Diver said last week, "to preserve our rich heritage in Newton and to nurture this desire in young and old alike."

The Old House Fair, Diver said, is an important step toward realization of the Society's goal.

Curbs on sick leave abuses under study

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City officials and department heads are investigating measures to curb sick leave abuses and excessive absenteeism in departments which are sapping the city's pocketbook and productivity.

James Hickey, chief administrative aide for Mayor Theodore Mann, told aldermen Monday night the administration is currently wrestling with the "serious" problem. The key Mann aide, however, had no precise estimate on exactly how much the abuses are costing the city.

"It is very costly," Hickey said. "In certain departments, it is costly in terms of dollars. It is certainly true in the Fire Department."

In a meeting of the Public Safety Committee, Hickey said the absenteeism also "significantly impacts productivity and the ability to get the work done."

Hickey noted that some employees build up sick days and use them liberally as they get older. Hickey said employees "may or may not be sick." He said many municipal employees take the precise 15 days allowed.

Noting that sick days are not for personal time, Hickey said: "A lot of people lose sight of that and see the 15 days as a matter of right."

Hickey told aldermen that the Fire Department has showed a more "dramatic" increase in sick leave and absenteeism over the last 10 years than any other department. Hickey said the problem is comparable to that faced by both the Police and Public Works Department.

Hickey said the the Fire Department absenteeism rate per man has increased from .6 days for the one month reviewed in 1970 to 1.6 days for the same month in 1982.

"Absolutely, there is abuse," Hickey said, cautioning that not all municipal employees are misusing sick leave and personal days. "There are a heckuva lot of employees not abusing the system," he said.

Hickey and department heads are meeting Thursday to consider measures to combat absenteeism problems.

The city may consider drawing up a new sick leave policy, according to Hickey. The city currently allows municipal employees a total of 15 paid sick days including two personal days. Employees are also allowed to use sick days if someone in the family that is sick needs constant attention.

Other measures that are being considered and were mentioned are: a sick leave bank, liability insurance, and buyback provisions.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly, who has come under fire for spiraling overtime costs in the department, said he may consider issuing warning slips to firefighters who use more than the average number of sick days taken by employees.

"If they go beyond the average, I feel I have that right," he said, noting that simply because a firefighter is allowed 15 days "doesn't say he has to use them."

Alderman Richard McGrath said that the excessive absenteeism in the Fire Department may be due to a "morale problem." He said firefighters may be taking excessive days off as an "inentional protest."

Both Reilly and Hickey said that the problem has no easy answers or solutions. "I don't know the answers," said Reilly, promising, "We are going to look at it and look into it hard."

Hickey said that the 15 days are allowed under city contracts with employees as a result of collective bargaining, noting it may become a bargaining issue on new contracts.

'Working' house fire burns two hours

NEWTON — A working house fire at 1045 Beacon St. kept firefighters busy for over two hours Saturday afternoon.

According to fire records, a 911 call at 2:17 p.m. signaled Engines 3, 4, 6, 7, Ladder 1 and 2, and the Deputy Chief's car. It was declared a "working fire" at 2:29 p.m.

The last piece of fire apparatus returned to the station at 4:19 p.m.

Firefighters also handled three car fires Saturday.

At 10:23 a.m., Engine 4, Ladder 1 and the Deputy Chief spent over 20 minutes at a car fire at Warwick Road and Waltham Street. A box pulled for a car fire at Centre and Church Streets at 11:26 a.m. sent Engines 1, 4, 9, Ladder 1 and 3, and the Deputy Chief to the scene. The same combination of apparatus responded to another car fire signaled by a pulled box, at 241 Church St. That box was struck at 11:25 p.m.

Also Saturday evening, at 7:15 p.m., Engine 2 and Ladder 1 moved to Waltham's Moody Street Station to cover for a 2-alarm fire there. The mutual-aid assignment returned at 9:25 p.m.

On Friday at 10:02 a.m., Engine 9, Ladder 2 and the Deputy Chief's car responded to a truck fire at 199 Boylston St. Another truck fire, behind the police station on Washington Street, brought Engine 2, Ladder 1 and the Deputy Chief's car at 4:41 p.m.

Firefighters responded to 10 brush fires over the weekend.

Avoid the 'ploy'

"Such a ploy cannot successfully avoid the application of the law."

Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney said that in a letter to the Newton School Committee last week, relating to allegations by The Newton Graphic of a serious Open Meeting Law violation by the committee.

The Graphic's complaint to the district attorney came after the committee broke into two groups to meet in private at the April 15 public meeting after a stalemate over voting for a new superintendent. Monday night the committee voted to offer the job to a Pelham, N.Y. school administrator and at that time, Chairperson Nancy Mann said the committee had not intended to violate the law. But apparently it did bend the rules enough to raise Droney's interest.

The law, which every city official should know by heart, is really not that complex. As Droney said, "The fairly uncomplicated and apparent legislative intent behind (the law) is to assure that the public have access to the decision-making functions of their elected representatives."

Statements by Mann and other committee members indicate they knew enough about the law to know how to circumvent it. Mann said later the closed-door meetings were "a good faith" effort to break the deadlock in voting. We do not doubt the hard work involved in the selection process or the "good faith" but any vow by a School Committee member that such tactics will not be used again should, perhaps, be carved in stone.

Garden goodies

Sometimes, we confess, we simply forget how good we have it here in the Garden City.

Sure, we mark things on the calendar and always think about doing some things. But time does slip by and sometimes we just forget.

A look at the calendar this week, however, leaves no one an excuse for sitting around the shanty, moaning about how there's just nothing to do.

For one, you have the annual auto show, on May 1 at Weir's Cove in Auburndale. You can hop in your old jalopy and drive on over.

Then on May 2 you can get out of that drafty old house and go to the Old House Fair to learn how to fix it up. The fair, sponsored by the Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead, will be held in War Memorial Auditorium at City Hall.

Also on May 2, for those who have heard about the Newton Symphony Orchestra but always thought that sort of thing was "not your style," it's time to change your tune. The NSO presents its final concert of the current subscription season at Brown Junior High. Since it is Music Director and Conductor Michel Sasson's finale it should be a memorable performance.

Then, of course, you could nose around at the Hyde School PTA flea market this weekend or cruise over to the Countryside School's fair and haunted house in the Highlands.

And we could go on and on. Get out the calendar. There's no excuse for slipping into the summer slump this early in the season.

Garden City runners were there

As we wade through the mounds of paper from last week's coverage of the Boston Marathon we figured we had best hand out some laurel wreaths of our own and set the record straight.

Newton was well represented in the 86th running of the 26 mile, 385 yard event with Garden City resident Keith Brown coming in first among the locals with a time of 2:31. Close behind were Tom Doherty (2:35), Joe McCuster (2:39) and John Theriaut (2:40).

Mike Tempesta finished up with a time of 2:43 right alongside Robert Fitzgerald and Eric Brown crossed the line at the Pru with a time of 2:46. A little further back came Alderman Paul Daley (3:01), Ken Billings (3:56) and Socrates Sotir (3:59).

The best local finish by a woman was tallied by Susan Lupica of Newton Upper Falls who ran a 2:49 to finish in 22nd place while Newtonville's Sharon Barbano came in just behind her with a 2:50.

Congratulations to all for doing something most of us can only bring ourselves to watch - and cheer.

And for the fellow who called us, excited and out of breath, to tell us he spied Rosie Ruiz dashing up Heartbreak Hill last week we have a telephone message from the FBI. They want to talk to you. They said it's urgent.

Tax time's over, thanks again

Officials from the city's Department of Human Services said last week that 128 senior citizens - more than any year to date - received free tax preparation assistance prior to the April 15 deadline day.

Human Services Director Howard Lipton said help was offered at the Newtonville, Beethoven, and Newton Corner Senior Drop-in Centers.

The program is operated in cooperation with the Volunteers Income Tax Assistance (VITA) Program sponsored by the IRS.

"Senior citizens appreciate the help, not only with preparing the forms but also in determining what legitimate deductions are applicable on their returns," Lipton noted afterward. "The volunteers helped many seniors find deductions that might have otherwise been overlooked."

We've always had some trouble with Graphically speaking's deductions and hope the IRS chooses to overlook a few of those.

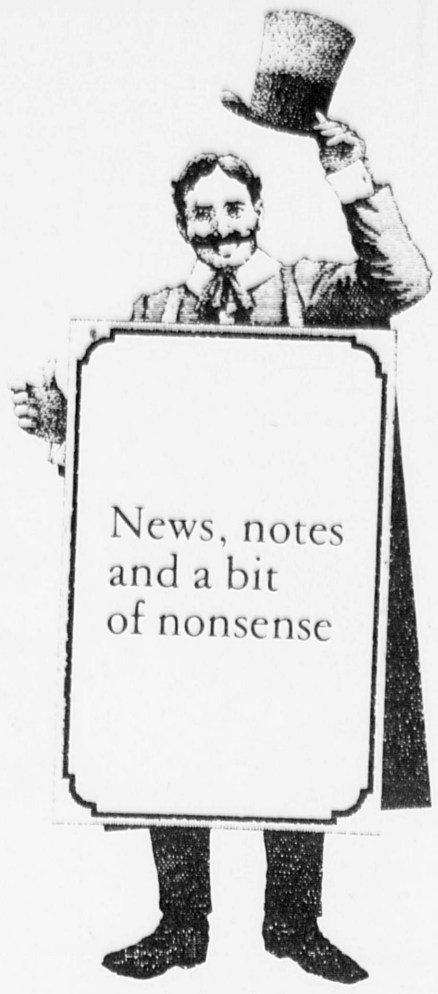
Good thing they have trucks

Just a day before Alberto Salazar captured the Boston Marathon last week about 200 runners raced down Watertown Street to benefit the Newton Boys' Club. The 4th annual five-mile road race, sponsored by The Place in Nonantum, took place on Sunday, so the big guns could have the day off to watch Monday's event through Newton.

Five Newton firefighters were among the runners, including Kevin Hugh, Kevin McArdle, Richard Williams, Brian McCabe and Joseph Silver.

Guess those guys are just keeping in shape in case the truck has a flat on the way to a fire.

Just kidding, guys.



Andover-Newton honors

Dr. Jane Cary Peck, assistant professor in the department of Religion and Society at Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Centre is the only North American of an eight-member team being sent by the World Council of Churches to a Pre-Assembly Visitation to Churches of Cuba this month. The trip is in preparation for the Sixth Assembly of the World Council, slated to be held in Canada in 1983.

Yet another from the Garden City extends a hand across the border.

Church members take a walk

Five local church congregations and two schools in Newton are pitching in to help raise funds for "Project Bread," aimed at helping support 47 projects for the needy in Boston and overseas.

Folks from Union Church, First Baptist, Sacred Heart, Holy Trinity Armenian Church and the Second Church in West Newton are joining students from Aquinas Junior College and Newton Catholic Elementary in the 13th annual Greater Boston Walk for Hunger on Sunday, May 2.

Anyone interested can call 523-6778 for information.

Making book; making smiles

Want to make someone smile? And we mean really smile?

Well if you have access to a car and a few free hours each week you can do it.

Our friends at the Newton Free Library noted last week that for some housebound Newton residents, getting down to the local library branch isn't as easy as it might be for most of us.

So the library's Outreach Program offers book selection and free delivery to all Newton residents who are either temporarily or permanently housebound.

If you can help call Anna Hartough, social services librarian, at 552-7145. Give it a shot.

Echo finally heard in Upper Falls

We received a tip that the long-awaited dedication of the famed Echo Bridge as ranking on the prestigious National Register of Historic Places will take place on June 12 in the early afternoon.

Details are as yet incomplete but the bronze plaque to mark the historic landmark has arrived and Upper Falls residents, along with city officials, are planning quite an affair to mark the occasion.

Watch this space, as they say.

Watch out fer the revenoors

A word from the office of state Department of Revenue Commissioner Joyce Hampers. Seems some people are going around to businesses claiming to be revenue auditors. One restaurant owner, Hampers said in a press release, divulged his private business to a man who turned out to be a phony seeking inside information. That incident, we might note, was not in Newton.

Revenue Department employees have identification cards with their pictures on them so you can be certain. If you have a question about it all call the audit office at 727-4385.

And we thought you could always spot the auditor knocking at the door after April 15.

Crazy cutline creating contest

We leave you with what has to be the most unusual photo caption we have yet received in The Graphic office this year.

The photo, which we shall not identify since we altered the caption so it was more our style, bore a rather humorous bit of information on the back.

The caption writer had identified people in the photo, noting one person in the shot "thinks she looks as if a chicken just ran through her hair."

The caption writer also said of the picture that "it beats last year's shot which her mother-in-law thought made her look 95 years of age."

And finally our community caption curmudgeon said one person in the photo was "practicing a famous chin-tucking-down exercise known to benefit those telling neck muscles that finally defeat us all if we don't watch out."

Since we don't want to give a bad impression of the folks in any photos used in The Graphic this week or next we'll only say the photo which accompanied all this colorful caption material will be printed sometime in the next five years.

At least that's what our libel lawyer (who also practices the famous chin-tucking-down exercises himself) told us to say.

Cohen disagrees with editorial

To the editor;

I read with interest your recent editorial about the legislation I had filed to curb acts of violence motivated by racial or religous bigotry.

Your editorial concludes that, since such acts of violence are illegal under general vandalism and assault statutes already on the books, the proposed law is unnecessary and my efforts misguided. Regretably, I must disagree with your conclusion. There are at least three compelling reasons why the passage of this legislation is of critical importance.

First, there is a significant difference between acts of violence motivated by racial or religious hatred and most other forms of vandalism and acts of physical violence. While all such acts are to be condemmed because they deprive their victims of the most fundamental of civil rights, the right to live in peace and safety, violence brought about as a result or racial or religious bigotry contains an added dimension. The intolerance which underlies it is a threat to one of the most cherished ideals we have; that of living in a free, open, and pluralistic society in which the differences among us are accepted and nurtured rather than despised and attacked. As such these acts are a threat to all men and women of goodwill.

The distinction between anti-social acts spawned of bigotry and other forms of anti-social behavior is one which too few appreciate.. It is a distinction which ought to be embodied in our laws, and it is a distinction the need for which is, ironically underscored by your editorial.

Second, people are reluctant to label acts of racial, ethnic, or religious bigotry for what they are. It is often easier to write them off as "isolated incidents". This tendency while not to be excused is perhaps understandable because such overt expressions of prejudice are an anathma to the values and ideals which so many hold dear. In this regard passage of the act serves a very important purpose. It will send a clear message to both law enforcement officials and community leaders that the growing problem of religious, ethnic and racial violence is both real and serious. And as distasteful as it might be, the problem must be faced and dealt with squarely as such.

I think that your editorial recognizes the importance of facing this problem. You wrote "The solution may be in educating those who deal out justice..." I agree and I can think of no more dramatic way of educating law enforcement officials as to the seriousness of the problem than by an act of the Legislature providing specific sanctions for such violence.

Third, the bill does provide significant new remedies for those who are the victims of such violence. They are allowed to recover in a civil suit punitive damages, legal fees and damages for emotional harm. Unfortunately the wheels of criminal justice grind slowly and all too often the victims are forgotten. This bill will insure that victims of violent acts of bigotry are not passed over by the system.

Finally, the bill has received widespread support. The NAACP, The Urban League, The Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition, The Mass. Catholic Conference, The Boston Archdiocese and The Anti-Defamation League have all endorsed the bill. They all consider the problem to be real and consider the bill to be a valid response to that problem. I hope that the Graphic will re-examine its position and lend its voice to the chorus of support which the proposal presently enjoys.

Taxpayers' Assoc. cites revaluation

To the editor;

We have received many indications that the current Finnegan revaluation of Newton property has resulted in an unacceptable number of errors.

Included are assessments that considerably exceed or fall short of the price at which the property was recently or is likely to be sold; assessments that substantially exceed or fall short of those of the most directly comparable houses; and assessments that exceed those of apprently more valuable properties.

There are ample numbers of errors of fact, inconsistencies and apparent errors in the application of appreciation or inflation factors.

We feel that all those errors must be straightened out quickly and satisfactorily - and all assessments corrected without further property owner input of time, effort or expense. Unless and until that is done, responsible city officials, the community in general and the affected citizens in particular should continue to seriously contest the whole revaluation.

We applaud the convening of ad hoc grassroots organizations which seek prudent action and wide support on this issue including those knowledgeable in law, real estate, computer systems, statistics and mathematics. Up to now, the Newton Taxpayers' Association has worked quietly to promote better methods, accuracy, timeliness and fairness.

If prompt effective corrective action is not taken or not sufficient, we will support appropriate citizen or legal corrective action.

'Open door' tact draws criticism

To the editor;

Alas, public officials have once again refused to fully disclose information critical to the conduct of public affairs. A familiar scenario? A public disgrace. Where is this rhetorical "open door policy" of the Executive Department referred to repetitiously over the years and at a recent press conference?

The Board of Aldermen, as a legislative body, along with the mayor, city solicitor, other city officials and Mr. Barshak are named defendants and were enjoined from taking any action with respect to the distribution and disbursement of a $10,000 appropriation or any other sum to be paid to Barshak. It is my understanding that the intent of the injunction is to cover all acts with respect to the attorney's fees.

Now, while we have been asked to accept and expect reductions in workforce in the Fiscal Year 83 budget (because of a "stringent course of cost containment") property taxes, uses user fees, sewer charges, increased parking fees, etc. etc. we are confronted with an additional $15,000 budget request for "anticipated expendicutre for Barshak legal fees in case of Ossinger v. Mann." The reason given - "I think it's good fiscal planning. When you anticipate something that is an expenditure, you put it in." Why is it most always in the Executive Department's self-serving interests?

This flies in the face of the court order surely violating the spirit of the injunction and the party stipulations continuing the injunction until the taxpayers' suit could be resolved in Superior Court.

The suit is by no means resolved and the taxpayers are being fought tooth and nail by the city which is using every devious chicanery in the book.

In my opinion this exemplifies a paradoxical outrageous and obtrusive defiance of the citizens best interest and of a judicial order by a member of the legal profession and the chief executive. Open door policy indeed.

My congratulations to the aldermen criticized by the mayor and to the few others he failed to mention in his press concerence. They are not the rubber stampers he desires them to be and courageously look after the citizens' best interest.

Famed pianist

Gary Graffman will be the featured artist at the last subscription concert of the Newton Symphony Orchestra's current season on Sunday, May 2 starting at 8 p.m. in Brown Junior High. Graffman will perform the Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, under the baton of Maestro Michel Sasson.

NSO will feature Graffman at piano

NEWTON — World renowned pianist Gary Graffman will be the featured artist at the last subscription concert of the Newton Symphony Orchestra's 1981-1982 season, Sunday evening, May 2, 8 p.m. at Brown Junior High (formerly Meadowbrook). Graffman will perform the Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, under the baton of Maestro Michel Sasson.

As the NSO's Celebrated Artist this season, Graffman will also give a Master Piano Class at the All Newton Music School, Chestnut Street, on Saturday morning, May 1, 9:30-noon, which is open to the public. There is a small admission charge at the door. Participants in the Master Class have been chosen by audition from gifted students in Eastern Massachusetts, in the fourth annual Celebrated Artist Master Class Program sponsored by the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

Hailed by Newsweek as "one of the great living pianists," Gary Graffman has been one of the most popular and peripatetic performers on the international concert circuit for over three decades. Ever since his debut at the age of 18 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, he has circled the globe almost nonstop, playing the most demanding works in the piano literature. His recordings of concertos by Tchaikovsky, Rachmanionoff, Prokofieff, Brahms, Chopin and Beethoven with the Orchestras of New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and Boston have been acclaimed as definitive, and his most recent album, featuring Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue with Zubin Mahta and the New York Philharmonic became the best-selling disk ever made by that venerable orchestra.

In 1979, Graffman's career was interrupted by an overstretched ligament affecting the fourth and fifth fingers of his right hand. While the process of rehabilitation is nearly complete, Graffman has limited his concertizing to the few, but brilliant piano concertos written for left hand alone (most of them commissioned early in the century by Paul Wittgenstein, who lost his right arm in WW I).

Graffman is an active teacher, commuting from Manhattan's School of Music to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and the Music Academy of the West at Santa Barbara, California. He has returned to school himself, to pursue his lifelong interest in Oriental studies, and to the delight of the reading public, he has written a widely acclaimed book, I Really Should Be Practicing.

Graffman was born in New York of Russian parents, and first climbed to the piano bench at the age of three. His affinity for the piano soon became evident, and at seven he won a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music for study with the renowned Isabelle Vengerova.

After graduation from Curtis, he studied intensively for several years with Vladimir Horowitz, and in the summers at the Marlboro Music Festival with Rudolf Serkin. In 1949 Graffman won the prestigious Leventritt Award and made his debut with the leading American orchestras.

For further information and ticket reservations for Graffman's concert with the Newton Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, May 2 at 8 p.m., call 965-2555.

HOW TO DO IT

To recycle your glass and cans simply place your clear glass and cans or colored glass (green and brown mixed) and cans at curbside on the appropriate day in a sturdy plastic or metal container. The container should be marked with a wide white horizontal stripe.

It is not necessary to remove labels or rings from glass or to remove lables and flatten cans.

Aldermen call for nuke freeze

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With citizens from across the country joining hands against the nuclear arms race, the Board of Aldermen last week reaffirmed its commitment to the worldwide anti-nuclear movement.

The 24-member legislative body voted unanimously — without debate — to declare June 12, as 'Rally at the U.N. Day' urging city residents to join in a mass Rally for Disarmament in New York City.

The aldermanic message coincides with Ground Zero Week, the nationwide movement which is spreading its anti-nuclear message by explaining the potential horrors and devastation of nuclear war throughout the United States last week.

In a separate resolution, aldermen called on Congress to "defeat any attempt at further military aid to the government of El Salvador," and asked President Ronald Reagan to begin the process of political dialogue within that ravaged country to stop the senseless killing and "prepare for the negotiations needed to reconcile and build the Central American nation."

In June, the Board of Aldermen formally denounced the growing nuclear arms race — an action which has since been followed by states, cities, and towns across the country. The first anti-nuclear resolution, which called for a worldwide freeze on the proliferation of nuclear arms, was approved by Newton voters by a 3 to 1 margin on Nov. 3.

The resolution Tuesday evening, which was introduced by Alderman Ethel Sheehan, calls for the heads of state of all governments to attend the United Nations Second Special Session on Disarmament from June 7 to 9 to work toward a "mutual, verifiable arms reductions."

Avoid the 'ploy'

"Such a ploy cannot successfully avoid the application of the law."

Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney said that in a letter to the Newton School Committee last week, relating to allegations by The Newton Graphic of a serious Open Meeting Law violation by the committee.

The Graphic's complaint to the district attorney came after the committee broke into two groups to meet in private at the April 15 public meeting after a stalemate over voting for a new superintendent. Monday night the committee voted to offer the job to a Pelham, N.Y. school administrator and at that time, Chairperson Nancy Mann said the committee had not intended to violate the law. But apparently it did bend the rules enough to raise Droney's interest.

The law, which every city official should know by heart, is really not that complex. As Droney said, "The fairly uncomplicated and apparent legislative intent behind (the law) is to assure that the public have access to the decision-making functions of their elected representatives."

Statements by Mann and other committee members indicate they knew enough about the law to know how to circumvent it. Mann said later the closed-door meetings were "a good faith" effort to break the deadlock in voting. We do not doubt the hard work involved in the selection process or the "good faith" but any vow by a School Committee member that such tactics will not be used again should, perhaps, be carved in stone.

Garden goodies

Sometimes, we confess, we simply forget how good we have it here in the Garden City.

Sure, we mark things on the calendar and always think about doing some things. But time does slip by and sometimes we just forget.

A look at the calendar this week, however, leaves no one an excuse for sitting around the shanty, moaning about how there's just nothing to do.

For one, you have the annual auto show, on May 1 at Weir's Cove in Auburndale. You can hop in your old jalopy and drive on over.

Then on May 2 you can get out of that drafty old house and go to the Old House Fair to learn how to fix it up. The fair, sponsored by the Newton Historical Society at the Jackson Homestead, will be held in War Memorial Auditorium at City Hall.

Also on May 2, for those who have heard about the Newton Symphony Orchestra but always thought that sort of thing was "not your style," it's time to change your tune. The NSO presents its final concert of the current subscription season at Brown Junior High. Since it is Music Director and Conductor Michel Sasson's finale it should be a memorable performance.

Then, of course, you could nose around at the Hyde School PTA flea market this weekend or cruise over to the Countryside School's fair and haunted house in the Highlands.

And we could go on and on. Get out the calendar. There's no excuse for slipping into the summer slump this early in the season.

Garden City runners were there

As we wade through the mounds of paper from last week's coverage of the Boston Marathon we figured we had best hand out some laurel wreaths of our own and set the record straight.

Newton was well represented in the 86th running of the 26 mile, 385 yard event with Garden City resident Keith Brown coming in first among the locals with a time of 2:31. Close behind were Tom Doherty (2:35), Joe McCuster (2:39) and John Theriaut (2:40).

Mike Tempesta finished up with a time of 2:43 right alongside Robert Fitzgerald and Eric Brown crossed the line at the Pru with a time of 2:46. A little further back came Alderman Paul Daley (3:01), Ken Billings (3:56) and Socrates Sotir (3:59).

The best local finish by a woman was tallied by Susan Lupica of Newton Upper Falls who ran a 2:49 to finish in 22nd place while Newtonville's Sharon Barbano came in just behind her with a 2:50.

Congratulations to all for doing something most of us can only bring ourselves to watch - and cheer.

And for the fellow who called us, excited and out of breath, to tell us he spied Rosie Ruiz dashing up Heartbreak Hill last week we have a telephone message from the FBI. They want to talk to you. They said it's urgent.

Tax time's over, thanks again

Officials from the city's Department of Human Services said last week that 128 senior citizens - more than any year to date - received free tax preparation assistance prior to the April 15 deadline day.

Human Services Director Howard Lipton said help was offered at the Newtonville, Beethoven, and Newton Corner Senior Drop-in Centers.

The program is operated in cooperation with the Volunteers Income Tax Assistance (VITA) Program sponsored by the IRS.

"Senior citizens appreciate the help, not only with preparing the forms but also in determining what legitimate deductions are applicable on their returns," Lipton noted afterward. "The volunteers helped many seniors find deductions that might have otherwise been overlooked."

We've always had some trouble with Graphically speaking's deductions and hope the IRS chooses to overlook a few of those.

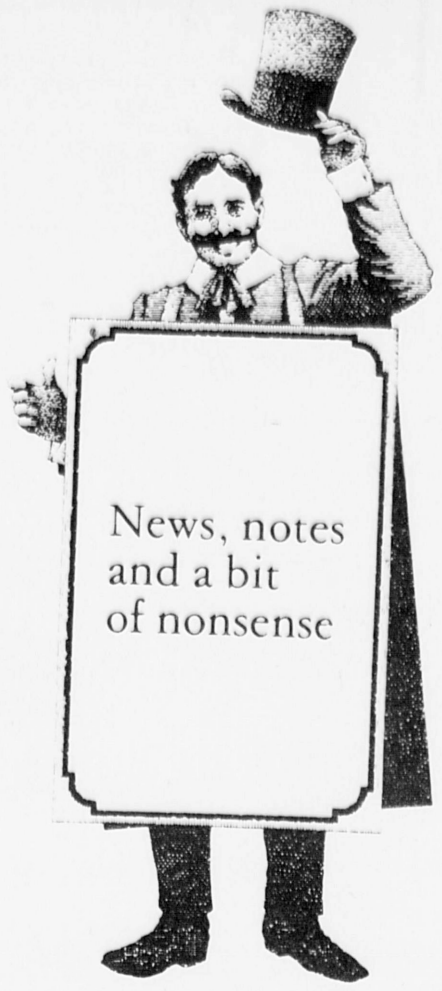
Good thing they have trucks

Just a day before Alberto Salazar captured the Boston Marathon last week about 200 runners raced down Watertown Street to benefit the Newton Boys' Club. The 4th annual five-mile road race, sponsored by The Place in Nonantum, took place on Sunday, so the big guns could have the day off to watch Monday's event through Newton.

Five Newton firefighters were among the runners, including Kevin Hugh, Kevin McArdle, Richard Williams, Brian McCabe and Joseph Silver.

Guess those guys are just keeping in shape in case the truck has a flat on the way to a fire.

Just kidding, guys.



Andover-Newton honors

Dr. Jane Cary Peck, assistant professor in the department of Religion and Society at Andover Newton Theological School in Newton Centre is the only North American of an eight-member team being sent by the World Council of Churches to a Pre-Assembly Visitation to Churches of Cuba this month. The trip is in preparation for the Sixth Assembly of the World Council, slated to be held in Canada in 1983.

Yet another from the Garden City extends a hand across the border.

Church members take a walk

Five local church congregations and two schools in Newton are pitching in to help raise funds for "Project Bread," aimed at helping support 47 projects for the needy in Boston and overseas.

Folks from Union Church, First Baptist, Sacred Heart, Holy Trinity Armenian Church and the Second Church in West Newton are joining students from Aquinas Junior College and Newton Catholic Elementary in the 13th annual Greater Boston Walk for Hunger on Sunday, May 2.

Anyone interested can call 523-6778 for information.

Making book; making smiles

Want to make someone smile? And we mean really smile?

Well if you have access to a car and a few free hours each week you can do it.

Our friends at the Newton Free Library noted last week that for some housebound Newton residents, getting down to the local library branch isn't as easy as it might be for most of us.

So the library's Outreach Program offers book selection and free delivery to all Newton residents who are either temporarily or permanently housebound.

If you can help call Anna Hartough, social services librarian, at 552-7145. Give it a shot.

Echo finally heard in Upper Falls

We received a tip that the long-awaited dedication of the famed Echo Bridge as ranking on the prestigious National Register of Historic Places will take place on June 12 in the early afternoon.

Details are as yet incomplete but the bronze plaque to mark the historic landmark has arrived and Upper Falls residents, along with city officials, are planning quite an affair to mark the occasion.

Watch this space, as they say.

Watch out fer the revenoors

A word from the office of state Department of Revenue Commissioner Joyce Hampers. Seems some people are going around to businesses claiming to be revenue auditors. One restaurant owner, Hampers said in a press release, divulged his private business to a man who turned out to be a phony seeking inside information. That incident, we might note, was not in Newton.

Revenue Department employees have identification cards with their pictures on them so you can be certain. If you have a question about it all call the audit office at 727-4385.

And we thought you could always spot the auditor knocking at the door after April 15.

Crazy cutline creating contest

We leave you with what has to be the most unusual photo caption we have yet received in The Graphic office this year.

The photo, which we shall not identify since we altered the caption so it was more our style, bore a rather humorous bit of information on the back.

The caption writer had identified people in the photo, noting one person in the shot "thinks she looks as if a chicken just ran through her hair."

The caption writer also said of the picture that "it beats last year's shot which her mother-in-law thought made her look 95 years of age."

And finally our community caption curmudgeon said one person in the photo was "practicing a famous chin-tucking-down exercise known to benefit those telling neck muscles that finally defeat us all if we don't watch out."

Since we don't want to give a bad impression of the folks in any photos used in The Graphic this week or next we'll only say the photo which accompanied all this colorful caption material will be printed sometime in the next five years.

At least that's what our libel lawyer (who also practices the famous chin-tucking-down exercises himself) told us to say.

Cohen disagrees with editorial

To the editor;

I read with interest your recent editorial about the legislation I had filed to curb acts of violence motivated by racial or religous bigotry.

Your editorial concludes that, since such acts of violence are illegal under general vandalism and assault statutes already on the books, the proposed law is unnecessary and my efforts misguided. Regretably, I must disagree with your conclusion. There are at least three compelling reasons why the passage of this legislation is of critical importance.

First, there is a significant difference between acts of violence motivated by racial or religious hatred and most other forms of vandalism and acts of physical violence. While all such acts are to be condemmed because they deprive their victims of the most fundamental of civil rights, the right to live in peace and safety, violence brought about as a result or racial or religious bigotry contains an added dimension. The intolerance which underlies it is a threat to one of the most cherished ideals we have; that of living in a free, open, and pluralistic society in which the differences among us are accepted and nurtured rather than despised and attacked. As such these acts are a threat to all men and women of goodwill.

The distinction between anti-social acts spawned of bigotry and other forms of anti-social behavior is one which too few appreciate.. It is a distinction which ought to be embodied in our laws, and it is a distinction the need for which is, ironically underscored by your editorial.

Second, people are reluctant to label acts of racial, ethnic, or religious bigotry for what they are. It is often easier to write them off as "isolated incidents". This tendency while not to be excused is perhaps understandable because such overt expressions of prejudice are an anathma to the values and ideals which so many hold dear. In this regard passage of the act serves a very important purpose. It will send a clear message to both law enforcement officials and community leaders that the growing problem of religious, ethnic and racial violence is both real and serious. And as distasteful as it might be, the problem must be faced and dealt with squarely as such.

I think that your editorial recognizes the importance of facing this problem. You wrote "The solution may be in educating those who deal out justice..." I agree and I can think of no more dramatic way of educating law enforcement officials as to the seriousness of the problem than by an act of the Legislature providing specific sanctions for such violence.

Third, the bill does provide significant new remedies for those who are the victims of such violence. They are allowed to recover in a civil suit punitive damages, legal fees and damages for emotional harm. Unfortunately the wheels of criminal justice grind slowly and all too often the victims are forgotten. This bill will insure that victims of violent acts of bigotry are not passed over by the system.

Finally, the bill has received widespread support. The NAACP, The Urban League, The Greater Boston Civil Rights Coalition, The Mass. Catholic Conference, The Boston Archdiocese and The Anti-Defamation League have all endorsed the bill. They all consider the problem to be real and consider the bill to be a valid response to that problem. I hope that the Graphic will re-examine its position and lend its voice to the chorus of support which the proposal presently enjoys.

Taxpayers' Assoc. cites revaluation

To the editor;

We have received many indications that the current Finnegan revaluation of Newton property has resulted in an unacceptable number of errors.

Included are assessments that considerably exceed or fall short of the price at which the property was recently or is likely to be sold; assessments that substantially exceed or fall short of those of the most directly comparable houses; and assessments that exceed those of apprently more valuable properties.

There are ample numbers of errors of fact, inconsistencies and apparent errors in the application of appreciation or inflation factors.

We feel that all those errors must be straightened out quickly and satisfactorily - and all assessments corrected without further property owner input of time, effort or expense. Unless and until that is done, responsible city officials, the community in general and the affected citizens in particular should continue to seriously contest the whole revaluation.

We applaud the convening of ad hoc grassroots organizations which seek prudent action and wide support on this issue including those knowledgeable in law, real estate, computer systems, statistics and mathematics. Up to now, the Newton Taxpayers' Association has worked quietly to promote better methods, accuracy, timeliness and fairness.

If prompt effective corrective action is not taken or not sufficient, we will support appropriate citizen or legal corrective action.

Executive Director
Newton Taxpayers' Association

'Open door' tact draws criticism

To the editor;

Alas, public officials have once again refused to fully disclose information critical to the conduct of public affairs. A familiar scenario? A public disgrace. Where is this rhetorical "open door policy" of the Executive Department referred to repetitiously over the years and at a recent press conference?

The Board of Aldermen, as a legislative body, along with the mayor, city solicitor, other city officials and Mr. Barshak are named defendants and were enjoined from taking any action with respect to the distribution and disbursement of a $10,000 appropriation or any other sum to be paid to Barshak. It is my understanding that the intent of the injunction is to cover all acts with respect to the attorney's fees.

Now, while we have been asked to accept and expect reductions in workforce in the Fiscal Year 83 budget (because of a "stringent course of cost containment") property taxes, uses user fees, sewer charges, increased parking fees, etc. etc. we are confronted with an additional $15,000 budget request for "anticipated expendicutre for Barshak legal fees in case of Ossinger v. Mann." The reason given - "I think it's good fiscal planning. When you anticipate something that is an expenditure, you put it in." Why is it most always in the Executive Department's self-serving interests?

This flies in the face of the court order surely violating the spirit of the injunction and the party stipulations continuing the injunction until the taxpayers' suit could be resolved in Superior Court.

The suit is by no means resolved and the taxpayers are being fought tooth and nail by the city which is using every devious chicanery in the book.

In my opinion this exemplifies a paradoxical outrageous and obtrusive defiance of the citizens best interest and of a judicial order by a member of the legal profession and the chief executive. Open door policy indeed.

My congratulations to the aldermen criticized by the mayor and to the few others he failed to mention in his press concerence. They are not the rubber stampers he desires them to be and courageously look after the citizens' best interest.

Famed pianist

Gary Graffman will be the featured artist at the last subscription concert of the Newton Symphony Orchestra's current season on Sunday, May 2 starting at 8 p.m. in Brown Junior High. Graffman will perform the Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, under the baton of Maestro Michel Sasson.

NSO will feature Graffman at piano

NEWTON — World renowned pianist Gary Graffman will be the featured artist at the last subscription concert of the Newton Symphony Orchestra's 1981-1982 season, Sunday evening, May 2, 8 p.m. at Brown Junior High (formerly Meadowbrook). Graffman will perform the Ravel Piano Concerto for the Left Hand, under the baton of Maestro Michel Sasson.

As the NSO's Celebrated Artist this season, Graffman will also give a Master Piano Class at the All Newton Music School, Chestnut Street, on Saturday morning, May 1, 9:30-noon, which is open to the public. There is a small admission charge at the door. Participants in the Master Class have been chosen by audition from gifted students in Eastern Massachusetts, in the fourth annual Celebrated Artist Master Class Program sponsored by the Newton Symphony Orchestra.

Hailed by Newsweek as "one of the great living pianists," Gary Graffman has been one of the most popular and peripatetic performers on the international concert circuit for over three decades. Ever since his debut at the age of 18 with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra, he has circled the globe almost nonstop, playing the most demanding works in the piano literature. His recordings of concertos by Tchaikovsky, Rachmanionoff, Prokofieff, Brahms, Chopin and Beethoven with the Orchestras of New York, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Chicago and Boston have been acclaimed as definitive, and his most recent album, featuring Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue with Zubin Mahta and the New York Philharmonic became the best-selling disk ever made by that venerable orchestra.

In 1979, Graffman's career was interrupted by an overstretched ligament affecting the fourth and fifth fingers of his right hand. While the process of rehabilitation is nearly complete, Graffman has limited his concertizing to the few, but brilliant piano concertos written for left hand alone (most of them commissioned early in the century by Paul Wittgenstein, who lost his right arm in WW I).

Graffman is an active teacher, commuting from Manhattan's School of Music to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and the Music Academy of the West at Santa Barbara, California. He has returned to school himself, to pursue his lifelong interest in Oriental studies, and to the delight of the reading public, he has written a widely acclaimed book, I Really Should Be Practicing.

Graffman was born in New York of Russian parents, and first climbed to the piano bench at the age of three. His affinity for the piano soon became evident, and at seven he won a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music for study with the renowned Isabelle Vengerova.

After graduation from Curtis, he studied intensively for several years with Vladimir Horowitz, and in the summers at the Marlboro Music Festival with Rudolf Serkin. In 1949 Graffman won the prestigious Leventritt Award and made his debut with the leading American orchestras.

For further information and ticket reservations for Graffman's concert with the Newton Symphony Orchestra on Sunday, May 2 at 8 p.m., call 965-2555.

Aldermen call for nuke freeze

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — With citizens from across the country joining hands against the nuclear arms race, the Board of Aldermen last week reaffirmed its commitment to the worldwide anti-nuclear movement.

The 24-member legislative body voted unanimously — without debate — to declare June 12, as 'Rally at the U.N. Day' urging city residents to join in a mass Rally for Disarmament in New York City.

The aldermanic message coincides with Ground Zero Week, the nationwide movement which is spreading its anti-nuclear message by explaining the potential horrors and devastation of nuclear war throughout the United States last week.

In a separate resolution, aldermen called on Congress to "defeat any attempt at further military aid to the government of El Salvador," and asked President Ronald Reagan to begin the process of political dialogue within that ravaged country to stop the senseless killing and "prepare for the negotiations needed to reconcile and build the Central American nation."

In June, the Board of Aldermen formally denounced the growing nuclear arms race — an action which has since been followed by states, cities, and towns across the country. The first anti-nuclear resolution, which called for a worldwide freeze on the proliferation of nuclear arms, was approved by Newton voters by a 3 to 1 margin on Nov. 3.

The resolution Tuesday evening, which was introduced by Alderman Ethel Sheehan, calls for the heads of state of all governments to attend the United Nations Second Special Session on Disarmament from June 7 to 9 to work toward a "mutual, verifiable arms reductions."

City loses state aid under new formula

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city will be one of 16 Massachusetts communities losing state aid under a local aid distribution formula unveiled last Friday by a coalition of state legislators and officials from Gov. Edward J. King's office.

Under the proposal, which has received plaudits from both Beacon Hill and King, Newton will receive $71,000 less than it did in state aid a year ago.

The city's three-member House delegation expressed unanimous objection to the formula, but noted that a lobbying effort to get what they felt was fair for Newton would be difficult in the face of such support for the aid plan in the legislature.

"There is not going to be too much sympathy on the Hill for Newton," said State Rep. Joseph DeNucci Sunday.

State Rep. David Cohen agreed with his fellow lawmaker. "I think anytime the House and the Senate leadership in conjunction with the governor's office agree on something, a change from an adversary's standpoint is going to be difficult," he said.

The new local aid formula will ensure that each of the 351 communities in Massachusetts will receive at least 49 percent of its local revenue losses in the first two years of Proposition 2½. Under the formula, no community will recive more than 150 percent of its losses.

The plan, which was introduced 17 days after King's local aid proposal, offers new state financial assistance to cities and towns amounting to $154.5 million, about $30 million more in direct aid than the governor had originally proposed.

"I'm sure there will be quite a bit of lobbying," said State Rep. Susan Schur Sunday. "We'll be talking to the other communities (those 16 that are slated to lose revenue under the local aid plan) and hoping to work together to at least get us into a hold-harmless position."

Under hold-harmlesss, no community would receive less local aid than it did under the previous year. Newton received $12.6 million in local aid a year ago.

Cohen noted he would be "happier" with a hold-harmless clause, but felt a break-even proposition for Newton was inadequate.

DeNucci did not think a hold-harmless provision was the answer because the clause would allow those communities that received more than their share a year ago (to offset first-year Proposition 2½ loses) in local aid to receive at least the same amount.

"The city of Newton, as every city in the Commonwealth, has a right to share in the additional $150 million being put into local aid," Cohen said.

Cohen noted that the residential property taxpayer in Newton is facing an additional $3.5 million tax burden this year because of revaluation and that this tax shift needs to be addressed by the legislature.

Schur said if the state legislature decides to implement hold-harmless, there would have to be a re-distribution of $700,000 — the amount to be lost by the 16 communities that will be receiving less aid.

According to City Budget Director David Wilkinson, under King's formula the city would have received about $900,000 less in local aid from what it had received last year.

PTA Round Table on reporting to parents is Thursday, May 6

NEWTON CORNER - The city Round Table on Education, a committee of the citywide PTA Council, will discuss the topic "Reporting to parents" in a meeting at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 6 in the Bigelow Junior High School Library.

The parent group will present a critical review of the process of reporting in the Newton Public Schools. Among the issues to be addressed are diversity of report forms; availability of test scores; the question of whether a child should be graded against his or herself or against the group; and the possibility of improving the reporting system.

Those attending will be split into two groups with both a general presentation planned and comparison of current reporting practices at the elementary and secondary level.

The division into two groups is planned to address particular concerns of the two education levels. Some principals and teachers will be available during the discussions.

All staff and parents are encouraged to attend. For more information call 965-0678.

Disability claims in city positions but the board's decision was overturned by the three-member state Contributory Retirement Appeal Board.

The remaining nine pensions granted by the board since January 1981, bringing the total number of disability pensions to 88, were heart or hypertension disabilities required under state law for seven firefighters and two police officers. Marino estimated that 50 of the disability pensions were heart related.

The board, regulated by state law, is made up of an elected employees' representative (Raymond Thibault), an accounting officer (Marino), and a third member (Ernest Angevine) appointed by the other two members.

In the case of Scalzi, the board's physician, Dr. Herbert Cares of Newton, claimed the disability was not permanent and that the injury was not a result of the claimed accident.

A physician appointed by the state and Scalzi's physician, however, both disputed the board physician's claims.

In his report to the board, Cares wrote: "It is my impression that this man has no objective findings. However, because he insists that he has the pain, I do not think that he could be considered able to work as a policeman. I do not think what he has now could in any way be related to an old back injury that occurred seven years ago and I therefore do not find any objective evidence upon which to conclude that his disability is due to any work related injury, or that, as a matter of fact, his injury is due to any disability at all."

He added: "A low back strain such as this should in no way be permanent as he is a healthy 36-year-old man."

In a one-page letter, Scalzi's physician, Dr. Diane English of Brighton, said the officer had "low back, buttock and pain down the whole left leg...Prognosis is poor."

The appointed state physician, Dr. Paul Chervin, agreed. He maintained that without "hesitation" the patient is unable to act as an officer. He wrote: "At the present time, he is totally disabled from this occupation. I cannot state whether he will remain disabled for the remainder of his working life."

In the case of Morello, Cares also questioned the disability, while acknowledging that the woman officer could not function as a police officer.

However, he wrote: "Under no circumstances can a ruptured disc, which is the basis of her claim, be considered a permanent disability. It is well known that the symptoms of ruptured discs are almost always subject to spontaneous remissions. She also did not look like someone who was in either acute or chronic pain."

In a ruling overturning the board's decision, the state appeal board noted that a majority of the medical panel answered the board's three critical questions on the disability in favor of the officer. In addition, the board maintained that the officer did clearly establish "a causal relationship" between the injury and her work.

Police Chief William F. Quinn said injuries and illness are the "major problem" in his department.

"We've had numerous back injuries," Quinn noted. "We've had some pretty young men retire with bad backs and knees."

In the Gayzagian case, the board's physician also was on the minority side, questioning the injury. The state physician and Gayzagian's doctor both confirmed the disability.

Dr. Warren Courville of Newtonville, maintained the examination revealed a man in "no obvious discomfort." He said the injury did not appear to be "significant at present and one would suspect that a trial of unrestricted work activity is possible at present."

Marino said the board frequently has employees re-examined. Under state law, an employee can be re-examined a year after the pension is granted and every three years following.

In regard to the Gayzagian case, Marino said: "I was convinced that the injury occured on the job and he was unable to perform his job." Marino said that he would also recommend that Gayzagian be re-examined as soon as possible.

The board had granted a total of 910 pensions as of Dec. 1980.

The doctors specifically answer whether the applicant: A) is unable to perform his duties B) has a permanent and total disability and C) whether that disability is a result of his job.

In FY 1983 (beginning July 1), the Retirment Board's budget calls for $5,176,649 in benefits to be paid to contributory retirement and $1,348,948 to non contributory retirments for veterans with service prior to 1939. The city board has more than $40 million in assets including investments in utilities and stocks approved by the state Division of Insurance.

Both Angevine and Marino said reforms in state disability laws are needed. Both maintained the alleged abuses surfacing in Boston are not to be found in Newton. In Boston, Mayor Kevin White has ordered the creation of a commission to investigate alleged abuses of disability pensions.

"We have no authority to put a man on light work," said Angevine. A firefighter or police officer can be disabled to perform as a public safety officer, he noted, but may still be able to handle lighter work.

State retirement laws do not provide for a municipal worker injured to step into a position where his disability is not a handicap.

"A man can be disabled to climb a ladder, but he can still work," said Angevine. "I hate to see him disabled because he can't climb a ladder."

Angevine maintained the hypertension and heart disabilities should be uniform for all municipal employees. "The heart law should apply to everyone or no one," he asserted. "I think a lot of these other people have just as much tension as a fire or police officer."

Marino said that additional factors should be taken into consideration under the current laws including age of the individual and the type of injury.

For example he said: "A guy who is 22 and hurts his knee should get something, but he should not get a full pension...There are no recognitions of age or amount of disability." Marino said he is considering drawing up state legislation for disability reforms.

Marino said the city does "owe" an employee injured on the job something. "If someone has a legitimate injury, we owe him something, I am 100 percent in favor of any legitimate accidental disability pension."

Employees receiving disability get 72% of the salary they were receiving on he date of the filing of the accident and an annuity based on deductions, age and an additional $312 yearly for each child under 18. City employees contribute 7% of their annual salary to the contributory retirement program.

Aldermen honor former member Tripp

NEWTON — Aldermen Tuesday night honored former Alderman William V. Tripp Jr., who died recently, with a resolution and a moment of silence.

Mr. Tripp, 81, served from Feb. 19, 1945 to Dec. 31, 1949.

The resolution read in part: "It is deemed fitting and proper that the city of Newton, through his honor the mayor and the Board of Aldermen, mourn the death of William V. Tripp Jr. and respect his memory with pride and gratitude for his service to the city of Newton."

Board okays funds for outside lawyers

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A pair of emergency appropriations for outside legal counsel Monday have prompted Alderman Richard McGrath to call for a docket item creating a committee to oversee the selection of outside attorneys.

McGrath made the request after the Board of Aldermen approved $7,500 in separate appropriations for outside counsel. The board approved the funds by a 19 to 0 vote after both the Finance and the Legislation and Rules Committees voted the funds in recess meetings.

City Solicitor Daniel Funk told aldermen he needed the outside attorney due to a staff shortage and to help fight a $19 million lawsuit facing the Newton Police Department. The law department has been short a full-time attorney since late last year.

Five-thousand dollars will go toward the defense of the police officers involved in the civil rights case and $2,500 will go towards the hiring of outside legal help in defense of Police Chief William F. Quinn in an injury leave dispute.

"If we're going to create a habit of hiring outside counsel, I think we should go the same route as we do for architects," said McGrath. He did not think the item would get much support from the attorneys on the 24-member aldermanic body, but noted the selection review process has worked well for the city in the hiring of outside architects.

"It would protect us from potential abuses," said McGrath. According to the FY 1983 budget booklet, the Law Department spent $113,020 for legal assistance in FY 1982 and expects to expend $43,400 in FY 1983.

Assistant City Solicitor Kathleen Torres, one of eight city attorneys, has handled the civil rights suit since its inception and is scheduled to leave the law department in May. The trial date for the suit is May 10 in Federal District Court.

Funk said the proximity of the trial date, the magnitude of the claim and the inexperience of his staff in the area of civil rights made it "critical that a lawyer be hired with experience in civil rights."

Funk said he would hire attorney Anthony Doniger to handle the defense in the civil rights suit. Doniger is an associate of Edward Barshak's, the Boston attorney working for the city defending Mayor Theodore Mann against a $1.1 million civil rights suit filed by his former secretary, Diana Ossinger.

The civil rights suit filed by Newton firefighter Alfred Mazzola Sr. against Newton Police Officer William Whalen and 13 police officers, a police matron and Police Chief William F. Quinn evolved out of an early Christmas morning skirmish at the police station in 1979.

Police reports say five members of the Mazzola family, including the elder Mazzola, fought with police officers who had arrested his son early Christmas Eve.

In a letter to aldermen, Funk said several members of the Mazzola family were convicted of many of the criminal charges leveled against them as a result of the incident.

In the case against Quinn, Funk noted the city has been placed in a "conflict-of-interest" situation because the police officer, Vincent Dennis, involved in the leave dispute is a defendant in the Mazzola case.

Funk said he would hire Harold Kowal to represent the city's interests in the case. Kowal is the son of the city's labor lawyer, Leon Kowal.

Commercial values mailed

NEWTON - Notices of new commercial assessments and changes in residential assessments were mailed last week by the company conducting revaluation in the city.

Thomas Polzella, project manager for Finnegan Associates of Acton, said Thursday the thousands of notices would be in the mail were to be dropped in the mail that day.

An estimated 2,500 homeowners will receive notices of reduced assessment. An estimated 150 to 200 will receive notices of increased assessment. The remaining 7,000 homeowners appealing their new assessments will receive notices informing them of no change despite their appeal.

Businesses can challenge new commercial notices with informal hearings with Finnegan by calling 552-7023. Businesses must schedule an appointment by April 30. Polzella said hearings should begin Monday.

The estimated tax rate for commercial properties is $36.77 per $1,000 of assessed property. Polzella said the company expects to handle an estimated 200 to 250 appeals by commercial taxpayers.

Many homeowners have criticized the revaluation conducted by Finnegan as unfair and unequitable. A revival of an organization started to stop a revaluation attempt in 1975, "Save Our Homes Two," is mounting a battle to force assessors to reject the revaluation in its present state.

Polzella speculated that oppossition to the project should dissipate as a result of the assessment reductions. "I think there was some good adjustments made that had to be coming," he said. "Some people are going to be pleased."

Polzella said the values the company did not change values they maintain are "realistic" and fair.

Watershed hosts Charles River Day for clean-up May 8

NEWTON - The Charles River Watershed Association is sponsoring a general Charles River Clean-up on Saturday May 8 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

A steering committee of six area chairmen chaired by CRWA Assistant Cynthia Kingsford has been recruiting local coordinators in each of the 23 cities and towns along the 80-mile Charles River. With general guidance from CRWA, these local coordinators are surveying their part of the river to determine how much trash and litter must be removed and how many helpers will be needed to remove it. All of the local coordinators are in need of volunteers who can spend three hours in the general clean-up. Newton volunteers should contact local coordinators, Frank Wright (965-3944) or John Bliss (244-6495).

The May 8 clean-up is the first organized by CRWA since 1977, when the watershed clean-up was abandoned by CRWA in favor of promoting municipal responsibility for the river within town boundaries. The clean-up is in fact the initiation of a year-round Charles River Clean-up Network designed by CRWA to provide an on-going surveillance and maintenance of the river and its banks.

"Official MDC and municipal maintenance of the Charles River is spotty," says CRWA Executive Director Rita Barron," and one of the problems facing an urban river is the public perception that since no one keeps it tidy no one cares about it. The Charles River Clean-up Network is our commitment to caring".

For further details about CRWA's clean-up or other programs, call CRWA at 527-2799 or 965-5975. CRWA's office is at 2391 Commonwealth Avenue in Auburndale.

LIBRARY SEARCH - Chris Bell, library director at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, conducts a library search on her computer for School of Nursing student Paul Barlow.

Chris Bell keeps things at fingertips at N-WH

NEWTON — When physicians at Newton-Wellesley Hospital need help with a difficult clinical problem, they often turn to Chris Bell. And although she's never been to medical school, Chris usually has the answers right at her fingertips – literally.

As director of library services at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, the Newtonville resident uses a computerized data bank called MEDLARS (Medical Literature Analysis and Retrieval System), which is tied into the National Medical Library in Bethesda, Maryland, one of the greatest medical libraries in the world. By means of a telephone-typewriter computer terminal that looks like an ordinary electric typewriter, Bell has access to 18 separate data bases that cover over 50 subjects ranging from chemistry, biology and toxicology to health planning and administration.

Last year she did over 250 computerized literature searches for medical staff, administrators and students. But although MEDLARS is, by far, the most sophisticated service provided by the Paul Talbot Babson Memorial Library at the hospital, it is by no means the only one.

In 1981 close to 27,000 people utilized the resources of the NWH LIbrary: 2,800 books, 275 journals, 5,000 bound journals, 170 audiovisual programs, and 20 talking books from the Perkins Institute for the Blind. Whenever literature is not available at NWH it can usually be borrowed through the formalized inter-library loan system of the Consortium for Information Resources which serves nine area hospitals that belong to the West Suburban Hospital Resource Education Association. A special van transports the publications among the member hospitals.

Assisting library visitors and responding to over 400 telephone calls a month provides a great challenge to Bell and her staff, who augmented their usual activities with a special public awareness program during National Library Week, April 18-24. Bell said the public, and even hospital staff and employees, often don't realize the hospital has a library. People frequently stumble on the library's doorstep accidentally, surprised to learn the library exists and delighted to discover the resources available.

"There is something unique and all-encompassing about the needs our library users have," Bell noted. "We're asked to find information about such a wide range of subjects. Every day brings something different."

She adds that the secret to being a good librarian is knowing where to find the information. "If libraries exist for any reason, it's to expedite the search," she says. "The information can't help you unless you know where to find it." She also says about 30 percent of the information she researches doesn't come out of a book or journal, but rather, from a telephone call or a personal contact.

Indeed, the knowledge and research skills that librarians must have explain why the profession is often called a science. Beyond her academic credentials from the Simmons Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences, Chris Bell also holds an undergraduate degree from Simmons in biology and chemistry. She feels her science background and her three years of experience with the Boston University Alumni Medical Library have provided her with an awareness of the larger clinical picture behind much of her library research.

Bell also believes her role includes marketing the Newton-Wellesley Hospital as an institution committed to both the health care needs and the health information needs of the public. The NWH Library is an integral part of a network of libraries in the community and she welcomes the public to use the hospital's library resources.

Two stores merge; celebration May 1

NEWTON — Sally Johnson, owner of Designer's Armoire in Newton Highlands and Michelle Breneman, owner of Country Oak and Lace in Newton Center, announce the merger of their stores, to be known as Gibson Girls. There will be a day-long celebration of the merger, starting at 11 a.m. on Saturday, May 1, at 49 Union St., Newton Center, marking the transformation of the Country Oak and Lace shop to Gibson Girls. Wine and cheese will be served. The public is cordially invited.

The new Gibson Girls will specialize in fine Victorian clothing, designer orginals, period fashions and head to toe accessories. The store will also offer a custom bridal service.

A BRILLIANT DEDUCTION.

Together, you and your spouse can take up to a $4,000 Federal income tax deduction in 1982 by opening West Newton Savings Bank Individual Retirement Accounts (IRA) right now. That's $2,000 apiece for each working spouse or $2,250 if only one spouse works. If you're self employed, you can take even greater deductions with our Keogh Plan— up to $15,000 worth.

What's more, the healthy interest you'll earn is tax exempt until you withdraw funds after retirement. And of course, your principal and interest are fully insured.

Stop by any West Newton Savings Bank office soon for the complete details. Remember, an IRA or Keogh Plan is more than a smart move for the future. Considering the tax benefits you'll get, it's absolutely brilliant.

Library hosts Susan Belton art works

NEWTON CORNER — "A lot of artists paint the city and a lot paint the country, but I'm painting the 'edges' - the suburbs," explains Susan Jane Belton whose one-woman show of paintings will be on view in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre Street, Newton Corner, May 4 - May 31.

Belton paints the place she lives; its houses, street signs, yards and parking lots, and how she feels. She is intrigued by parking meters, with no cars to time, and by street signs "guiding us through intersections and restricting our time."

"Corners (of streets and house lots) are wonderful places and I have been intrigued for years by shrubs and the way they are used in modern suburban life," says Belton.

At first it was the rhythm of the shrubs that caught her eye. Then she began to see them as symbols used to mark entrances, to guard the boundaries of property, and to serve as sentries.

Belton has ambivalent feelings about the suburbs which she tries to convey in her work. She sees the suburbs as lush and beautiful, but also empty, lonely and desolate. She uses sunlight to emphasize this contrast, for while strong sunlight "makes the landscape sparkle and shine, it also establishes shadows and seems to isolate objects."

A look at any of Belton's paintings, "Corner of Main Street," for example, makes the viewer very aware of her feelings for surfaces and color as well as for contrast. The work is strong, sharp and distinctive. Belton's personal vision commands attention.

Belton, an honors graduate of Colby College, Maine, with a diploma from the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, was awarded a 1981 Massachusetts Artists' Foundation Painting Fellowship.

Her work has been included in shows at the Hayden Gallery at MIT, the Boston University Art Gallery, the Clark Gallery, Lincoln, and the DeCordova Museum. Currently she is affiliated with the Thomas Segal Gallery, Newbury Street, Boston.

Immunizations today

NEWTON — The Newton Health Department is offering a free immunization clinic for pre-school age children. The clinic will be held on Wednesday, April 28, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Newton City Hall (Room 202).

This is the first time a program like this has been available to parents/guardians in Newton and is designed to assist parents/guardians in assuring that their children are protected against diseases such as polio, measles, diphtheria, and tetanus.

Any child who will be starting school in September or who will be attending a nursery school or day-care program is required by state law to have the following immunizations: DPT (diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus), primary series (3 injections), booster at age 18 months; Polio, 3 doses - last dose must be received after two years of age; MMR (measles, mumps, rubella), one dose given after 12 months of age.

Parents/guardians are advised to review their child's immunization record now, rather than waiting until September when their child may have to be excluded from school. Parents/guardians wishing to take advantage of this free service should call the Newton Health Department at 552-7058 for an appointment.

Baseball field will be named for Paul Burke

NEWTON — The Newton Recreation Commission has voted unanimously to name the lighted regulation baseball field at the Albemarle playground, in honor of Paul J. Burke of 161 Randlett Park, West Newton.

The official dedication and ceremony will be held Friday evening, May 7 at 6:30 p.m. at the Albemarle Sports Complex. Mayor Theodore D. Mann and the Honorable Joseph DeNucci will be the key-note speakers. Commissioner of Recreation Russell J. Halloran will be the master of ceremonies. Following these ceremonies, Newton North High and Brookline High Schools will play the seasons first baseball game under the lights.

Burke has been directly and indirectly involved with recreation programs for the youth of the City of Newton for over 35 years. He coached his first basketball team in the Newton Recreation Leagues in 1947, coached St. Bernard's team in the Pony League and Adult Baseball Leagues for 10 years, and also managed St. Bernard's baseball teams in the American Division for five years. He was one of the original founders and organizers of the Newton West Little League, and managed teams for years.

Burke has served on the Newton Recreation Commission for 12 years and was the chairman of the commission for two terms.

He was one of the original founders of the Babe Ruth League, now the International League. Paul Burke's involvement in the Newton Community over the years included six years as the Alderman for the West Newton area, 15 years on the Board of Directors for the Newton Community Service Centers, two of these years as president. For years, he coached semi-pro basketball teams. Six times they won the Waltham Boy's Club Championship.

In addition, he has served on the Billy Hamill Memorial Committee, which annually selects the outstanding high school basketball player in the City of Newton; also the co-chairman for 20 years of the Charles Cosgrove Memorial Scholarship Committee.

He is married to Carolyn (Mitchell) of West Newton. They have three children: Mrs. Christina Robertson of Rhode Island, Thomas J. Burke of Columbus, Ohio, and Stephen P. Burke of West Newton.

The general public is invited to attend this dedication at the Albemarle baseball field.

Highlands shop wins wine license okay

NEWTON — Highlands residents failed last week to prevent issuance of a limited wine and malt beverages license to the crafts and coffee store Limited Editions Inc. on Walnut Street.

After listening to residents, including Police Lt. Charles Feeley, argue the Highlands did not need another liquor serving establishment, the three-member Newton Licencing Board voted unanimously to allow the store to serve wine with food six days a week from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Both the board and proponents of the license, which included a handful of local residents, thought the license would leave the character of the neighborhood and store unaltered.

Jo-Ann Isaacson, president of Limited Editions, said she sought a liquor licence to enhance the store's lunch menu, predominated by quiche.

Wine sales would be limited to the store's eight coffee-bar seats. The board noted that any future owner of the Highlands' business must seek a new wine and malt license.

Feeley and Issacson each presented the Board with petitions from local residents for and against the application.

Several residents directed their frustration with other neighborhood liquor serving establishments and the area traffic problem toward the owner of Limited Editions and her attempt to procure a liquor license.

out of trouble and I help people," Tommy explains.

Tommy's most memorable experience with Chaulk came during the Boston Marathon. As he watched the race with rescuers who were stationed along Commonwealth Avenue, a runner collapsed. Tommy ran to the ambulance to get oxygen for exhausted runner. "It's exciting," says Tommy.

Along with his enthusiasm for ambulance and work, Tommy also enjoys football and baseball. "I'm going to be trying out for a Babe Ruth team," he says.

Tommy is "good friends with the guys" at Chaulk. But he still spends time with his police friends and stresses that "I'm still the Newton police mascot."

Newton Police log

Armed robbery at market

NEWTON — A man wearing a ski mask made off with an estimated $200 from the Chestnut Hill Star Market, 1 Boylston St., Friday evening, according to police.

Police reported a white male, a sheet draped over his left hand, ran up to a counter demanding, "Give me all the money or I'll shoot you." The suspect reportedly threw a pillow case to an employee, who filled it with an undetermined amount of cash, checks, and five lottery tickets.

According to police records, witnesses said the suspect ordered them to lie on the floor. "I'll light you up if you follow me," the suspect reportedly said, before fleeing in a black car down Hammond Street toward Beacon Street.

The suspect was described as 6-3, skinny, with green eyes, dark eyebrows and a big nose, wearing a blue ski mask, gloves, an orange plaid flannel shirt and khaki pants. No firearm was shown.

West Rox man booked

CHESTNUT HILL — A West Roxbury man was arrested Saturday afternoon following a fight at Boston College.

Police said Paul McLaughlin, 17, of 32 Mayfield St., was arrested by campus police at 5:23 p.m. and charged with disorderly conduct. According to Campus Police Lt. Albert Brown, McLaughlin was involved in a fight with two Boston College students in the Lower Campus parking lot outside Edmunds Dorms on St. Thomas Moore Road. Brown said McLaughlin is not a student at the college. Brown also said he did not know why the suspect was on the campus.

Charged with cruelty

NEWTON — A Wellesley man was arrested Saturday evening, charged with cruelty to animals, driving under the influence and failure to give a turn signal. James J. Murphy, 28, of 48 Cedar St. was arraigned Monday in Newton District Court.

At 5:17 p.m. a police officer observed a 1972 Dodge traveling "at a high rate of speed" on Washington Street. The suspect was arrested after making an illegal turn. His car stopped partially on the sidewalk, according to police records.

The arresting police officer observed a kitchen knife with blood and hair on it on the front seat of the motor vehicle. In the rear seat, in a brown paper bag, was a dismembered and decapitated cat carcass.

Police records indicate the suspect was unruly, screaming and yelling, refusing to answer any of the booking questions. While officers were struggling to place the suspect in a cell, he allegedly "lunged forward" and struck his head on the cell block wall. He was transported to Newton Wellesley Hospital where he received five stitches to close the wound.

Funds okay for study of fire station closing

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — After more than two months of haggling with the executive department over the proposed closing of the Manet Road fire station, the Board of Aldermen Monday approved funds for an independent study of the Fire Department and the effects of such a reduction in force.

The city will pay John O'Hagan Associates of New York $12,000 over a 13-day period beginning today to conduct the study. The fee includes $1,200 for traveling expenses for O'Hagan and one associate.

Aldermen voted 12 to 5 for the study after the Aldermanic Public Safety and Finance Committees approved the appropriation before a special meeting of the full board.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly proposed the Chestnut Hill station closing, which will result in the elimination of 12 firefighters at a savings of $293,000, in response to a directive from the executive department that all city departments incur a 4.5-percent budget cut in the second year of Proposition 2½.

O'Hagan, a former New York City fire commissioner, recently conducted a study of the Boston Fire Department. Newton Deputy Mayor James Hickey told aldermen the study will take 180-man hours and should be completed by May 10.

After Reilly proposed the closing in his fiscal year 1983 budget (June 30), aldermen asked Mayor Theodore Mann to initiate funding for an in-depth study on the effects of a station closing. Once Mann submitted a $10,000 funding request for a study, the board of aldermen scoffed at the appropriation calling it "inadequate" and an attempt to "pacify" the 24-member legislative body.

On April 5, aldermen approved a resolution requesting Mann to restore the budget funding necessary to maintain the Manet Road station. Mann noted in his budget presentation to aldermen that any resolution from the board be accompanied by either an acceptable new financial source or a corresponding reduction in another appropriation recommendation.

Aldermen Verne Vance, whose ward 7 is serviced by Manet Road and first proposed the idea of a consultant's study of the Fire Department, said it would bring "an analytical framework and devlopment of criteria for the Manet Road closing and future decisions on public safety cuts."

Alderman Rodney Barker, a harsh critic of the overtime costs incurred by the Fire Department in FY 1982, thought it "was very important for the taxpayers that we (the city) get outside expert advice."

Some aldermen, including Robert Tennant, called the study "unnecessary."

"I cannot see spending $10,000 for a study that is going to turn up facts that you already know," said Tennant.

Alderman Edward Richmond, chairman of Finance, "did not think" the city would "learn anything new" by the study. "I think we are going to come up with facts and figures that are available to us now," he said.

Both Reilly and top officials of the executive department have informed aldermen that the city would maintain the highest insurance rating any city or town could have despite the elimination of a station.

An International Services Report (ISO) conducted in 1977 noted that the city "has an adequate number" of engine and ladder companies. Since the time of the report, the city has cut one engine company from a force of ten and is on the brink of eliminating another to bring the number down to eight engine and three ladder companies.

Reilly said he had "no comment" when asked Monday if he was in favor of the study.

Reilly has maintained all along that the closing would have a "minimal" impact on public safety in the area directly affected by Manet Road. In a letter to aldermen received last night, Reilly promised that the Fire Department would continue to be as efficient as it has been in the past and be able to provide Newton with as good a fire protection service as offered by any other city in the state.

Reilly also noted that the homes in the Chestnut Hill area are "mostly" of high real estate value, are well-maintained, and are built in stone or brick construction which provides good resistance to fire.

Tigers erase six-run deficit for 10-9 victory

If a game can be considered crucial with the season just five games old, then that's what this one was. Tom Rezzuti had told his Newton North Tigers beginning the week that if they wanted to seriously call themselves contenders this year in the Suburban League, then their assignment was simple: Win two out of three or go back to the drawing board.

The week had begun with a crushing 7-6 loss to Waltham Tuesday, after which Rezzuti said, "It won't be easy now, but it has to be done. We have to start beating some of these teams."

Consider the mission accomplished. For the time being, at least, the Tigers are headed in the right direction. They completed the much-needed double Thursday with a bizarre 10-9 triumph over Weymouth North — a team which was picked by some experts as one of 1982's prime darkhorses.

Those who were brave enough to withstand the bone-chilling winds of Thursday — made even worse by an early morning (10:30) start — were treated to a game which featured everything from seven-run innings to solid defense to clutch pitching to, well, you name it. There were plenty of heroes for the Tigers, who in the last two days have suddenly unlocked the mysteries of hitting with men on base. Chris Pachus, Fred Dalicandro and Joe Slamin all had two hits while Glenn LeGault and Rich Marchioni both executed nifty double plays to end potential rallies and Paul Howley and John Corsi kept the Maroons at bay by making key pitches at opportune moments.

What must have Rezzuti especially happy tonight, however, is the manner in which the Tigers came back. Buckling down and rallying in the face of adversity is not something the Tigers have done much of in the past two years, but no one could find fault with their efforts in that department Thursday. The Maroons jumped all over Howley for six runs in the first inning on five hits and two passed balls, but Rezzuti stuck with his senior lefty and the move paid off. The Tigers stormed back with seven of their own in the second and never trailed again.

Slamin started the inning with a walk. After Mike Lockhead struck out Dalicandro — one of the few times he hasn't helped North this year — he walked Howley and Matt Ryan to load the bases. Two runs came in when Bobby Connerney hit a little chopper in front of the plate and Lockhead, hurrying a bit, threw the ball past the first baseman.

Glenn LeGault then bunted Connerney and Ryan along to set runners up at second and third with two gone. The Tigers got a break as Pachus' potential inning-ending grounder to shortstop was booted. Ryan scored the fourth run on that play, and after Rich Marchioni walked, runs five and six crossed home when Corsi's rope to left was dropped for an error.

Corsi advanced to second on the play, and alertly stole third when the Weymouth North pitcher and catcher held a conference on the mound without calling timeout. Slamin capped the inning with an RBI single.

Solid defense helped Howley hang onto the lead. The Tigers ended the fourth and fifth innings with double plays. In the fourth, LeGault started a 6-4-3 DP and in the fifth, Marchioni stabbed a line drive at first and tagged the runner trying to slide back to the base.

The teams traded single runs in the fifth — Newton North's coming via singles by Slamin and Dalicandro, a walk to Howley and an Ryan sacrifice fly.

The Tigers took a 10-7 cushion in the seventh as Dalicandro and Howley singled and Ryan reached first on a catcher-interference call. Connerney brought one run home on a groundout to second and the second scored when Ryan and Howley executed a double-steal.

The Maroons threatened with two in the bottom of the seventh, but Corsi, who had entered the game in the sixth, doused the fire without allowing the tying run to ever reach base.

Newton North (3-2 overall, 2-1 league) visits Quincy Monday at 3:30 p.m.

South in fifth straight win, 13-3

Newton South scored eight runs in the first inning and then relied on the solid four-hit pitching of Mike Pappas to record its fifth straight victory, 13-3, over Bedford in the rain Monday at Bedford.

Pappas struck out five and walked three to earn the win before giving way to Andy Young in the seventh.

The Lions exploded in the first inning off Bedford starter, finisher and loser Eric Eaton. Leadoff batter Steve Mosca reached second when the third baseman fielded his ground ball and threw it high over the first baseman's head. Jay Marcus, who had three hits on the afternoon, then singled him in to make it 1-0.

Mark Nicoletti followed with a single, both runners advanced on a wild pitch, and Evan Kushner walked to load the bases. A single by Pappas and another error by the third baseman on Mark Paglia's grounder accounted for two more runs.

Eddie Murray walked — Eaton issued nine free passes in the game — to force in a run and Ben Adler cracked a single, bringing the score to 5-0.

With Murray on third and Adler on first, the two executed a double-steal, scoring Murray. A fielder's choice by Mosca and another base hit by Marcus completed the wild inning.

Bedford responded with three runs in the bottom of the first, but that would essentially be the end of its rallying. The Lions added one in the fourth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh to polish off the rout.

Newton South blasted 12 hits on the afternoon with Joe Spagnuolo and Adler getting two and Mosca breaking an 0-for-19 slump beginning the season with an infield single in his last trip to the plate.

Now 5-1, the Lions will be at Weston High Wednesday afternoon.

Wilgoren powers North, 11-6

Sophomore Julie Wilgoren sparked an 11-run attack by driving in five runs to power the Newton North softball team to an 11-6 triumph over Quincy Monday in a Suburban League contest at Newton North.

The Presidents grabbed the early advantage with a three-run burst in the second inning. The Tigers started to climb back in the bottom of the second frame with a solo homer from sophomore Mary Reynolds.

Newton North took the lead for good with a five-run fourth inning. Wilgoren slammed a double with the bases loaded to drive in three runs for the big hit of the inning. The Tigers would add to their lead in the fifth inning with four more runs. Wilgoren again had the key hit as she drove in a pair of tallies with a single.

The sophomore thirdbaseman finished her best day of the season with two hits and five RBI's. The win upped Newton North's record to 3-1 and the Tigers will play North Quincy on Wednesday.

Watertown was victimized by a slow start in a 9-2 loss at Melrose. The Red Raiders found themselves trailing, 4-0, after two innings and could never climb back into the game.

The Red Raiders cut the lead to 4-1 when Eileen Lee singled and Diane Day tripled her home. Melrose responded with four runs in its half of the fourth to end any Watertown comeback hopes. Watertown also scored in the fifth inning. Pitcher Carolyn Mason took the loss for Watertown. The loss left the Red Raiders with an 0-5 record.

Tigers 3rd Hawk victim, 7-6

It was a game which satisfied neither coach. Waltham's Al Scafidi was the winner — it seems he always is — but like any good, hard-nosed competitor, he refused to use the scoreboard as his only barometer for success. Newton North's Tom Rezzuti lost, and that alone was reason enough for his frustration.

The final of this early-season showdown between two ancient Suburban League rivals had the Hawks prevailing Tuesday, 7-6, at Howard Ferguson Field, but not before the Tigers forced them to rally from a 6-3 deficit in the final four innings. "I don't know exactly what it is," said Scafidi, "but I can't remember us ever having an easy game against them Newton North. They give us trouble every time."

Waltham's comeback was due partly to its own intenstinal fortitude and partly to Newton North's penchant for gift-wrapping runs. "We did not execute," Rezzuti said succinctly. "We earned our runs but we gave them three runs by messing up relays on plays where we had them dead at the plate."

Rezzuti's frustration is understandable. Two years ago, in his and Scafidi's first season at the helm, he saw Waltham beat him by one run with a two-out, grand slam homer in the top of the seventh. Last year, the Hawks prevailed, 2-1, in 10 innings. One-run losses are becoming all too common for Rezzuti. "We've had the same problem for three years," he says. "We just don't make the clutch plays. Waltham's behind by three runs and they rally. We don't."

The Hawks, now 3-0, won the game with two in the fourth and one each in the fifth and sixth innings. Darren Marcou knocked in the winner with a double, scoring Jim Walsh. But the Tigers had their chances to tie it. They loaded the bases off lefthanded reliever Dan Perkins in the bottom of the sixth and had a 3-2 count on Bill Jordan with two outs. Perkins reared back and fired his best "beat me" fastball and although it was out of the strike zone, Jordan went for it and missed.

Perkins thus got the win after taking over for Scott LaForest in the fourth. LaForest experienced control problems for the second straight outing, walking five in 3⅓ innings. "Our pitching has to improve," said an unhappy Scafidi. "We can't expect to keep coming back every time. I know it sounds crazy, but we're 3-0 and I'm not pleased at all."

But Scafidi found no fault with Perkins' effort. "Danny went right at them," said Al. "He didn't play around at the corners, he just challenged them with his fastball and kept them off-balance with the curve."

The Hawks jumped out to a 3-0 first inning lead against Newton starter John Corsi on three hits and a walk. Corsi began the game badly by walking Jim Walsh and then surrendering a single to Marcou. Scott LaForest followed with a two-run double and brother Steve cracked an RBI single to cap the frame.

But the Tigers responded with two of their own in the first. LaForest walked Rich Marchioni and then watched him trot around to third on a pair of passed balls. He scored via Corsi's double. Catcher Joe Slamin ("Give him some credit. He had a strong game" — Rezzuti) followed with a single to score Corsi.

A four-run third which featured three costly walks gave the Tigers a 6-3 cushion. LaForest began the inning by walking Marchioni, but Catcher Bob Fisher gunned him down attempting to steal second. Slamin doubled, however, and Jordan and Matt Ryan walked to load the bases. Three consecutive singles by Paul Howley, Fred Dalicandro and Glenn LeGault brought in the four runs.

"Waltham is probably a better team at this point that we are," said Rezzuti, "but we had the lead. You have to learn to keep those."

They didn't. Two runs in the fourth on a Steve LaForest single, a Fisher double, a Charlie Pulselli sacrifice fly and a Walsh RBI single chopped the deficit to 6-5.

The Hawks tied it in the fifth on another sacrifice fly. Jim Danielson doubled beginning the inning, and after he moved to third when Shortstop LeGault mishandled Larry Scafidi's grounder for an error, Steve LaForest scored him.

"We beat ourselves. We failed to make the routine plays," Rezzuti said.

Both coaches were unhappy with the home plate umpire. Scafidi said he thought both pitchers were being "squeezed a little" on strikes while Rezzuti was more obvious. "The umpire ruined the game for both teams," he said. "There was no consistency in his calls."

The Tigers, 1-2, are back in action today when they travel to Brookline while Waltham also goes on the road to Weymouth South. Both contests begin at 10:30 a.m. The Hawks come home Thursday to meet North Quincy in another early morning 10:30 start.

The summary:

McCoy to enter Northeastern Hall of Fame

Al McCoy of LaJolla, Calif. is 83 going on 25.

Just six months ago, he dropped an eight iron shot in the cup on the 108-yard third hole at Torrey Pines; on the fly, no less.

McCoy regularly tours southern California's local layouts in 90 odd passes, and has two aces in his cap within the last two years.

Members of his foursome, LoJollan's Harold "Ozzie" Osborne, Tom Scott, whose son once replaced divots on the moon as a NASA astronaut, and Jack Winans, play a respectable round of golf, too.

But try as they may, they'll never beat McCoy for a story, or to a story for that matter.

Thursday night, McCoy returns to his native Bay State of Massachusetts, where, as a precocious scholastic athlete at Newton High School, his legacy began.

That evening, at Lantanas Restaurant in nearby Randolph, McCoy will be inducted into the Northeastern University Hall of Fame and greeted by many of his former proteges, each of whom will swear that there will never be another coach quite like him.

McCoy, an incredible athlete in his day, made his mark at Northeastern as coach and teacher at the Boston-based university renowned as the world leader in cooperative education.

He was Northeastern's own collegiate version of George Halas, a papa bear among college mentors of his era.

He founded the varsity football program on a dime and a song in 1933 and brought it to lofty heights with a competitive, New England schedule. When McCoy wasn't coaching football, he was either teaching English, or coaching baseball and basketball, on the Huntington Avenue campus.

"I had a few good years," understated McCoy, "but the type of kid I was dealing with at Northeastern was a special type of athlete in my book."

McCoy had a pretty good season in 1934. His football team was 6-1-1, while his basketball team went 10-3, and the baseball team turned a 12-2 year, the best ever in Northeastern baseball history.

Through eight years of coaching at Northeastern, from 1929 to 1937, McCoy's football team, his first love as a coach, had two outstanding seasons, 6-1-1 in 1934 and 5-0-3 in 1935.

Some 30 years later, at an age most people retire, McCoy labored at writing sports and football on the opposite coast for the San Diego Union. From 1964 to 1974 he wrote about athletes and their fraternity, of which he was such an intriguing member as a collegian in the 1920's.

A native of Newton Centre, one of the 13 neighborhoods of the City of Newton, McCoy was an outstanding football player under coach Allie Dickinson at Newton High School and consequently at Dean Academy.

He played college football for some of the great names in the college game, and in the process gained recognition as the nomadic star of Eastern college football.

In chronological order, McCoy excelled on the gridiron under Cleo O'Donnell at Holy Cross and Hugo Bexdek at Penn State, before completing his illustrious college football trilogy at Lafayette.

The 1922 Littany Lion team, paced by McCoy at both offensive and defensive end, enjoyed a banner season and lost to USC, 14-3, in the 1923 Rose Bowl, the first played in the present Rose Bowl. "Playing left end on both defense and offense was a thrill to put it mildly," said McCoy.

After graduating from Lafayette in 1927, he spent one year teaching at Hackettstown High School in New Jersey before starting his memorable career at Northeastern.

His boyhood goal, to become an athlete and a teacher, surfaced as a reality at Northeastern, where he taught a full load of hours as an English instructor and wrote for the popular magazine, The Open Road for Boys.

After coaching stops at Colby, Harvard, Washington, where he recurited Washington phenom Hugh McElhinney (National Football Hall of Fame inductee this year), and the professional Boston Yanks, before returning to the West Coast. There he would commit himself to the quill at the San Diego Union and later on, par golf at LaJolla Country Club.

"Now," added McCoy, "I am actively pursuing the game of golf."

May the birdies sing to Al McCoy.

North lacrosse evens its record at 3-3

The Newton North lacrosse team evened its record at 3-3 Monday with a convincing 12-3 rout over rival Waltham High at Newton.

"We finally started to play better today," said Tiger coach Rick Clark, who has been concerned with his club's slow start. "We passed the ball around nicely and made things happen. You could see some of the old confidence returning."

Ken Healey and Ed McCarthy led the romp with three goals apiece while John Callahan chipped in a pair.

The Tigers were in control almost from the start. They outshot Waltham, 18-7, in the first quarter, but the Hawks made the most of their opportunities and came away deadlocked, 2-2.

Healey had given North the lead just 12 seconds into the game, but Dave LeBlanc responded for the Hawks nine minutes later. McCarthy and Waltham's Tom Roche traded goals to complete the stanza.

But the Tigers broke away in the second period, scoring five unanswered goals. Healey began the barrage at 6:10 when he took a backdoor feed from Harry Martens and slipped the ball home.

Mark Sampson dodged his man and passed the ball to Healey for a goal at 7:19 as Newton North took command at 4-2.

McCarthy made it 5-2 at 8:39 and then Callahan got the first of his two markers at 9:44 with a nifty dodge. He quickly added the second score less than a minute later when Martens fed him the puck cutting across the middle and Callahan knocked it in.

"We took our time today and looked for the open man," said Clark. "We allowed the plays to develop."

Rosenson scores 3 but South stickmen lose

Even three goals by John Rosenson couldn't help the Newton South Lions as they dropped their sixth straight in lacrosse, 9-7, to Brookline High at Brookline Friday.

"We've lost six games by a total of 10 goals," said Lion coach Paul Murphy after the game. "We're losing every game by a goal or two and we're always in the thick of it."

And in the thick of it they were. Trailing by one goal in the final period, Newton South almost won it. But with 11:37 left to play, Brookline High wisked a shot past goalie Abe Brass to add an insurance goal.

Lion Ken Kohlberg had a good day on the field, scoring a goal and aiding with two assists. Teammate John Rosenson lead the Newton South offense with three goals.

The Lions' record now stands at a disappointing 0-6. They'll take the field again on Thursday at Winchester High.

Score by periods:

Brookline	1314--9
Newton South	1132--7

'I Remember Mama' is Country Players' show

NEWTON HIGHLANDS — What's better than just remembering Mothers' Day? Why, remembering Mama herself, of course. and this weekend, the Newton Country Players will oblige with their production of the theater classic, "I Remember Mama," to help everyone remember.

This successful play by John van Druten saw a long run on Broadway, was filmed with Irene Dunne in the title role, and formed the basis for the long-continuing TV series, "Mama" starring Peggy Wood. The Players' production, to be staged April 30, May 1, 7, and 8, at 8 p.m. at the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 54 Lincoln Street, will be directed by NCP veteran Liz Bruce of Waltham. In the title role is Mary B. Rabkin of Framingham who brings to this production a wealth of theater experience.

Telling a story of the struggles to make ends meet of a pair of Norwegian immigrants in San Francisco, and their children, in the early years of this century, "I Remember Mama" is an endearing recollection by one of the children - a sensitive daughter - of the kind of griefs and gratifications experienced by many average American families.

There is the one son, who wants to become a doctor. There is Katrin, the sensitive daughter, yearning for the trifling luxuries her more affluent schoolmates enjoy. There is Christine, the responsible, cool, matter-of-fact daughter. And there is Dagmar, the youngest Hanson, only a little bit spoiled.

And then there are the aunts of these youngsters, constantly swooping down upon them with kindly advice, but too much of it, and an uncle who terrifies everyone with his gruffness.

Tickets are $5.50, $4.50 for senior citizens and students. For more information or reservations, call 244-9538.

Enrichment series will address topic of nutrition May 3-7

NEWTON CENTRE - The Enrichment Program will host a series on nutrition at Newton South High School the week of May 3 through 7. This program has been arranged in response to student interest and request.

An increasing recognition has been given to the role of proper diet in maintaining good health and the "how to" of maintaining a healthy diet will be explained by various authorities in the field during the program.

Different points of view will be presented to enable students and faculty to make food choices based on knowledge and individual needs. Many questions will be answered about nutritional deficiencies, food supplements and vitamins and how they relate to lifestyles.

A common sense approach to health and diet will help everyone in taking an active role in promoting better health.

The program will include: A talk on "debunking the myths of nutrition" by Michael Zackin, Tufts University Graduate School of Nutrition, on Tuesday, May 3 from 11:55 to 12:45.

Dr. Lawrence Selter will discuss "eating disorders" on Wednesday, May 4 from 10:05 to 10:55 a.m. Dr. Selter is on the staff of the Severe Eating Disorders Clinic of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Also on Wednesday from 11 to 11:50 a.m. nutritional coordinator of Bread and Circus Co. Chris Kilham will discuss vitamins and food supplements. Kilham is author of "The Complete Shopper's Guide to Natural Foods."

Dr. Ann Wigmore of the Hippocrates Health Institute in Boston will discuss different lifestyles on Friday, May 6 from 10:05 to 10:55 a.m.

The public is invited to attend.

Rev. Graham asks all at BC to pray for peace

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

CHESTNUT HILL — In a plea for "negotiations to eliminate all weapons of mass destruction," Rev. Billy Graham Thursday urged approximately 600 Boston College students to "pray" for peace.

In a 60-minute speech at the Robert's Center, the renowned leader of the evangelical Christianity movement called for "go for broke negotiations" to eliminate nuclear weapons.

"Why not have religious talks about a subject as important as the safety of the human race?" asked Graham.

"I believe it's not probable, but it's possible," Graham said of global negotiations for nuclear disarmament. The Southern Baptist minister said "praying for peace is more than any of us" not in positions of power can do to save humanity from "a nuclear holocaust."

Citing the importance of educating people that "our technology can bring us to the point of destruction," Graham said he was "delighted" to see the awareness generated by "Ground Zero" week - a nationwide movement this week to publicize the consequences of nuclear war.

Graham, 63, has brought his evangelical crusades to every state and more than 50 countries including recent visits to Hungary and Poland. He is scheduled to participate in a Moscow world peace conference on May 11.

The engagement at the jesuit college was part of a whirlwind New England tour that will end with an eight day crusade May 30 through June 6 at Boston University.

Graham said the world may be on the brink of "Armegeddon." Noting that it took 10 years to get a SALT agreement with the Soviet Union, he said time may be running out for a peaceful end to the arms race with the superpower.

Graham said students should take the "first step" in the peace movement by coming to peace with God.

He said: "In all this talk of peace, let's not leave out the first step - spiritual peace. The greatest thing you could possibly contribute is your own personal peace with God...First and foremost you belong to Christ."

The charismatic minister urged the students to make a "lifetime and committment to Christ." He said part of the service to Christ "would be to work and pray for peace."

Graham, who read a letter from a student that has contemplated suicide, said many college students "lack commitment."

"Is Jesus Christ the way out?" he asked rhetorically. "That is an option you ought to consider."

"What we need is a personal reconciliation with God," Graham said. He told the crowd to turn to the bible as a "reference point for peace."

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Tuning up the pool for summer

With warm weather on its way, the time is right to tune up your swimming pool so you can enjoy it during those hot summer days. Here's a six-step program from Popular Mechanics magazine to help you do it:

1. Begin by cleaning the pool walls and surrounding apron and then fill the pool with water. The recommended level for most pools is the middle of the skimmer — the built-in device that traps surface debris.

2. Check the pump, filter and circulating system. Refer to the owner's manual for reinstalling parts removed for winter storage. Make sure mechanical components are clean and in proper working order.

To reinstall the pump motor, first turn off the power at the pump control panel. Replace the gasket between the pump's tank and seal plate if it's damaged. Reinstall the drain plugs and check the pump shaft for free movement. With power on, prime the pump following instructions in your owner's manual.

3. Next, measure and adjust the pH level. (This figure is an indication of the acidity or alkalinity of the water, and unless it is within a certain range the chlorine disinfectant in the water will not kill the bacteria it is supposed to). Obtain a test kit from your pool supplier and follow the directions on the box.

If the pH is too low, chlorine dissipates rapidly, pipes and fittings can become corroded, plaster can become etched and swimmers can get irritating eye burn. To correct the problem, add a pH plus chemical.

If the pH is too high, scale forms, pool water turns cloudy and swimmers get eye burn just as they do when the pH is too low. Correct it by adding a pH minus chemical.

4. After you've adjusted the pH level, adjusting total alkalinity helps keep the pH in the proper range. The three main alkaline chemicals — carbonate, bicarbonate and hydroxide — dissolved in the water in proper proportion act as a buffer preventing pH change.

Also, use a kit to test for total alkalinity. Test it weekly and maintain it between 80 and 150 parts per million (ppm, the standard measure of concentration in swimming pools). Your pool-supply dealer can provide formulations needed to correct i.

5. Next, superchlorinate the water. This means applying 5 to 10 times the regular daily dose of chlorine to water.

The two primary reasons for adding chlorine are 1) to disinfect — kill waterborne organisms and algae; 2) to oxidate — burn out undesirable solids, colors and odors. While all pools must be superchlorinated from time to time, it is definitely needed when opening your pool for the season.

Before you superchlorinate, determine the capacity of your pool in gallons; then determine the needed dosage of superchlorinator following directions on the package. Wait until the residual chlorine is at the recommended level of 1.0 to 1.5 ppm according to the test kit before adding the extra dosage.

There are several types of chlorinating products on the market. Among them are liquid chlorine and calcium hypochlorite, which tend to lose effectiveness after a few hours due to the action of sunlight. However, chlorine concentrates in tablets or granular form contain a built-in stabilizer that resists chlorine decay induced by sunlight.

6. The final step in getting your pool ready is to stabilize or condition the water. This process minimizes the loss of chlorine due to ultraviolet sunrays. It also makes sure that the chlorine disenfectant will keep working around the clock.

To complete this step, you'll need a test kit and a conditioner chemical. Results from the kit will tell you how much conditioner you should apply. Each time you refill the pool, you should also stabilize the water.

To make pool maintenance somewhat easier, computer systems that can identify potential problems in the pool water are available. The water can be tested before the pool is filled, after it is filled or during the season.

Basically, a water sample is run through tests to analyze and balance it. The results, along with the information about the specific pool, are programmed into a computer that completes a data sheet telling what chemicals are needed and in what order and quantity to apply them to maintain your pool water safely.

The service is available at pool dealers. However, it doesn't take the place of careful monitoring by pool owners. Before you purchase a large amount of chemicals based on the results of such a test, it pays to satisfy yourself that the chemicals are needed.

Choosing painting tools

What are the pros and cons of paint tools other than a roller or paint brush? To find out, Consumer Reports' chemists tested painting equipment and included some tools that you might be tempted to use to make the job go faster.

One such tool is a cross between a brush and a roller: a flat paint applicator called a pad. The 7-inch-wide pads CR tested are about twice as fast as a 4-inch-brush, but slower than a 7-inch roller.

You can use them to paint corners and the bottom edges of clapboard siding. With guides, they can help you achieve a straighter, cleaner edge than you could with a brush.

But you need skill to apply paint evenly with a pad without leaving noticeable edge and fiber marks in the finish. Pads tend to drip more than brushes and rollers do, especially when you are painting ceilings. And they don't do the job on slightly contoured surfaces, such as window moldings.

When using a pad, you'll need a tray. Although roller trays are commonly used, you're apt to get too much paint on the pad — and too much dripping. The newer pad trays on the market supposedly correct this.

With some, excess paint is removed by scraping the pad along one edge of the paint tray — a procedure that proved ineffective in CR's tests. Some trays have a built-in roller that rests in the paint. Instead of dipping the pad, you roll it back and forth on the roller. That design worked for some of CR's testers, not for others.

When buying a pad, an important feature to check is the ease of replacement. These devices aren't particularly long-wearing, and you'll probably have to put in a new one at least once during a major paint project.

Spraying is a good method for painting intricate objects (wicker furniture) or large, flat areas (house siding).

In the hands of an expert, a spray gun can produce the ultimate paint job — and in just a fraction of the time other paint tools would require. But before you rush out and buy one, consider whether the types of jobs you're likely to do merit the $150 investment this tool requires — and really professional equipment costs even more.

Mastering a spray gun is difficult, and if you don't know how to use one, it's not your best bet. A spray gun can deposit too much paint, which results in sags and runs, or too little paint, which results in a streaked, tiger-stripe effect.

Another difficulty with spraying is the necessity of masking off all areas that you don't intend to paint. On a small job, you'll spend more time taping than you'll save spraying. Cleaning spray equipment is a messy chore. Keep in mind, too, that most paint is too thick for spraying, so you'll have to dilute it with a thinner or water.

Letters

Text of letter by DA Droney

To the editor;

(The following is the text of a letter sent to The Graphic and School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann in response to a complaint filed by The Newton Graphic to Middlesex County District Attorney John Droney - Ed)

Dear Chairman Mann;

District Attorney John J. Droney has received a complaint from the editor of The Newton Graphic alleging a violation of the Open Meeting Law by the Newton School Committee on April 15, 1982. At that time it is alleged that the Committee divided into two groups of four for purposes of discussion leading to a resolution of a stalemate in voting for a new superintendent. It is further alleged that you, as chairman, specifically stated that the reason for the committee division was to avoid the application of the Open Meeting Law.

If these allegations are true, the committee clearly violated the law. The division into groups of four was a sham aimed at avoiding the application of the law, in a situation where it would clearly apply, by attempting to misuse the quorum requirements of the Open Meeting Law. Such a ploy cannot successfully avoid the application of the law. It is further alleged that there was a "shuffling" of the composition of the groups during the period of their meeting. Assuming the truth of this allegation, there was, in fact, a constructive quorum of the committee.

The fairly uncomplicated and apparent legislative intent behind the Open Meeting Law is to assure that the public have access to the decision-making functions of their elected representatives. If the public was excluded from any part of the deliberations which lead to the committee's selection of a new superintendent, then the Open Meeting Law has been violated and the legal validity of that selection is in question.

Kindly respond to these allegations immediately so that the District Attorney can decide how best to proceed to remedy any harm done to the public.

Sincerely,
John J. Droney
District Attorney
(Signed by Assistant District Attorney Carol S. Ball)

We want to hear from you

We goofed on reval letter

To the editor;

Thank you for printing my letter on revaluation. Unfortunately the first section of the letter was garbled by the omission of several lines.

I would like to clarify my original point. I was objecting to Robert Finnegan's repeated public statements that only a miniscule fraction of the taxpayers who applied for hearings presented "proof" that their values were more than 10% wrong. He also claimed that a large percentage of the people who asked for hearings were just curious about how their values were derived.

The reasons I object to both of these statements were given in my previous letter (Newton Graphic, April 21, page 5 - Ed). It would be nice if the whole revaluation issue were made moot by the correction of the preliminary revaluations to such an extent that all citizens are convinced that their values are fair and accurate.

I wish I could believe that this point will be reached soon.

Post 440 sends parade regrets

To the editor;

(The following is an open letter to the City of Newton Memorial Day Committee)

As commander of Nonantum Post 440 American Legion and pursuant to a vote taken at our meeting of April 20, 1982, I am empowered to state that as of this time Post 440 has chosen to conduct its own Memorial Day Observance. We will not be a part of the city of Newton's Memorial Day Observance or the Nonantum Christmas Party Association's Memorial Day Observance.

If the City of Newton's Memorial Day Committee and the Nonantum Christmas Party Association can come to some arrangement for a joint observance of Memorial Day, we should be very happy to reconsider our current decision to abstain from both currently planned Memorial Day Observances.

Post 440, throughout history has exhibited a strong commitment to the city of Newton and its community organizations and so it is with an overwhelming sense of remorse that I annoucnce this decision to go our own way.

We still maintain hope that this current impasse will be resolved so that all of Newton can come together to pay proper respect to our departed comrades in a fitting observance of this and future Memorial Days.

Commander, Nonantum Post 440

We must 'work for peace'

To the editor;

After viewing ABC's Nightline (April 22, 11:30 p.m.) the phrase that sticks with me is that of Franz Strauss: Freedom without peace.

That's how we Americans live - we advocate and nationalize our freedoms in this democracy. And yet we are in no way at peace. Are you at peace? I'm not. Every time I hear a large boom I wonder how many minutes are left. Will I see my children before they die? Die a hideous death that is not my choice.

My only reward in life, as I work on a personal level for nuclear disarmament, will be to know that my children, and yours, can grow up to have their own children, and live in freedom from these daily fears of nuclear horror.

We can only have freedom if we all work for peace. And peace will only come through mutual nuclear disarmament.

Reader observes UFO

To the editor;

We now have a startling U.F.O. in working order in the Garden City.

This vehicle, properly described as a User Fee Outrage, was designed and launched in the Aldermanic Chamber Laboratory at 1000 Commonwealth Avenue by our elected political scientist.

The purpose of this new prototype device is to bombard the taxpayers of the city and hold them hostage through crushing taxes. This first U.F.O. is known as the sewer OUTrage and is based on the psuedo-scientific alderman jargon, "water in, water out, the tax lets water move about". The citizens of Finneganized Newton are mobilizing and will not tolerate the U.F.O. - User Fee Outrage.

The Board of Aldermen has other hidden sources of revenue funds. To mention one, consider that of Newton's most closely guarded closet secret, the crushing cost of school vandalism which was exposed by the local media five years ago as 500,000 dollars a year.

Imagine a school system without ripped-off toilet doors and seats, raging graffitti not accepted as an extra-curricular course and no multi-million dollar arson.

Newton taxpayers demand "on the level" funding!

Final vote unanimous

struction for the Shaker Heights, Ohio, schools, was chosen in a 3-2 vote for the Lexington superintendent's job. But, prior to Monday's meeting, Clark had not yet accepted the offer and was still interested in the Newton job.

With tempers erupting several times from both sides during the meeting, Mann said, after indicating she would vote for her "second choice," that the reason for the ill feelings was that she and other Clark supporters sensed "an unwillingness to engage in real debate" by Strand supporters on the committee.

"I will go with my second choice. There are three people here who had no second choice," Ward 4 representative Susan Silbey said bitterly referring to some members who supported Strand.

"After three weeks of many unsubstantiated arguments, many misquotes of Dr. Clark, and from our discussion tonight, it is very, very obvious that no one is going to change," Ward 1 committee member Gentile said in changing his vote.

Earlier during the meeting, a motion was made by Leonard Gentile for Clark, a black assistant superintendent of instruction for the Shaker Heights, Ohio, schools, which received the anticipated four votes from Gentile, Katherine Jones, Susan Silbey and Nancy Mann. Ward 5-8 Committee members Marcia Mitchell, Ann Berwick, James Mnooking and Robert Ricles stayed firm Strand supporters.

With Mayor Theodore Mann noticeably absent from the meeting all night, the six votes required to appoint a superintendent needed to come from the committee members themselves. The mayor, an ex-officio member of the committee, had said previously that he would vote to appoint whoever of the two finalists garnered at least five votes.

The School Committee will enter into contract negotiations with Strand this week. Chairperson Nancy Mann said, "(Strand) led me to believe that he understands our fiscal constraints in Massachusetts and is not necessarily looking for a raise in (his current) salary.

Newton Kiwanis hosts Dick Albert

CHESTNUT HILL — WCVB-TV's meterologist Dick Albert will be the center of attraction at the forthcoming annual roast of the Newton Kiwanis Club, Wednesday, May 12. The luncheon affair will be held at one of the weekly meetings of Newton Kiwanis at Valle's in Chestnut Hill. This meeting will be open to the public.

The Kiwanis Roast Committee consists of Robert L. Tennant, Edward McCallum, Fred Fogg, and James Bergantino. Tickets may be obtained from the committee or any Newton Kiwanis member.

Born in Newton, and now a Waban resident, Albert received both a bachelor's and a master's degree from the University of Michigan.

Feminist urges all: 'take another look' a very controversial and threatening subject that makes us all think about our lives."

"A lot of people think feminism means co-ed bathrooms," the 41-year-old musician said with a laugh. "And often, women are even more threatened by the term than men."

But the point for both men and women, Lynne says, is that women should realize this era should bring them more choices - to choose a career; or to be a mother; or to have both a career and raise children; to live alone or to be married.

"Shall I move every time my husband's job changes?" she asks. "Or should he move for me when my job changes?"

"Whenever you start making changes it's very threatening to everybody," she added. "I personally don't want to run away from the fear these changes and challenges represent."

Twenty years ago, as a back-up singer on television and as a singer for television commercials, Lynne said she never dreamed she'd be taking a feminist message to the suburbs. At the time, she also performed in cocktail lounges and eventually began giving guitar lessons.

As time went on Lynne said she noticed how "shy and afraid" most of her female students were.

And she started to look at herself differently. After joining a consciousness raising group in the early 1970s, and teaching guitar at the Everywomans Bookstore in San Rafael, Calif., Lynne said she was "on her way to producing" "Nobody's Lady But My Own."

At the bookstore she met Pat Bond, a long-time feminist and producer and performer of a one-woman show called "Gertie, Gertie, Gertie, Stein, Stein, Stein" which aired recently on PBS.

"I used to play guitar and sing as a warm-up act for some of Pat's shows," Lynne recalls. "Then we started coaching each other. When you perform feminist material, you must have a feminist coach to help you make sure that the ideas you want to present are clear to the audience."

The result has been "Nobody's Lady", which Lynne presented recently at the New England School of Law in Boston.

Of her approach to feminism through music she says, "Music carries feelings in a way that speeches never will."

In the show, she says, she tries to present, without judgement, as many points of view on feminism as she can. One sketch in the show, which has won backing from the National Organization for Women, is entitled "Will the real feminist please stand up."

And, as a "real feminist," standing up before diverse crowds of people who, in many cases, have never heard such a rational presentation of feminist ideas, she says the one-woman show "is becoming a different kind of vehicle now.

'Whenever you start making changes it's very threatening to everybody. I personally don't want to run away from the fear these changes and challenges represent.'

"It's becoming a popular and intimate way of doing something and of interacting with an audience."

"I'm not trying to take this show to Broadway," she says with a laugh. "I'm trying to take it to the communities."

Asked what she hopes her audiences to get from her performance, Lynne stops to think.

"I would like male business executives to think about the distribution of power in companies between men and women," she says. "And for them to be more sensitive to the discrimination that is still happening. I'm not coming out to say 'you creep, how can you allow this', but it's time people began to realize how they are used to thinking only of men that role of boss."

"I want women who see my show to realize they have choices, they can have a career of their own or a family or both," she says. "And I would like people who are against feminism to take another look."

License temporarily lifted at 2 liquor businesses

NEWTON — The Licensing Board last week handed down two liquor license suspensions involving liquor sales to minors. The punitive actions come in the wake of a public outcry against alcohol abuse.

Unanimously, the three-member board voted to suspend the liquor license of Patch's Backyard Inc. in Newton Centre on Monday, April 26 for serving two minors on March 17, St. Patrick's Day.

The board also suspended the liquor licence of the West Newton Boston I Store on River Street for selling alcohol to two minors Saturday, March 27. The store was banned from selling liquor for three days starting last Monday (April 26).

"We have to be sure that to the best of our ability we're enforcing the law," stated Commissioner Martina Jackson. "Our concern is that we just don't want young people drinking and driving.

"It represents a potential loss of life," noted Jackson in reference to the weekend accident in Newton which cliamed the loss of a 17-year-old. "We have that responsibility."

Owners of both businesses were advised future violations would trigger stiffer penalties. The violations were the first for each business.

According to liquor license officer Det. William Whalen, both licensees sold alcohol to minors without demanding proper identification.
